Few people here know that you can cure that dread American disease, rheumatism, with just common every day drugs found in any drug store. The prescription is so simple that anyone can prepare it at home at small cost. It is made up as follows: Get from any good prescription pharmacy Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, makng an absolutey harmless home remedy at little cost.

Rheumatism, as everyone knows, is a symptom of deranged kidneys. It is a condition produced by the failure of the kidneys to properly filter or strain from the blood the uric acid and other matter, which, if not eradicated, either in the urine or through the skin pores, remains in the blood, decomposes and forms about the joints and muscles, causing the untold suffering and the deformity of rheumatism.

This prescription is said to be a splendid healing, cleansing and invigorating tonic to the kidneys, and gives almost immediate relief in all forms of bladder and urinary troubles and backache.

MAY CLOSE SALOONS

Federal Authorities After People Who Sell to Indians on or Near Reservation.

The Minneapolis Journal says that the federal government is going to close up saloons in a large section of Northern Minnesota, including not only the present reservations, but a zone outside from which it is now possible for the liquor trade to reach the Indians. The Indian department has this authority under the provisions of the original Indian treaties ceding the land to the whites. These provide that the federal laws prohibiting the introduction and sale of liquors in the Indian country should continue to apply to the ceded territory, unless otherwise ordered by congress.

Technically it is possible for the federal authorities to close saloons in nearly all of Minnesota, including Minneapolis and Duluth. The power is only to be exercised, however, to stop the sale of liquor to the Indians. The law enforcement division of the Indian department, created last July, is preparing to enforce the treaty provisions in the present Indian country, and hnudreds of saloons in the counties of Cass, Beltrami, Clearwater, Becker and Mahnomen will be compelled to close.

F. W. Zollman, of St. Paul, attorney for some of the leading Minnesota brewers, has been in Washington several times to confer with F. E. Leupp of the Indian department, and with the head of the law enforcement division, to agree on the limits of the dry zone. The terms of this agreement are not yet known, but the zone will extend over considerable territory outside the actual reservation.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

WORK WEAKENS KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service for People Who Work in Red Lake Falls.

Most Red Lake Falls people work every day in some strained, unnatural position—bending constatnly over a desk—riding on jolting wagons or cars—doing laborious housework; lifting reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All the strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs.

Noel Herbert of 338 Hunter St., Crookston, Minn., says: "My back pained terribly and totally unfitted me for any exertion. There were times when I had to be helped up and although during the past winter I felt somewhat better, I was still far from being well. I heard about Doan's Pills and finally procured a box. I started using them and it was not long before I noticed that my back was gradually getting better. I am glad to state that the old trouble entirely left me and I have not felt a vestige of it since. I give them the endorsement with the hope that others may be convinced of the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills.

The above statement was made by Mr. Hebert in 1898, nearly six years later he added: "Doan's Kidney Pills so completely relieved me of kidney trouble six years ago that there had been no return of it. It is a pleasure to again endorse this remedy."

Plenty more proof like this from Red Lake Falls' people. Call at W. A. Schreiter's drug store and ask what customers say.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

Every case of Rheumatism has its origin and its development in the blood. It is not a disease which is contracted like a cold, but it is in the blood and system before a pain is felt, and the changes in the weather or any physical irregularities, such as a spell of indigestion, bowel disturbance, etc., are merely the exciting causes producing the pains and aches, which are the natural symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid and other corrosive, irritating poisons in the blood, which are carried through the circulation to every part of the system. Every muscle, nerve, membrane, tissue and joint becomes saturated with these acrid, irritating impurities, or coated with fine, insoluble caustic matter, and the sharp, piercing pains or the dull, constant aches are felt with every physical movement. When the blood is filled with uric acid poison, permanent relief cannot be expected from liniments, plasters, or other external treatment. Such measures give temporary relief, but in order to conquer Rheumatism and bring about a complete cure, the uric acid and other inflammatory matter must be expelled, and this cannot be done with external treatment. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism because it is a perfect and entirely vegetable blood purifier. It goes down into the circulation, neutralizes the acids, and dissolves the irritating deposits which are pressing on the sensitive nerves and tissues and producing pain, enriches the weak, sour blood, and removes every atom of impurity from the circulation. So instead of being a weak, sour stream, distributing uric acid to the different parts of the system, the blood is strong and healthy and therefore able to supply every muscle, nerve, bone and tissue with nourishment and strength. Then the inflammation and swelling subside, the pains and aches cease, and not only is Rheumatism permanently cured, but under the fine tonic effects of S. S. S. the entire general health is benefitted and built up. In all forms of Rheumatism, whether acute or chronic, S. S. S. will be found a safe and reliable treatment. Special book on Rheumatism and any medical advice you desire will be furnished free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Sometime ago, I had Rheumatism and had to quit work. The pain in my back and between my shoulders was so intense I could not rest or sleep. I tried everything, but nothing did me any good till I heard of and took S. S. S. This medicine cured me sound and well. It purified my blood and made me feel like a new man.

CONRAD LOHR,
Anderson, Ind. 122 E. 19th St.

I was severely troubled with Rheumatism. I had it in my knees, legs and ankles, and any one who has ever had Rheumatism knows how excruciating the pain is and how it interferes with one at work. I was truly in bad shape—having been bothered with it for ten years, off and on. A local physician advised me to use S. S. S. I did so. After taking two bottles I noticed the soreness and pain were greatly reduced. I continued the medicine and was thoroughly cured; all pain, soreness and inflammation gone. I recommend S. S. S. to all Rheumatic sufferers.

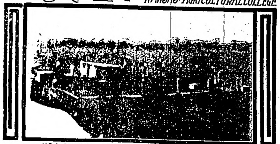
Hog Cholera Investigations.

BY WALTER E. KING, M.S.
BACTERIOLOGIST
KANSAS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE



HOG YARDS FOR EXPERIMENTAL WORK.

The suppression of the disease, hog cholera, a problem which is recognized as one of great importance to the agricultural interests of the United States, has received considerable attention during the last 20 years. At the present time few problems are as intimately associated with the agricultural economy as that which is related to the practical eradication of this animal disease.

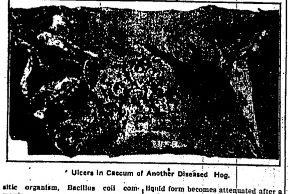
In 1885 Dr. Theobald Smith and Dr. D. E. Salmon isolated Bacillus cholera suis and described that organism as the specific cause of hog cholera. Since that time a continuous line of investigation has been conducted by the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, for the purpose of discovering some protective inoculation or treatment against the disease. During the past few years several investigators, both in Europe and America, have been actively engaged in this study. In 1903 the bureau of animal industry published a preliminary report in which it was stated that it was possible to transmit hog cholera to healthy swine by injecting the filtered serum of hogs suffering from cholera. Bacteriological examination proved the absence in this filtered material of B. cholera suis or other bacteria capable of growing on ordinary culture media. Since the appearance of the above report the investigations of the bureau of animal industry, as well as the results of extensive work in other laboratories, have confirmed the belief that Bacillus cholera suis is not the specific cause of hog cholera, or, more cautiously stated, that Bacillus cholera suis is not the etiological factor in all forms of hog cholera.

Ulcers in Caecum of Hog.

From the results which have thus far been obtained in the present work of investigation and from those of other investigators the following conclusions seem warranted:

Bacillus cholera suis is not the etiological factor in all forms of hog cholera.

Bacillus cholera suis is possibly a variety of the common intestinal parasitic organism, Bacillus coli communis.



Ulcers in Caecum of Another Diseased Hog.

The specific cause of the "filterable virus form" of hog cholera appears to be some living organism, possibly ultra-microscopic, possibly capable of passing through a fine porcelain filter in some disintegrated state.

The filterable virus of hog cholera cannot be artificially cultivated in normal hog-serum broth in the abdominal cavity of the rabbit in the collodium sac, according to the method used by Nocard and Roux in artificially cultivating the organism which they associate with contagious pleuropneumonia in cattle.

The simultaneous method of vaccination is efficient but is not practical because of its expense and the possible danger attending its use.

The ordinary laboratory and domesticated animals are not susceptible to the filterable virus of hog cholera.

Virulent hog cholera serum exerts a toxic influence upon a healthy horse when injected intravenously.

Norman hog cholera serum or virulent hog cholera serum does not appear to produce an anaphylactic reaction when injected intravenously into the horse.

The two-hour horse serum (drawn from the horse two hours after the animal has received, intravenously, approximately 150 cc. of hog cholera virus) when injected subcutaneously into the healthy hog in small quantities, produces an acute form of the disease.

The four-hour horse serum (blood serum from a horse drawn four hours after the animal has received intravenously approximately 150 cc. of virulent hog cholera serum) when injected into healthy hogs intravenously produces acute hog cholera.

The four-hour horse serum, under certain conditions at least, when injected subcutaneously in small doses into healthy swine does not produce infection.

The five-to-seven-hour horse serum when injected subcutaneously into the healthy hog does not produce the disease.

The 24-hour horse serum (drawn 24 hours after the animal has received intravenously approximately 150 cc. of hog cholera serum), in comparison with four-hour horse serum, shows attenuated properties.

The 24-hour horse serum vaccine injected subcutaneously and intravenously, and four-hour horse serum vaccine when injected in small quantities subcutaneously, act as preventives against hog cholera. The 24-hour horse serum, however, is not constant in respect to its protective properties.

Acquired immunity against hog cholera extends over a period of from three to eight months.

A rough estimate shows that horse serum vaccine can be prepared at a relatively low cost.

Virulent hog cholera serum in the liquid form becomes attenuated after a period of nine months when kept at a temperature of approximately ten degrees C. to 15 degrees C.

Virulent hog-cholera serum dried under aseptic conditions at a temperature of 37 degrees C. becomes attenuated after a period of eight months.

Horse serum vaccine retains its protective properties for at least a period of six weeks when kept at an approximate temperature of ten degrees C. to 15 degrees C.

CHEAP COLD FRAME FOR STARTING TOMATOES

One Recommended by Louisiana Experiment Station Can Be Adapted to Northern Conditions.

Eight feet wide and 30 feet long will give sufficient room to hold plants for an acre of tomatoes. The cold frame is generally built in the center of the field in which the plants are to be set. Set up 1x2 plank on edge all around the edge of the frame, letting it run north and south. Gable up the ends with 1x2 plank, making the gables about 5 feet high. Provide a ridge pole for the center, supporting it by 1x4 rafters every 4 feet. The side plank should be kept from spreading by stakes driven into the ground outside the bed and opposite the rafters. These latter should run from the ridgepole to the top of the side plank. Provide a cover of cheesecloth sewn together, large enough to cover the whole structure, and to lap well over ends and side plank. Tack it in the center of the ridgepole and to the edges tack light poles the length of the frame, so the cloth can be rolled up to the center. Spade the ground in the frame good and deep, work in a lot of well rotted manure and have fine and level. You are now ready for the plants.

A simpler cold frame can be made by placing it along the south side of a picket fence. In this case the matter of construction is greatly simplified. The illustration shows one of this kind.

Tomatoees should be placed about four inches each way. Draw the plants from the hotbed dry, by loosening the dirt with a trowel. Shake them free of dirt, and set one plant every four inches in the frame, making a hole with a stick, inserting the plant and pressing the earth firmly around it. As soon as the plants are set, water the bed freely. The transplanting into the cold frame can be greatly facilitated by using the following implement:

A scantling 1x5 inches, and long enough to reach across the bed, is bored with a line of 1-inch holes, 4 inches apart, and with their centers 4 inches from one edge. Into these holes are driven inch pegs, 4 inches long and sloping to a point. Wet the ground thoroughly, place this implement across the bed, pegs down, and with the wide edge next to the last row set, drive the pegs into the ground by pressing, or walking upon it, and when removed, you have holes for the plants clear across the bed.

In bright, warm weather, roll up the cover during the daytime. As the plants approach the time for setting in the field, give more air, and for a week before setting withhold water. On warm nights leave the cover up so as to harden them. The plants should not be placed in the field until all danger of frost is over.

THE SUCCESSFUL APPLE ORCHARD

By W. S. Hager, Wisconsin

The items that make for success in an apple orchard are: Soil, surface, soil and air drainage, varieties, culture, marketing, and last, but not least, brains and a determination to succeed.

The best soil, without dobut, is a porous clay loam verging toward a sandy texture, such as originally grew maple, elm, linden and beech timber, although many times pine timbered land is equally good. My experience has led me to believe that lime soils are essential.

Orchards should be elevated above the surrounding country or rolling, to give sufficient air and soil drainage. Right here I want to say that I consider air drainage, either by elevation or slope of site, to be very important, as bearing on blight and other fungus diseases. However, we have some orchards on comparatively level sites that are made fairly well. I have made some experiments in tile draining heavy clay land and do not think it of much value, for if you put your tile very deep, the water will not get to it, and if shallow, the roots from the trees will soon clog them completely; besides, the danger of frost wrecking them.

Right here I expect to strike trouble, as every grower whom I have approached on the subject has some choice variety, and no two anywhere nearly agree. Every successful grower must and will be governed by what succeeds in his locality and particular soil.

Cultivation in some way is absolutely necessary, either without other crop or with some hoe crop. I have usually used the latter. Have lately been planting squashes in such manner as will least interfere with two-horse cultivation, as I find two horses most convenient and economical.

What tools? I do not think that important as long as you cultivate. I never have used the so-called combination of cultivation and mulch system. As I have seen it practiced, it seems to me to be a sort of lazy man's excuse for poor cultivation.

Spraying is practiced by a few of our larger growers. Others do not think it would pay, while others simply neglect it. As a general thing the newer sections have less need of spraying, yet in all places thinning of fruit is abundantly repaid by the increase in size, quality and quantity, to say nothing of the conservation of vitality of the tree.

Selling at the best advantage is sometimes as much of an art as producing. Ordinarily there is a large home demand. If not at picking time, within two months. I have kept Wealthys until the holidays, when I received $1.50 per bushel. There were no other home-grown apples to be had. In some instances if local markets are not good it is advisable to sell, as soon as picked, to buyers who have storage; which way must be determined by conditions. But to the man who has time to devote to seeking markets, I would say keep as long as you safely can and then sell as directly to the consumer as possible. Many of our small growers are getting good prices this way.

Last, but not least, and perhaps the most discouraging because hard to guard against, are mice, rabbits and pilferers. With clean culture and a small mound of earth about the base of the tree over winter, there ordinarily is but little damage done by mice. Yet two years ago I had the mice come on top of snow in March and gnaw the bark from six to thirteen inches above the grounds on the trees of the outside rows. Wire screens would have protected them. But screens are of but small protection for rabbits, for their worst work is done while the snow is deep, and they can easily reach the branches. The best methods I find are to trap and snare them.

GRADE FOR DRAINS

It frequently happens that lands requiring drainage are level or nearly so, and the fall that can be given will be slight at the best. The question then becomes, what is the least fall with which a drain can work? In drains nearly level the water finds its own head by piling up at the upper blind end of the drain, thus standing at a greater depth in the drain from the outlet backward. For nearly level drains a larger tile should be used, since the capacity of the tile in this instance is lessened by the water standing in it. The only rules that can be given where the fall is slight are to secure as much fall as possible, to make the grade perfectly uniform, and to lay the tile very carefully so as to have no unevenness in the bed over which the water flows. Then, of course, the actual fall of the ground surface, if slight, can be increased for the ditch grade by deepening the ditch toward the outlet.—Prof. J. B Reynolds, Ontario.

Cropping a Fruit Orchard.—In giving his experience with a cultivated or sod mulcher orchard, Charles Young sod mulcher says: "After the orchard has been in bearing for many years I have paid careful attention to this, and at last I have come to the conclusion that so far as we are concerned in Algoma, an orchard in bearing, seeded down to clover, will produce more and better fruit and with much less work than if cultivated. We do not need surface cultivation here to conserve the moisture. We have usually enough of that and to spare."

The Reason Why.—Why do the best dairymen keep their cows in the barn during the winter months? Because if they are allowed to run out in the yard one day they will be discontented when not allowed out on a cold, stormy day.

Wasted Advice.

"It's the little things that count. Don't be a grump. Compliment your wife on her new hat when you go home to-night."

"My wife ain't got any new hat," responded the other party to the sidewalk conversation, with a rueful smile.

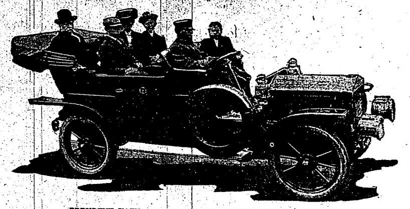
President Taft's White Steamer



PRESIDENT TAFT AND HIS FAMILY IN THEIR WHITE STEAMER

When the announcement was made several months ago that Mr. Taft would use an automobile during his term as President, much rivalry developed among the leading manufacturers for the honor of selling him a car and the public watched with interest to see what Mr. Taft's choice would be. The knowing ones predicted that the White Steamer would be selected and they pointed out that President Roosevelt had used White Steamers for two years at his summer home at Oyster Bay and had recommended this make to Mr. Taft as the most desirable.

This prediction proved correct, although Mr. Taft did not rely solely on Mr. Roosevelt's recommendation, but, with his usual thoroughness, determined to have an investigation made of all the principal makes. Accordingly, he asked several officers of the War Department to look into the matter for him, and they tested many makes of cars, visited a number of factories so that they might see what materials were used, and, finally, they investigated the records of the different types of cars in public contests and in private service.

When their labors were completed, the officials reported unanimously to Mr. Taft in favor of the White, and, accordingly, a car of this make was immediately ordered from the manufacturers, The White Company of Cleveland.

The new car was delivered to Mr. Taft in Washington a few days before his inauguration and since that time it has been in almost constant use. There has not been a day when the President or some member of his family have not been seen riding around the National Capital in the new car. It is hinted that Mr. Taft likes fast traveling and that when he rides out into the open country, he does not always insist that the speed of the car be kept within the legal limits.

W. J. Urquhart, manager of the western branch of the White Company, 239 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., said recently to a correspondent of this paper: "We are receiving many inquiries each day asking for full details regarding the construction of Mr. Taft's car and in reply we are sending copies of our catalog. Mr. Taft's car is exactly like any other Model 'M' 40 horse-power White Steamer, except that his car has the United States coat-of-arms painted on either door. In other words, when we make a car for the President of the United States there is no way in which we can make it any better than the car which you, or anybody else, can purchase from us.

"Some of those writing to me about Mr. Taft's car say that, although they are very desirous of having a car like Mr. Taft's, they are afraid that such a car is somewhat larger and more expensive than they desire. In reply to such letters, I point out that our Model 'O' 20 horse-power car is exactly like our 40 horse-power model, except as regards the size of the different parts. The principle of construction is exactly the same and the smaller car possesses all the desirable qualities of our larger model. In other words, one can secure an exact duplicate of Mr. Taft's car for $4,000, or a car of the same qualities, but of smaller dimensions, for only $2,000. Judging by the demand for White cars, a good proportion of those desiring to purchase automobiles are quite content to trust President Taft's judgment as to the best and most desirable make."

EVERYBODY WRITING PLAYS.

A Woman Play Broker's Plan to Give Genius a Chance.

During a chat the other day with Miss Alice Kauser, a well known play broker of New York I learned much about the oversupply of bad plays and the demand for really good ones. "Instead of rearing families, teaching, following a domestic career or attending to any of the homely duties in life, men and women now want to write plays and they think they have the divine spark, or at least they fancy they know enough to furnish an entertainment for the public," said Miss Kauser. "The result is that we have a market flooded with hopelessly bad stuff. It reminds me of what Andrew Lang said once when he visited the Paris salon. 'What a stupendous amount of mediocrity there is in art.'

"I think the schools of today are responsible for this lowering of the literary standard, for certainly it has sunk below that of a few years ago, when it was the work of men of talent and geniuses to give a written message to the world and not for every school boy or girl to write something not worth reading. I think there should be a law passed making it punishable to write mediocre plays or stories. Then only genius would survive."

Miss Kauser had a word to say about the disease now raging among her sex, "egomania," which is the curse of so many women, and is spreading day by day. Besides being a remarkably clever business woman, Miss Kauser understands housekeeping, an art which is being rapidly lost among women of this decade. She entertains delightfully, and her dinners are no less a feast than a flow of soul. Maeterlinck, Sudermann and Hauptmann, whom she represents in this country, are the friends whose homes she visits on her summer trips to Europe.

A New Type of Brick.

In a recent lecture before the Commercial club of Portland, Or., a San Francisco architect described the Bruner building, just finished in Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, as the highest type of fireproof construction. This is a tall building of reenforced concrete, the walls of which are faced with brick of unusual shape. This brick has a groove cast on its inner edge, that the concrete may be dovetailed in the brick as the walls rise. The brick is the usual size, and the wedge shaped groove is the invention of an Oakland man, who had observed how difficult it is to keep a brick facing in position in a concrete wall in a conflagration.

Whenever physicians' fees seem extortionate it is comforting to recall a certain famous eye specialist, one of whose patients coming to pay his bill growled: "Doctor, it seems to me that $500 is a big charge for that operation of mine. It didn't take you over half a minute."

"My dear sir," the other answered, "in learning to perform that operation in half a minute I have spoiled over eleven pecks of such eyes as yours."

BROADWAY CHEFS SKEPTIC.

Texas' Feast of Humming Birds' Tongues Called a Grand Bluff.

Chefs of the restaurants along Broadway were stirred when they were told of a dispatch from Texas about the dish of humming birds' tongues to be served at a banquet in San Antonio. They fumed and they sputtered as they thumbed the well worn pages of cook books handed down by generations of white aproned ancestors. To be beaten by prairie cooks from the Rio Grande was enough to ruffle the calmest temper at the range.

"It's ze one grand fakaire!" shouted a fat little man amid the rattle and clatter of pots and pans. "Humming birds' tongues. Bah! Zey are like the toothpick in ze pie. To make one bite, 500!"

"Five hundred dollars?" he was asked.

"Humming birds, 500, to catch them, yes? Take ze week, ze month to get ze mouthful."

Another chef, with moustachios, eyebrows an dhands elevated, exclaimed: "Impossible. The feasts of the Roman emperors have humming bird tongue, maybe. Texas do it? No. If New Orleans, perhaps. But a dish like this from the land of the frying-pan. No, no, no! A hundred times not. Mutton grease and humming birds, never. Canard! What you call in your American poker, the grand bluff!"

SISTER'S TRICK

But It All Came Out Right.

How a sister played a trick that brought rosy health to a coffee fiend is an interesting tale:

"I was a coffee fiend—a trembling, nervous, physical wreck, yet clinging to the poison that stole away my strength. I mocked at Postum and would have none of it.

"One day my sister substituted a cup of Postum piping hot for my morning cup of coffee but did not tell me what it was. I noticed the richness of it and remarked that the coffee tasted fine but my sister did not tell me I was drinking Postum for fear I might not take any more.

"She kept the secret and kept giving me Postum instead of coffee until I grew stronger, more tireless, got a better color in my sallow cheeks and a clearness to my eyes, then she told me of the health-giving, nerve-strengthening life-saver she had given me in place of my morning coffee. From that time I became a disciple of Postum and no words can do justice in telling the good this cereal drink did me. I will not try to tell it, for only after having used it can one be convinced of its merits."

Ten days' trial shows Postum's power to rebuild what coffee has destroyed. "There's a Reason."

Rough Handling for Dog Thief.

A young girl of fifteen, Mlle. Yvonne Meyer, living in the Rue Petrelle, was taking for a walk her dog, which she held by a leather strap, the other day when a man who had been following her suddenly cut the strap with a knife, and picking up the animal dashed off.

Eye witnesses of the scene pursued the thief, whom they had almost overtaken when he threw the dog under the wheels of a passing autobus in the Rue Rochechouart. The animal was instantly killed, and while Mlle. Meyer, who had fainted from emotion at seeing her pet's fate, was treated at a local pharmacy the thief was captured and roughly handled by the crowd. He was handed over to the police, but refused to reveal his identity.

Cuticura Thus Proven Pure and Sweet.

A New York friend of Cuticura writes:

"My three year old son and heir, after being put to bed on a trip across the Atlantic, investigated the stateroom and located a box of graham crackers and a box of Cuticura Ointment. When a search was made for the box, it was found empty and the kid admitted that he had eaten the contents of the entire box spread on the crackers. It cured him of a bad cold and I don't know what else."

No more conclusive evidence could be offered that every ingredient of Cuticura Ointment is absolutely pure, sweet and harmless. If it may be safely eaten by a young child, none but the most beneficial results can be expected to attend its application to pected to attend its application to even the tenderest skin or youngest infant.

For sleeplessness fill a hot water bottle and place it under the ankles; it works better there than at the soles of the feet. Put a rather small amount of very cold water in another rubber bottle and lay it on the head. The cold water is more comfortable than ice, which seems exciting rather than soothing.

At first, says a woman who has tried this cure, I would get to sleep in about an hour and wake again as the water heated. The cold water would have to be changed four or five times during the night; then once changing was enough, and now if the brain begins to spin after I lie down for sleep I put on the cold water bottle and am asleep soon for the whole night.

PROPER VENTILATION FOR THE LIVESTOCK BARN

Description of the System Used by the Wisconsin Agricultural College—By C. A. Ocock, Agricultural Engineer.

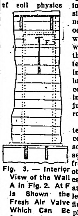

Fig. 3. — Interior View of the Wall A in Fig. 2. At F Is Shown the Fresh Air Valve Which Can Be Set at Any Desired Position.

In 1889 F. H. King, then professor of soil physics in the Wisconsin university, announced a method of ventilation which has become widely known as the "King System." The interest in this matter of barn ventilation is constantly increasing, if we may judge by the many requests for aid.

The King system of ventilation consists of two sets of flues. One set provides the fresh air, while the other furnishes an escape for the vitiated air. The inlet or fresh air flues should be placed not more than ten feet apart and located in the exterior walls of the barn; the greater the number the more effective the ventilation, since they enable the fresh air to displace the foul air more rapidly. The outlet may include one or more flues, but should be so located as to provide the quickest means of removing the foul air.

The university dairy barn is shown in cross section in Fig. 1. The stable is some 40 feet wide by 72 feet long, the cows facing the central alley. The walls are hollow, constructed by using paper and drop siding on the outside of studding and six-inch No. 2 fence flooring and galvanized iron on the inside, the galvanized iron being exposed within. The ceiling is also covered with galvanized iron, and the loft above is provided with a rough board floor, thus forming a dead air space. By constructing walls and ceiling in this manner they tend to become nonconductors of heat and cold. All stable walls and ceilings should be non-conductors, otherwise moisture will collect as frost in cold weather and drop as water in moderate weather. The flues for taking out the foul or vitiated air are two in number, one located midway in each side wall. These flues then pass upward to the loft above, where they meet a central flue or chimney XY. There is also a ventilator flue opening from the ceiling into the bottom of the chimney as shown at W, for more rapid movement of air during the summer, in order to keep the stable cooler. It is not absolutely necessary, and when used in the winter sacrifices a large amount of warm air. The openings into the main flues, VV, are for the same purpose, but are usually kept closed unless the stable becomes too warm. These flues are made of galvanized iron and vary in their dimensions. The central flue is 40 inches in diameter and rises 50 feet above the floor. The lateral flues which joins the round chimney are 18x24 inches. The flue W is 12 inches in diameter. The openings U, V and W are provided with registers that may be closed or opened to best accommodate existing conditions within. In cold weather the registers V are kept closed and the foul air taken out at U and W only. These openings at U are the same size as the flues Z, the lower edge being two feet from the floor. This brings the lower edge of the opening within six inches of the floor line.

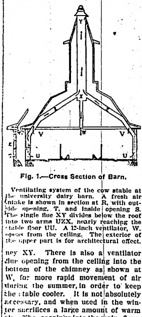

Fig. 1.—Cross Section of Barn.

Ventilating system of the cow stable at the university dairy barn. A fresh air intake is shown in section at R, with outside opening, T, and inside opening S. The single flue XY divides below the roof into two arms UZX, nearly reaching the stable floor UU. A 12-inch ventilator, W, opens from the ceiling. The exterior of the upper part is for architectural effect.

There are two objects in bringing the ventilator shaft to or near the floor.

1. To remove carbon dioxide and the waste products of the lungs produced by breathing. This foul air settles near the floor and animals are compelled to breathe it with the impurities.

2. To dispose of the cold air in winter, rather than the warm. The coldest air in a room is at the floor and the warmest at the ceiling. In case of an excess of warm air at any time, or if it is desirable to force ventilation at the expense of the heat produced by the animals, then the openings V are to be used.

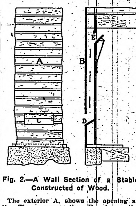

Fig. 2.—A Wall Section of a Stable Constructed of Wood.

Fresh air is taken in through small flues located at intervals along the side walls of the barn, and illustrated in cross section R to the left in Fig. 1. The opening at T is located near the ground line, but may be higher in the wall if it is found necessary. It should not, however, be placed less than three feet below the ceiling to guard against the warm air flowing outward.

The opening shown at S is the delivery opening to the stable. This opening should be arranged with a shutter or valve in order to control the flow of incoming air. Such shutters are especially necessary where there are several openings at the west or north side of the barn to prevent the stable from becoming too cold during the winter season.

The walls of the barn shown in Fig. 1 are made of studding sheeted up both inside and out with matched lumber and building paper. Several of the spaces between the studding are used as fresh air flues. Fig. 2 shows the outside opening at C and the inside is shown in Fig. 3 at F. This construction allows the air to enter near the sill of the building and be delivered near the ceiling.

The system as installed in the university dairy barn has been used satisfactorily for 11 years, and has also proved successful when installed in other stables.

CONTROL OF BEE SWARMING

By Arthur C. Miller, Expert Apiarist, Rhode Island

I have answered many questions concerning agriculture, but none, to my mind, seems more important than the controlling of swarming. Most of my hives are all regulation ten-frame dove-tailed hives, with 5¾-inch depth supers, which latter take either boxes or extracting frames, as I choose. One apiary has hives composed entirely of two or more for a brood chamber, on the divisible brood chamber plan. Bodies and frames are bought from supply dealers, but covers and bottoms are now made by a local box factory. The bottoms are regulation style.

Newer covers are merely thin cleated boards, some are commercial super covers, over all telescope covers made of paper, which are wind and waterproof, cheap, tight and reasonably durable. Hives and supers are well nailed and painted, but I think I shall omit paint on supers as they are never exposed to the weather.

Frames are well nailed, the all frames wired, and fence separators are clinch nailed, all of which permits ready cleaning by immersion in boiling lye, a labor saving experiment of much value. All hives are on racks or stands one foot above the ground.

The points aimed at were the best material and work in vital points, bodies, supers and insides, and low cost on covers and bottoms, where exactness and fine stock are not so vital.

My method of controlling swarms is hard to define. First my strain of bees is not prone to swarm, which may account for my success in my manipulations. All supers, combs, or extracting, are put on from one to three weeks before the harvest begins, and some sort of super is on all through the season.

Hereabouts we may get a heavy flow at most any time during the season, and the policy of an always present super saves a pound of honey. It is particularly advantageous in out apiaries which are often seen only at long intervals. Furthermore, colonies to which the supers are given so far ahead of the harvest are very much less inclined to swarm than are colonies not so treated.

All queens are clipped before they are introduced, and if a swarm issues in my absence the queen is usually lost in the grass, the bees returning settle down to business and accept one of the young queens. Now and then a swarm departs, but the loss does not begin to equal the cost of preventing it. It took me a long time to find out, but I am not convinced that such is the case.

Overtaken.

A wizened little man charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half, or in this case better two-thirds, was a big, square-jawed woman with a determined eye.

The judge listened to the plaintiff's recital of wrongs with interest.

"Where did you meet this woman who, according to your story, has treated you so dreadfully?" his honor asked.

"Well, judge," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to glare defiantly at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."

Fruit and Temperance.

In America a distinctly increased demand for fruit has been noticed within the last year or two, and is ascribed in the first instance to the growth of the temperance movement. As a man loses the taste for alcohol so he encourages the more natural and primitive appetite for fresh fruit.

FINEST OF ALL CAPITALS

America's Seat of National Government Is Supreme.

Men still in good health and full vigor remember Washington as a national capital which had to be explained and apologized for to strangers who knew the great cities of the world. It was a raw, straggling town with few creditable buildings except half a dozen belonging to the federal government. The streets were paved badly or not at all. Unkempt open spaces were common, and in the best section of the city there was an effect of unfinished plans and good intentions gone to wreck.

Then it was necessary to tell Europeans that the American capital was young; that the states gave most of their money and their pride to their own seats of government; that the country was rather a confederation than a closely knit unit, and that it was urged by many influential persons that the capital ought to be established farther inland and nearer the future center of population. Washington was not even sure of retaining its only claim to the attention of the world.

All this is changed. The multitudes that greeted the new president and enjoyed a magnificent demonstration of national pride and governmental pomp saw one of the finest cities of the earth. They admired some of the noblest structures ever reared for public use. They looked upon a capital worthy of any nation, however old and rich and famous.

It is true that Washington still lacks many improvements. There are crudities to be removed and great plans to be finished. But Washington needs no apologies now. There is no longer any talk of moving the nation's seat of government. The country is too proud of its capital. It understands too well that the beautiful Washington of to-day is only a hint of the splendid city that is to be.

TAFT HOME PAST AND PRESENT.

White House Not Always the Desirable Abode It Is To-day.

John Adams was the first president to live in the White House. That was the time when the east room was used to dry the family washing. On their way to Washington from Philadelphia Mrs. Adams and her attendants lost their way between Washington and Baltimore. In a letter to her daughter Mrs. Adams described conditions: "Woods are all you see from Baltimore until you reach the city, which is only in name. No wood cutters or carters to be had at any rate. We are now indebted to a Pennsylvania wagon to bring us, through the first clerk in the treasury office, one cord and a half of wood, which is all we have for his house, where 12 fires are constantly required. The vessel which has my clothes and other matters has not arrived. The ladies are impatient for a drawing-room; I have no looking-glasses, but dwarfs for this house, nor twentieth part lamps enough to light it; my tea china is more than half missing. My visitors—some of them—come three or four miles. The return of one of them (the visits) is the work of one day. Mrs. Otis, my nearest neighbor, is at lodging almost half a mile from us. We have not the least fence, yard or convenience without, and the great unfinished audience-room I made a drying-room to hang my clothes."

Whatever may be the occasional harking back to the good old days it is not likely that Mrs. Taft will envy the time when the wife of the second president of the United States had to worry about returning calls at great distances, in addition to such details as the securing of firewood, necessary lamps and means of transportation. While the White House to-day is not all that a modern architect would plan, it is not wholly unlivable, the president's wife is not required to worry about clothes drying. She is provided with a number of modern housekeeping conveniences and her lot is not such a burden as to deter other women from envying her the position of first lady of the land.

Out and In Politics.

Newspaper men in a large city of the middle west have had a difficult time trying to elicit political information from a certain politician in that town, who, in answer to all questions invariably offers the stereotyped response: "I am out of politics."

Inasmuch as the man is an important figure in the local political turmoil, this response is not taken seriously by the interviewers; to whom, indeed, its repeated utterance has become a trifle monotonous.

Not long ago a veteran reporter succeeded in gaining the presence of the politician, to whom he put the query: "What's going on in politics?"

"Oh, I'm out of politics," was the answer.

"That's understood, of course," quickly responded the scribe. "Would you mind letting us know what progress you're making toward breaking in again?"—The Sunday Magazine.

The Hypothetical Question.

The attorney for the defense had just completed the reading of his hypothetical question. He looked at the clock. It had taken him one hour and twenty-six minutes. He looked at the witness.

"You have heard the question?" he said.

The witness nodded.

"And what is your answer?"

The witness wriggled uneasily.

"I guess I didn't just catch the drift of it," he apologetically remarked, "won't you please read it again?"

And the presiding judge fell back with a hollow groan.

The Esthetic Bachelor.

The modern bachelor is an ardent admirer of well chosen furniture and of beautiful pictures and china, nor is he oblivious to the charms of lovely old silver and dainty napery. To have tea with him is often an esthetic as well as a material pleasure.

Only in one thing in his establishment does one note the missing feminine touch. A woman's room always contains flowers; a man's scarcely ever.—Black and White.

MUST BELIEVE IT.

Every Reader Will Concede the Truth of This Statement.

One who suffers with backache or any form of kidney trouble wants a lasting cure, not merely a temporary benefit. Profit by the example of Rev. J. M. Suffield, of 2179 S. 8th St., Lincoln, Nebr., who confirms a report of his cure after several years. "I told in a statement made for publication in 1900 how Doan's Kidney Pills had relieved me after other remedies had failed," said Rev. Suffield. "I have no hesitation in confirming that statement now. I have used Doan's Kidney Pills at various times and they have never failed me."

Electric Carriages Pay.

Although scarcely a year has passed since those swift-moving electric and petrol carriages appeared, the capital already invested in London taxicabs is $10,000,000. There are 758 taxicabs on the streets, 2,600 taxicabs in order, 1,700 licensed drivers, and an average of 55 certificates granted each week.

THE CRACKING OF PAINT.

Property Owners Can Save Money by Learning the Cause.

Do you know what is wrong when paint peels, or cracks, or otherwise necessitates premature re-painting?

Well, sometimes it hasn't been properly applied—the surface being damp or there being too much turpentine or too much drier.

But, nine times out of ten, the trouble is caused by adulterated white lead.

To avoid all such trouble, every houseowner should know in a general way, when a surface is in proper condition to receive paint, what kind of primer and finishing coats different surfaces require, and how to avoid adulteration in materials.

A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, specifications for all kinds of painting work, and an instrument for detecting adulterations in painting materials, with directions for using it, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

This company, the largest makers of pure white lead, invite tests, by means of the blowpipe (included in outfit), or in any other way, of the purity of the white lead sold under their famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark. That trademark on a keg of white lead is in itself an absolute guarantee of purity and quality.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

NOTHING DOING FOR UP RIVER TOWN

The Law Makers Have Gone Home and So Have the Thief River Lobbyists

Thief River Falls has not received the slightest recognition at the hands of the legislature, and the session adjourned last night without considering the county seat bill. There is naturally a great deal of disappointment up the river, while down this way the people are well satisfied. It is all the more to the credit of the citizens of Red Lake Falls who made the fight in behalf of their town that they not only received no support but had the most intense opposition from their home senator, A. L. Hanson of Ada. Sentor Hanson announced early in the session that his sympathies were with Thief River Falls, and he has shown the poor grace to refuse to listen to the arguments and to question the motives of the Red Lake Falls people.

There will be another election next year, and if Senator Hanson gets a vote from this town or from this vicinity it will be because someone is disloyal to his home community and his own best interests.

We extend condalences to Thief River. The last card in the game was played at St Paul, and it was deuce high. Whatever the merits of the argument, and we must confess that we believe the Red Lake Falls contention to be right, the up-river town must give us credit for playing the game successfully.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY

Old Resident of the County Fell Dead at Railway Station at St. Hilaire.

At two o'clock Monday afternoon Ryer Swanson fell dead on the depot platform at St. Hilaire while waiting to board the freight train to go to Thief River Falls. Death is believed to have been due to heart failure.

Deceased was a pioneer of the county, having resided on a farm a mile south of St. Hilaire for the past twenty years. He was about seventy years old and is survived by a family of several grown children. One of his sons was for several years station agent at St. Hilaire.

Mr. Swanson's death came as a blow to the members of his family for he had been enjoying good health.

Chatel-St. Mars.

Miss Mary Louise Chatel, daughter of Mrs. Mary Chatel who reisdes south of this city, and Mr. Joseph St. Mars of Superior were married Monday, April 19. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Fr. Pichery officiating. It was a quiet wedding only a few relatives being preseent.

Mr. and Mrs. St. Mars left Monday evening for a short wedding trip after which they will go to Superior, where the groom is employed, to reside. Mr. St. Mars formerly resided in Red Lake Falls and he and his bride have many friends here who are glad of the opportunity to offer congratulations and best wishes.

VIOLENTLY INSANE; CAUSES MUCH TROUBLE

One Man Kept Many People Busy for Several Hours—Taken to the Hospital.

George Delorier of Thief River Falls became violently insane Monday. He went into the country in the vicinity of Germantown and brought terror to several farm homes. He went through three houses, driving out the people and breaking up the furniture, before enough people could be gathered together to prevent him from doing more damage. But the man was not afraid of all the people in the township and he was not captured until found at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning by officers from Thief River Falls. When the officers arrived the man was walking in a pasture and near him, though not near enough to be within his reach, were half a dozen men armed with clubs and ropes. The unfortunate man surrendered to the officers, whom he recognized, without resistence. Upon examination it was found that the man's shoulder blade had been broken and that he received other bruises as a result of his encounter with the men who had tried to capture him.

Judge S. A. Swanson went to Thief River Falls Tuesday to hold court for the examination of the man. He was adjudged insane and was taken to the hospital at Fergus Falls by Judge Swanson and Sheriff Nelson. He gave them no trouble, but upon arrival at the hospital he attempted to assume charge of the institution by physical force and it took a large number of the attendants to subdue him.

GOVERNOR VETOED TONNAGE TAX

Gives Some Strong Reasons for Not Approving Act of Legislature.

Says Bill Attacks Fundamental Principle of Taxation—That of Equality.

On Tuesday morning Governor Johnson returned the tonnage tax bill to the house without his approval. In vetoing the bill he gave an exhaustive statement of his reasons for the action.

He stated that the bill, notwithstanding the sincere labor put upon it by its author, was still more or less an uncertain and ill-digested experiment, that it threatened to violate the fundamental principal of taxation, that of equality, and that it fails to meet the constitutional requirement of uniformity in taxing the same class of subjects.

He expressed the opinion that the effect of the bill if it became a law would be a severe blow to the development of the great mineral bearing counties, affecting the agricultural, manufacturing, commercial, financial and educational growth of the section.

He thought there was some ground for the contention that northern Minnesota does not have the representation in the legislature that it should and that if it had the bill might not have passed. The passage of the bill has, said the governor, plunged the subject of taxation under the new state constitutional amendment into a sea of political and sectional feeling and prejudice, which makes a just and efficient measure impossible of enactment, but threatens sectional hatreds, making the subject of taxation the mere football of partizan and sectional politics.

He holds that there is no urgent need for such radical charge in taxation, that Minnesota's methods of reaching valuations are admired by tax authorities of the country and are effective. In this connection the governor said:

"As regards the success of the state in securing revenue from the iron ore properties under the present ad valorem system, permit me to cite you to the statistical exhibit of the state auditor on page XVIII of his last bi-enniel report. It there appears that the taxable value of iron ore properties in Minnesota has raised from $6,000,000 in 1898 to $180,000,000 in 1908, or increased thirty fold in ten years, and that he taxes levied to be paid into the staste treasury from this source increased from $18,000 in 1898 to $600,000 in 1908, increasing thirty-three fold in the brief period of ten years.

If the revenue now derived from iron mines is not sufficient, the state under the persent system has the full power and machinery to increase the sessment to proper and just figure, without plunging any section of the state into panic and arresting its development.

"The state board of equalization and the state tax commission, under the present laws, have raised the value of iron ore lands from $42,000,000 in 1905 to $180,000,000 last year, thereby increasing the state tax levy for state purposes alone from $114,000 four years ago to approximately $600,000 a year at the pressent time, or adding nearly a half million dollars of revenue annually to the state treasury, and approximateely quadrupling the iron ore valuation and taxes in the brief period of four years."

DELIGHTED HOUSE FULL OF PEOPLE

The Country Kid Entertained His Friends in Uproarous Style Thursday Night.

Told you so! Told you that the country kid was the real apple sass boy from the tall grass. Well, lots of people believed it, for the Metropoiltan opera house was filled with people who went to see the play put on by the band boys last Thursday night, and everybody was glad—except the few who didn't go.

The play was so well staged and handled that it would be difficult to give special credit to any member of the company without doing injustice to all of the others. There was not a weak spot in the cast. However, the statement will be ventured that Omer Hall as the kid was a "bright particular star." Somebody said, "Well he's just acting natural," and maybe that's so. It ought to be said that E. G. Buse is not the bad man that he appeared to be, but the fact that he was such a bad bad man is a compliment to his acting, for if you would compliment the villian cuss him, hiss at him—and everybody did.

Much of the success of the play is due to the efforts of P. L. Malvin, the band manager. His part in the play was most capably handled, but what counted more was his labor in the prepartation of the piece for the presentation to the public.

Ball Game Called Off.

Because of the disqualification of some of the members of the local team, the ball game scheduled to be played Saturday by teams representing the East Grand Forks and Red Lake Falls high schools, the game has been called off. It is expected that there will be some games before the close of the season if the boys make up the deficiency in their work.

Installation Services.

Eveleth News: Arrangemets are being made for the installation of Rev. Phiilp A. Schwarz as pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city. The installation services will be held on the evening of May 1lh, and are to be public.

The speakers secured for the occasion are Rev. S. A. Jamieson of Duluth, who will preside put the constitutional questions and deliver the charge of the people; Rev. J. F. McLeod of Two Harbors, who will preach the installation sermon, and Rev. Henry E. Neff of Virginia, who will give the charge to the pastor-elect.

MEET TO CONSIDER DITCH PETITION

Much Opposition to Acceptance of Viewers' Report on County Ditch No. 32.

The county commissioners meet tomorrow to consider the petition of A. C. Mayfield and others for the establishment of ditch No. 32 and to pass upon the report of the viewers. The meeting will be well attended, for there is a lack of harmony among those whose land will be affected if the ditch is constructed. The objections are not so much to the establishment of the ditch as to the report of the viewers recomending assesments and awards of damages. There is so much dissention that it is not certain that definite action ordering the establishment of the ditch will be taken at tomorrow's meeting.

The ditch if constructed would be a large one, twelve miles long with three branch ditches, and would drain a large amount of land in the eastern part of the county.

GOOD SHOWING FOR RED LAKE COUNTY

Very Small Amount of Delinquent Personal Property Taxes.

Smallest Amount in History of County—Much More Last Year.

The personal property taxes of only ninty-three people in Red Lake county are delinquent. This is the best showing in the history of the county. Last year one hundred and forty people were delinquent and the average is about one hundred and fifty. The excellent showing made this year indicates that the people of the county are enjoying at least a fair measure of prosperity. There is no doubt that the dairy cow has had something to do with the good record that the county has made. The fact that much new territory has been added to the county in the opening of the reservation, and yet a reduction in the number of delinquencies, is another indication that there has been much improvement in the financial condition of the people of the county.

Bankers to Meet.

A meeting of the bankers of the Ninth congressional district will be held at Crookston next Wednesday. The commercial club of Crookston is making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the money changers.

THIEF RIVER ELECTION

Bond Proposition Got Majority Vote—Municipal Phone System Favored.

At the election held at Thief River Falls last Thursday the proposition to bond the city in the amount of $20,000 for the purpose of erecting an armory carried by a majority of 71 votes, but there is some misunderstanding as to whether or not the majority is large enough to authorize the issuance of bonds, the uncertainty being as to whether a majority vote or two-thirds vote is required. The attorneygeneral has been asked to give an opinion.

The people were asked to cast a straw vote on the proposiion to establish a municipal phone system. This proposition was approved by a large majority of the voters.

Succeeds L. A. Rosing.

Governor Johnson has announced the appointment of Charles Halvorsen of Dawson, Minn., to the board of control to succeed the late L. A. Rosing. Mr. Halvorsen was a member of the state senate in 1899 to 1901.

Adams Presbytery.

The spring meeting of the Presbytery of Adams was held at Blackduck last week and was attended by a large number of the Presbyterian clergymen of the northwestern part of the state.

Rev. Grant Strah of Warren was elected moderator. Rev. Niel A. Gilchrist of Thief River Falls was chosen ministerial delegate to the general assembly of the Presbyterian church to be held at Denver, May 30. Rev. S. E. P. White of Bemidji was chosen alternate and Dr. E. H. Markum of Bemidji lay delegate.

Memorial Day Observance.

Memorial day is to be observed on Monday, May 31, on Sunday, May 30, and Friday May 28. Since Memorial day comes on Sunday this year, nobody has been certain what would be done, but Marcus W Bates, state commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued orders to Grand Army posts requesting that May 31 be observed as Memorial day.

In his order Commander Bates instructs all post commanders to invite schools in their localities to hold patriotic services Friday afternoon, May 28. Sunday, May 30, will be observed as Memorial day. On Monday the exercises will be held in the cemeteries and flowers will be strewn on the graves of the soldiers.

Talked on Socialism.

H. L. Barton, an organizer for the socialist party spoke to a good sized audience at the court house Tuesday evening. He gave a very good talk and created a good impression. He was particularly effective in picturing unsatisfactory conditions, but he had little to say of the remedy that the socialists have to offer. The burden of his song was government ownership of all public utilities as a means of doing away with unjust discrimination. He did not explain just how the great change is to be brought about, but he recognized that weak point in his argument by saying that he could not cover ground in one speech and he urged his readers to study the teachings of socialist leaders. It was at least a relief to listen to a socialist speaker who is not a ranter.

Killed By Train.

Thief River Press: A farmer living near Callaway was killed by the local passenger train running from St. Paul to Thief River Falls daily on Friday of last week. Nothing was known of the man's death until the train reached our city, when part of his skull was found on the snow plow. Some fragment were found on the tender. Inquiry was made at all the stations along the line and finally the body was found near Callaway. It proved to be that of Knut Tazon, a well-to-do farmer residing in that locality. LEG TAKEN OFF; RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Louis Perrault Very Seriously Injured While at Work at Cass Lake.

Louis Perrault, a son of Louis Perrault of Terrebonne, was very seriously injured last Friday at Cass Lake, where he is employed. Mr. Perrault is an engineer in a saw mill and while engaged at his work he reached over the engine to put some oil in a cup when his jacket caught on the shaft of the fly wheel and in an instant he was flying through space. It is said that he was carried around more than a hundred times before he engine could be stopped. His left leg was so badly injured that it was necessary to amputate it below the knee, but there are no other serious injuries. Mr. Perrault did not lose consciousness, a most unusial circumstance. The wonder is that he was not killed. Louis Perrault, sr., who went to Cass Lake upon learning of the accident, says that his son is getting along nicely.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

REVIEW OF THE MOST IMPORTANT WORK OF THE STATE LEGISLATORS FOR THE WEEK.

St. Paul, April 8.—The house yesterday killed Representative Adams' bill granting local option to cities of the fourth class (less than 10,000 inhabitants). The execution of this bill was preceded by a long and spirited debate in which personalities abounded. Mr. Adams made the principal argument in favor of the bill, stating that such a measure is desired by the smaller cities of the state in order to better control the liquor traffic in their respective communities. The bill was indefinitely postponed by a vote of 61 to 51.

The bill creating a state department to have charge of the examination of banks was passed yesterday, together with a bunch of other bank bills. The bank department bill has already passed the senate. The salary of the head of the new department is $5,000 and the deputy $2,500.

The house also passed Senator Thorpe's bill which provides that the public examiner shall have charge of the winding of the affairs of defunct banks, instead of appointing a receiver. A bill allowing state banks to have savings departments and a bill providing that state banks in cities of over 50,000 must have $50,000 capital were also passed.

The reapportionment bill, which was reported in the house yesterday, makes only one change in the senatorial districts, which is in Hennepin county, where all the territory outside of Minneapolis is made into one district. The bill aims as far as possible to give a representative to each county, and the total is 129, ten more than at present.

The inheritance tax law is amended in a bill passed yesterday. It graduates the tax according to the heirs, in addition to the present graduation according to amount. Indirect heirs will be required to pay more.

The Torrens system of registering land titles is extended to the whole state under a bill which passed yesterday.

In the Senate.

The senate yesterday passed the house bill accepting the Indian school at Morris from the federal government. Opposition was made to the bill on several points, but it was passed by a vote of 37 to 14. Upon the signature of the governor and the filing of a copy of the bill with the secretary of the interior the state will become owner of 250 acres of land and buildings valued at $100,000.

A bill proposing a constitutional amendment relating to the size of the supreme court was passed. It permits the legislature to decide that the court shall consist of from four to eight associate justices.

The senate yesterday concurred in the house amendments concerning the commission form of government. The bill now goes to the governor.

Senator Pauly made an unsuccessful effort yesterday to have his bill establishing a state printing plant called out of the finance committee and placed on the calendar. His motion was defeated, 29 to 20. This action is a virtual defeat of the bill.

St. Paul, April 9. — The senate yesterday adopted a resolution instructing the committee on taxes to report the tonnage tax bill to the senate Monday morning. The vote by which this order was adopted was 34 to 25, and is taken to indicate that the ultimate passage of the bill is almost certain. The resolution was adopted after a spirited debate, in which a dozen senators participated.

A bill requiring railroad companies to keep a record of freight charges made during the pendency of any rate controversy and return to the shippers the difference in case the rates are declared illegal was passed by the senate yesterday. The bill passed the house last Monday, and yesterday an effort was made in the house to recall the bill from the senate before it passed there, and thus delay the passage of the bill. Only seventeen house members voted in favor of recalling the bill.

Before referring the highway commission bill to the finance committee the senate yesterday cut the salary of the state highway engineer from $3,500 proposed in the bill to $1,800. This leaves the salary where it was.

Bills passed: Relating to certified copies of deaths of persons as evidence in settling real estate disputes; authorizing levying of water tax in cities of 10,000; establishing detention hospitals for suspected insane; relating to the enforcement of rates by common carriers.

In the House.

By a vote of 35 to 30 the house yesterday killed the bill regulating patent medicines. The author of the bill is a doctor and the man who made the motion to kill it is a druggist.

The bill punishing "burglary with explosives" with twenty-five to forty years' imprisonment was voted down in the house yesterday.

The Conley bill requiring the state board of health to examine plans and inspect the construction and operation of all municipal water and sewer systems was passed after it had been amended so as not to apply to cities of the first class.

A bill prohibiting the taking of rebates or gifts by members of the state board of control, either for themselves or for the state, passed the house yesterday.

The house killed the bill prohibiting persons carrying arms and accompanied by dogs from entering the lands of other people.

The red, white and blue tights bill, intended to prevent desecration of the flag, was killed.

A bill providing that a judge of probate shall not have his office next to an attorney was passed.

A bill authorizing the state drainage commission to construct an outlet for the waters of the Mustinka state ditch, in Traverse county, was passed.

Both houses of the legislature adjourned until next Monday.

St. Paul, April 13.—The tonnage tax bill passed by the house several days ago was reported from the senate committee on taxes and tax laws yesterday and placed on general orders. The committee asked that it be recommitted to the committee for the hearing Tuesday night and Wednesday morning it will be before the senate. Unless the senate works overtime, and works hard, the bill will be buried, however. There are 213 bills on general orders ahead of the tonnage tax bill. There are but nine working days left.

Senator Peterson introduced a resolution instructing the attorney general to take court proceedings to determine whether the protests of St. Paul to the location of the Armour plant are well founded, and if they are to restrain the injurious acts. The resolution went over under notice of debate.

The senate committee of the whole ordered a favorable report on the bill to permit Sunday baseball.

The committee of the whole recommended for passage the house bill providing for the submission of a constitutional amendment permitting the levying of a tenth of a mill tax for buying land for reforestation purposes.

Senator Sageng failed in an attempt to have his bill relating to local option recalled from the temperance committee, where it has reposed for three months.

In the House.

The bill to regulate the sale of mining and oil stocks was killed by the house yesterday. The bill was intended to prevent the sale of worthless stocks.

The senate bill to pension soldiers who participated in the defense against the Indian outbreak in 1862 passed the house yesterday.

The compromise hotel bill drawn by the public health committee of the house passed the house yesterday, after it was amended so as to include restaurants among those to be regulated by the board of health. The bill leaves it to the state board of health to prescribe rules governing the sanitary conditions of hotels and the safety of guests, and delegates the enforcement of the rules to the state dairy and food commission.

The bill providing that telephone companies pay a 3 per cent gross earnings tax on the state's proportion of interstate business, in addition to the present 3 per cent on intrastate business, passed the house.

The house passed the bill extending to private schools the privileges of the state high school board examinations.

Other bills passed: Providing an 8 per cent gross earnings tax on freight line companies; establishing a 3-mill tax on notes and other credits; to regulate the amount of premiums to be paid by county agricultural societies; to establish district or county asylums for the care of the chronic insane.

St. Paul, April 14.—The house yesterday passed a bill prohibiting large lumber companies from selling lumber cheaper at one place than at another for the purpose of stifling competition. The bill failed of passage in the house last week, was reconsidered and laid on the table. Yesterday the author had it taken from the table and it passed by a vote of 62 to 44.

The anti-cigarette bill was passed yesterday with the senate amendments, which makes the bill effective Aug. 1, if it is signed by the governor.

The so-called "vag" bill passed yesterday after being amended. The intent of the bill is to give the police power to arrest or send out of town known crooks before they commit any crime. It was amended so that it stated definitely that no one should be considered a crook unless he had been convicted of some crime.

The house passed Senator Clague's bill proposing a constitutional amendment so that the state may pay half instead of one-third of the cost of road and bridge improvements.

The general reapportionment bill drawn by the house committee has been placed at the head of general orders, where it may be considered in a day or two.

The house indefinitely postponed the legislative reference bureau bill.

A bill to provide for safety guards upon passenger elevators, and providing a penalty for violation thereof, was passed.

Several bills of interest to the Twin Cities were passed at an evening session.

In the Senate.

The senate yesterday killed the resolution by Senator Peterson, providing for possible injunction proceedings by the attorney general against the proposed Armour plant. The resolution instructing the attorney general to look into the possible damage was killed, 50 to 12.

The bill requiring the installation of safety devices for passenger elevators was passed, notwithstanding the strenuous opposition of the members from the big cities. The vote was 33 to 23.

A bill authorizing the payment of $12,500 as fees to the attorneys for the state engaged in the railway rate legislation passed without opposition.

Senator Elwell introduced a resolution advising the tax commission to go slow in the matter of changing the assessment of property from 40 to 100 per cent of its real value, for taxation, and to institute the change in the valuation by inappreciable jerks. The senate referred the bill to the committee of the whole, and it was put on general orders for consideration. The university tax and appropriation bills are being held up, pending the settlement of the question.

Many Bloody Prize Fights Are Pulled Off.

St. Paul, April 15.—Prize fights have been waged on the Mesaba range for four years, despite the work of the sheriffs, according to a letter received by Gov. John A. The Week in the State

PUSHING WORK ON STATE FAIR.

Plans Contemplate Making Show Best Minnesota Ever Had.

Business has been booming in and about the administration building of the Minnesota state fair during the past three months, in spite of the fact that the 1909 fair will not be held until Sept. 6 to 11, and the winter months are supposed to comprise the "closed season" with the state fair managers.

Minnesota was especially fortunate in state fair matters this season, securing the week assigned to it at the annual meeting of the American Association of Fairs and Expositions. Last year the assignment of dates prevented the customary celebration of Labor day on the fair grounds; but this year Labor day and the opening day of the fair come simultaneously, and thousands of the army of organized labor will attend the 1909 fair who did not get out in 1908. Although wealth of attractions and persistent advertising enabled the 1908 state fair to break its own attendance record in spite of two rainy days, the management felt the absence of the usual Labor day crowds.

The second day should be equally attractive to the thousands of state fair patrons from the Twin Cities and the country, for negotiations are now under way which make it practically certain that an aeroplane, built either by the Wright brothers or along similar lines, will make its first of five flights at the state fair on Tuesday of "state fair week." In another department will the coming state fair excel all its predecessors—that of the live stock show. In previous years the large amount of premiums offered and the advantages of showing before such a large attendance have brought hundreds of fancy cattle into the ring at the Minnesota state fair.

This year the usual number of cattle and horses, as well as sheep and swine shown, will be materially increased through the attractions offered by the live stock show in connection with the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle. This show is in October, and Secretary Cosgrove has already arranged for the accommodation of many Eastern and Middle Western breeders who have not hitherto shown at the state fair, but who are going to stop off here on their way to Seattle.

In addition to the big new machinery building, plans for which were drawn early last fall and which will be completed during the summer, fourteen local agents or manufacturers in the agricultural implement or carriage lines have secured space upon which to erect individual exhibition buildings, and the machinery and allied exhibits will be greatly increased this year over last.

Work will be immediately begun upon the lagoon which is to run from the corner to the west end of the new grand stand and what has heretofore been an unsightly expanse of knoll and swamp will become of the show places of the 1909 fair and one of the most valuable pieces of property owned by the state.

Particular attention is being paid to the harness and running races for the coming fair; the premium lists now in the mails show an increased amount of premiums offered in the dairy, poultry, apiary and other departments, and the hard and hustling work of the season has only begun.

MINNESOTA IS NINTH.

Shows Larger Postal Receipts Than Forty Other Commonwealths.

The commercial and industrial prominence of Minnesota is strikingly suggested in the last quarterly report issued by the postmaster general of "gross postal receitps." This means, practically, receipts from the sale of postage.

Minnesota, it appears, has reported a larger total of postal receipts than has any one of nearly forty other states. More surprising is the fact that the receipts in Minnesota were larger than those in Wisconsin or Iowa or Indiana or Texas or New Jersey.

This state ranks ninth in the list. Only two other states west of the Mississippi—Missouri and California—report larger receipts than does the North Star state. Minnesota's receipts amounted to $1,348,000.

It is said that the list of gross postal receipts during all of last year will maintain this same high rank for Minnesota.

Cass Gilbert, architect of the Minnesota state capitol, has been selected by the St. Paul park board to make plans for the $1,000,000 approach to the capitol. The approach is to be from Seven Corners to the capitol.

Fred Nussbaumer, superintendent of the park board, and Dr. R. O. Earl, vice president of the board, notified the architect that he had been selected. No restrictions are placed on the architect, except that the plans must come within $1,000,000 for the completed approach.

FINDS HISTORIC PAPER.

Folwell Discovers Valuable Transcripts of Old Indian Trials.

Dr. W. W. Folwell, historian of Minnesota, has solved the mystery connected with the disappearance of transcripts of the testimony in the trials of Indians charged with participation in the Indian massacres of 1862, and the Minnesota State Historical society is to receive a valuable addition to its library. Dr. Folwell, who is in Washington for the winter, has found the orignal transcripts of testimony and will send them to the Minnesota society by permission of the government.

More than 300 Indians were tried by a military commission in 1862 and of these thirty-eight were hanged in Mankato on Dec. 26, 1862. The record of testimony, a valuable historical document, was sent to Washington for examination by President Lincoln. The documents disappeared and efforts to find them have always been unsuccessful.

Dr. Folwell has recently written a history of Minnesota, and, realizing the value of the documents giving the testimony in the Indian cases, he made a personal search for the records in Washington. He found that the senate had asked President Lincoln to submit the documents to congress, and after a long search he found the transcripts in the senate archives. The documents are the nucleus for a complete and accurate history of the Indian outbreak, as they contain all the testimony given before the military tribunal.

PROFESSOR PERFECTS PATENT.

New Instrument Will Tell Shippers How Wet the Grain Is.

Anthony Zeleny, assistant professor of physics at the state university, announced in the Minnesota Engineer the final perfection of his invention for determining the amount of moisture in grain by means of an electric current.

According to Mr. Zeleny's announcement he has an instrument which will do in a few minutes at a car door work which now takes many hours' time in a well equipped laboratory. The commercial importance of this invention is said to lie in the fact that upon the amount of moisture in grains, particularly the coarser grains, depends the possibility of their being injured by germination in storeage or transit.

By Mr. Zeleny's invention two metal points, one of copper and one of zinc, are pressed into a kernel of the grain to be tested, and if moisture is present its quantity is revealed by the workings of a galvanometer.

AMBOY MAN HAS TALE OF WOE.

Says He Was Robbed of $3,000 and Then Pummeled by Two Men.

Andrew Layton was arrested at Mankato on the charge of grand larceny in the first degree. It is said by Albert Bleedorn of Amboy that Layton enticed him into a hotel Monday night and robbed him a pocketbook containing $3,000 in certificates of deposit and $18 in cash. Layton, who is a former convict, denies the charge. Bleedorn, in searching for the man who robbed him, entered the room of a guest, Sam Washburn, and the latter blacked his eye. Then the landlord, De Forest Carpenter, is said to have finished the job begun by Washburn. Bleedorn has had both Carpenter and Washburn arrested on the charge of assault. Washburn pleaded guilty and was sentenced to sixty days.

TAX FIGHT WILL CONTINUE.

Gross Earnings Case Will Be Passed Upon by Supreme Court.

The Great Northern Railway company has filed in the Ramsey county district court notice of appeal to the state supreme court in the matter of gross earnings taxes for the years 1906 and 1907, recently awarded to the state by a decision of Judge W. L. Kelly of the district court. The 1906 taxes amounted to $133,115.14; those for 1907 totaled $139,254.04. The railroad contended that as the taxes in controversy were on leased lines the state is not entitled to more than a 3 per cent tax under the charters of the leased lines.

State Gets Money.

Receipts for twine at the state prison for March netted the state treasury $37,452.06, a check for that amount being received. The C. A. Smith Lumber & Manufacturing company paid its bill of $27,727 for pine and spruce cut off state lands by permit. Sutton & Mackey of Stillwater paid $6,000 for stumpage for 1908.

Figures given out by E. B. Pierce registrar of the state university, show that fifty-seven students have been dropped from the rolls of the college of science, literature and the arts because of deficiency in their studies this winter. Last year sixty-six were dismissed.

Milaca will enjoy a building boom this coming summer. The principal block in the town, which was burned three years ago, will be replaced with a solid brick structure.

A corner of the residence of Capt. John Wevel, superintendent of the Sparta and Malta mine at Two Harbors, was dynamited. Mrs. Wevel and daughter were in the house, but were uninjured. Capt. Wevel was out at the time of the explosion. There is no clue to the dynamiters.

Flames Starting in Wings Cause $50,000 Loss to Opera House.

Superior, April 15. — The Grand opera house, having a seating capacity of 1,500 and owned by the Land and River company of Superior, and leased by C. A. The fire started in the wings of the stage, presumably from imperfect insulation.

Insanity Will Be Hains' Plea.

New York, April 15.—Conferences held yesterday in offices of John F. McIntyre, counsel for Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., in which the latter's parents, Gen. Hains and Mrs. Hains, their son, Gen. John H. The trial will begin Monday in Flushing, L. I.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 15.—Joseph White, twenty-eight years old, mill worker, is under arrest charged with a diabolical attempt to murder Magdalena Fortuna, aged fifteen years, an orphan girl, who refused to marry him.

SPRAYING POTATOES FOR BLIGHT AND BUGS

Bordeaux Mixture for the Former and Poison for the Latter —By E. P. Sandsten, Horticulturalist, Wisconsin Agricultural College.

This experiment station has conducted spraying trials for the last five years in the leading potato growing counties in the state to determine, first, whether early potato blight (Alternaria Solani) can be controlled by the application of Bordeaux mixture, and, secondly, to determine whether spraying should be recommended to the potato grower as a profitable investment and insurance against blight.

The term "early blight" is misleading, due to the fact that the disease does not usually do serious damage until after August 15. It must also be noted that the early blight upon potatoes does not rot the tubers. This injury is generally caused by some other organism. The early blight found is confined entirely to the vines and reduces the yield by causing an excessive percentage of culls and small potatoes at harvest. The last three weeks growth of the vine is the important time in the formation of tubers. By infesting the vines at this time, the disease shortens the growing period about two weeks, causing the large percentage of small potatoes.

If these affected leaves are examined with a high power magnifying glass it will be discovered that the tissues or cells of the leaf are permeated with little threads or strands of the fungus, which act like roots in absorbing the food supply of the leaf. If the leaf is thoroughly torn apart, very often at the ends of the little short threads will be found minute club-shaped bodies called spores, which serve a similar purpose as do the seeds to the higher plants. (See Fig. 2.) This little fungus plant grows and develops similar to the way of the potato on which it feeds. The little thread-like plants are wholly imperceptible to the naked eye. The black spots visible on the fungus are only the evidence of destroyed tissue, resulting from the breaking down of the plant cells by the parasitic fungus plant. The fungus plant on the potato vine is as dependent upon weather conditions and food supply for development as is the potato vine upon which it feeds and lives.

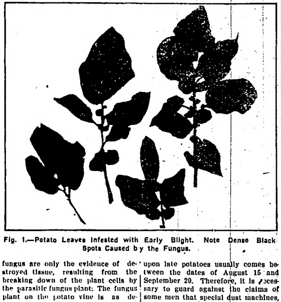

Fig. 1.—Potato Leaves Infested with Early Blight. Note Dense Black Spots Caused by the Fungus.

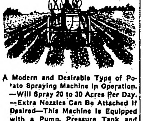
It will now be understood why some potato growers associate the rapid development of this disease with the recurrence of certain weather conditions. The weather is made the cause of the disease, although no account is taken of the presence of the little fungus plant which may have been living dormant upon the vines for some time. It has been observed repeatedly that those growers who are successful in spraying are men who have taken the pains to study into the simple facts just mentioned upon the development of this disease. The principle involved then in successful potato spraying is as follows:



A Modern and Desirable Type of Potato Spraying Machine in Operation. —Will Spray 20 to 30 Acres Per Day. —Extra Nozzles Can Be Attached If Desired—This Machine Is Equipped with a Pump, Pressure Tank and Safety Valve.

During the rapid development of the disease, the mass of thread-like mycelium is growing very rapidly in and upon the leaf. The minute spore-like bodies (see Fig. 2) are being produced on the surface of the black spots already noted. These spores, when they light on the leaf, germinate and grow, causing another black spot where the cells of the leaf are destroyed. During favorable weather conditions, and very often when the vines are weakened by injury, this multiplication of the fungus progresses at an inconceivably rapid rate, and is wholly imperceptible to the naked eye. When the Bordeaux mixture, or other fungicide is applied to the leaf, these little spores and mycellae threads cannot develop on the leaf. The copper in Bordeaux mixture acts as poison upon the fungus plant. For this reason Bordeaux mixture must be applied at certain times and must, as a rule, be used for diseases like potato blight which infest and grow for a time upon the surface of the leaf. After the disease gains general infestation of the plant, only partial benefit can be expected from spraying, by preventing a rapid infestation and spread of the disease from new spores. Hence the usual direction, "Be on time."

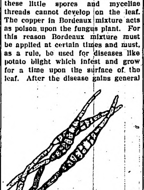


Fig. 2.—Enlarged Drawing of Spores or "Seeds" of the Potato Blight Fungus. The Spores Are Borne on Short Fruiting Branches. Magnified 385 Diameters.

Although very often the Bordeaux mixture and poison for the beetles may be combined, this method cannot always be relied upon. It will be noted that the destructive season of the beetles upon late potatoes lies between the dates July 1 and August 10. It must be noted also that the season of greatest destruction from blight upon late potatoes usually comes between the dates of August 15 and September 20. Therefore, it is necessary to guard against the claims of some men that special dust machines, which are adaptable to applying poisons, may also be used in combination with dust sprays for the blight. However, the same machine sometimes can be used for both purposes. The station has had excellent results from combining the arsenates used against the beetles with a weak Bordeaux mixture. When this combination is put on early in the season, care should be taken to keep the pressure down so that the material is not wasted. The weak Bordeaux mixture used prevents any injuries which might result from some mistake in mixing the arsenic compounds. In midsummer the Bordeaux mixture would also have some fungicidal value. The station has applied with success the different poisons in combination with lime water, which also prevents injuries from free acid in the poison. It must be remembered that to successfuly control the beetles, the poison must be applied immediately or soon after the eggs hatch. For this reason, when potatoes are raised on a large scale, it is necessary to have machinery which covers a wide area in a day's time. Weak Bordeaux mixture is made by combining four pounds of copper sulphate with eight pounds of lime to 100 gallons of water containing the poison. This weak Bordeaux mixture should be made in the same manner as the standard Bordeaux mixture.

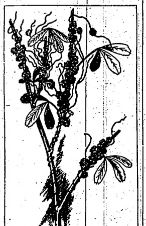
Disking Land.—Few men realize the great advantage to be secured in disking land before breaking for corn. Where corn is to follow corn a weighted disk harrow can be used, not only for a stalk cutter, but for a pulverizer of the surface and the saving of the humus of the corn stalk, which is lost where they are burned, together with the greater ease with which the land can be broken make such a method of handling very desirable. One of the greatest benefits, however, comes from the much better connection that is made between the bottom of the furrow and the turned soil where the layer that is turned under is pulverized instead of hard and cloddy, as is too often the case.

MANY ENEMIES OF THE ALFALFA PLANT

Weeds, Rodents, Insects and Disease Have to be Reckoned With by the Grower—By J. M. Westgate, Assistant Government Agrostologist.

Over a considerable portion of the country weeds constitute the worst enemy of alfalfa. This is especially true in the humid sections and in those parts of the west and southwest where the bulk of the rainfall comes during the comparatively mild winters. Witch-grass or couch-grass in New York and the New England states, crab-grass in the eastern states south of New York, bluegrass in the bluegrass sections, and the "foxtail" or wild millets and crab-grass in the central states are the worst enemies in the respective sections from the standpoint of the alfalfa plant.

In the irrigated sections of the west, especially in those sections characterized by rainfall during the comparatively mild winters, the growth of the wild barleys is a decided drawback to the successful production of alfalfa. They mature shortly before the first cutting of alfalfa, and the beards of the grass heads frequently ruin the first crop of hay, which is sometimes burned to destroy the grass seed. These wild barleys are also known as foxtail grass, squirrel-tail grass, and wall barley.



Mature Dodder Plant on an Alfalfa Stem.

Since alfalfa is not usually a clean-cultivated crop the problem of weed destruction is a serious one. Disking is usually the most effective remedy for weeds, as the alfalfa is generally benefited by the operation, while the weeds are greatly injured, owing to their different root systems. In sections where the wild barleys are troublesome it is sometimes thought necessary to burn the first crop of hay. Another method is to cut the first crop while the wild barley is still immature and feed the mixture of alfalfa and grass hay. The objection to this method is that it necessitates the cutting of the alfalfa when too young. A heavy growth of crab-grass is sometimes burned in the early spring.

Dodder is one of the worst weeds so far as alfalfa is concerned. The accompanying illustration indicates the general appearance of the mature plant. The dodder seeds germinate in the ground and the young plants soon attach themselves to the alfalfa seedlings. As soon as the threadlike stem is firmly attached to the alfalfa plant the stem connecting it with the ground withers away. Thenceforth the dodder lives entirely on the alfalfa. It is very difficult to eradicate when once established, and for this reason great care should be taken to avoid introducing it with the alfalfa seed at seeding time. Grazing close with sheep has been recommended as being effective in holding dodder in check. If dodder appears in isolated spots through the field, it is advisable to cut the affected alfalfa plants very low and remove them. Destroying the dodder by burning with different inflammable materials has occasionally proved successful, but it is apt to be more expensive than the removal of the affected portions of the plants. If the stand of alfalfa is badly affected with dodder, the alfalfa should be plowed up before the dodder goes to seed and the land kept in cultivated crops for two or more years.

The worst animal pests are gophers, ground squirrels, prairie dogs, and mice. These are especially troublesome in the western half of the country, where they injure the alfalfa by eating the roots as well as the foliage. The mounds of gophers are very annoying, as they interfere with mowing. These pests are less troublesome where irrigating water is available with which to drown them out. The burrows, however, cause the waste of much water when irrigating. Poisoning and destruction by traps and cats are the best means of holding the pests in check.

Grasshoppers are at present the worst insect enemies with which alfalfa must contend. These are most troublesome in the arid sections of the west, where the alfalfa fields may be the only succulent growth for miles, and the grasshoppers from large areas congregate upon the relatively small fields of alfalfa. They are also especially destructive to the alfalfa in the semi-arid sections where alfalfa must be produced without irrigation. A flock of turkeys is often efficient in holding grasshoppers in check, as is also a sheet-iron device known as a "hopperdozer," which is run over a field and catches the grasshoppers in an open oil-filled pan.

Another very effective means of destroying grasshoppers is to disk the fields in late winter. This exposes the half-developed young to the early spring freezes and to the attacks of birds. This operation is also to some extent effective against the alfalfa webworm.

Blister beetles also prove troublesome at times when they appear in considerable numbers. The general practice is to cut the alfalfa on the appearance of any such pests, when they will be forced to starve or migrate. The alfalfa and clover chalcis fly found also in Europe and Siberia, is proving destructive to the alfalfa-seed crop wherever it is grown.

There are two general classes of diseases which affect the alfalfa plant, namely, those which affect the roots and those which attack the stems and leaves. Of the former, root-rot is the most important. This disease is practically identical with cotton root-rot and prevents the successful production of alfalfa in considerable portions of eastern and southern Texas. It spreads in widening circles throughout the field, causing an almost complete destruction of the stand as the disease progresses. There is no practical remedy, and land so affected must be kept out of alfalfa or cotton for several years. Another disease which attacks the alfalfa roots is the "sclerotium" disease, which appears as black excrescences about the size of wheat grains. There is no practical remedy for this disease other than to throw the land out of alfalfa for a number of years.

Of the diseases which attack the leaves and stems, the leaf-spot disease is the most common. This appears as minute black spots on the mature leaves. Leaf-rust produces small reddish spots on the leaves. Powdery mildew and downy mildew form whitish patches of considerable size on the leaves. Another form of leaf-spot disease is sometimes destructive. This appears in the form of well-defined circular spots which show numerous small black dots scattered over their surfaces. The most effective remedy is to cut the plants when any of these diseases begins to prove destructive. This process invigorates the plant, and most of the spores by which the disease is spread are destroyed. The anthracnose disease attacks the stems and forms purple patches which gradually increase in size. This is destructive locally in the east. No effective remedy has been discovered for this disease.

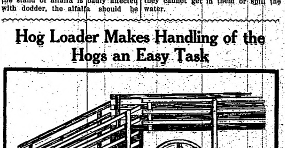
Hog Loader Makes Handling of the Hogs an Easy Task



A loader for attachment to the wagon is made of two pine boards six inches wide by nine feet long fastened together by the three cross-pieces of proper length so that they will fit between the sides of the wagon box. A floor is laid on these cross-pieces and short strips of lath to prevent hogs slipping. At the upper end the sides are notched to fit on the bottom of wagon box and two staples on each side complete the fastening. The construction of the rack is shown in the illustration.

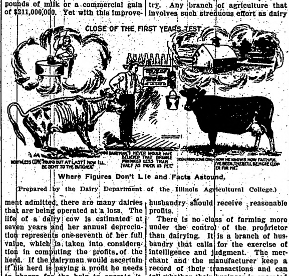
RUNNING THE DAIRY TO PRODUCE A PROFIT

Weed Out the Robber Cows, and Feed the Good Cows Left to Limit of Their Capacity—By C. M. Smalls.

While the consumption of milk per capita shows an increase, the number of cows per capita show a decrease. This would seem to indicate a marked improvement in the development of the dairy cow of the country. According to the statisticians there are 21,194,000 milch cows in the country, an average of one for every four of population.

In the decade of 1890 to 1900 the average production of every dairy cow showed an increase of 1,000 pounds of milk or a commercial gain of $211,000,000. Yet with this improvement admitted, there are many dairies that are being operated at a loss. The life of a dairy cow is estimated at seven years and her annual depreciation represents one-seventh of her full value, which is taken into consideration in computing the profits of the herd. If the dairyman would ascertain if his herd is paying a profit he needs to charge for the help to operate it, the cost of the feed, the interest on the investment and the normal depreciation of the value of the cows. All these items enter into fixed operating charges and need to be deducted from the gross receipts of the dairy before profits can be computed. The receipts of the dairy should not only pay the operating expenses and fixed charges, but also leave a liberal balance for profit.



CLOSE OF THE FIRST YEARS TEST
WORTHLESS COW: FOUND OUT AT LAST! NOW I'LL BE SENT TO THE BUTCHER.
DAIRYMAN: I NEVER WOULD HAVE BELIEVED THAT BRINDLE PRODUCED LESS THAN HALF AS MUCH AS PET.
HIGH PRODUCING COW: NOW HE KNOWS HOW FAITHFUL I'VE BEEN, THERE'LL BE MORE CLOVER FOR ME.
Where Figures Don't Lie and Facts Astound.

(Prepared by the Dairy Department of the Illinois Agricultural College.)

The dairyman is entitled to liberal compensation, as he represents the most strenuous branch of husbandry. The dairyman is confined to his work every day in the year and follows a branch of live stock industry that needs methodical, systematic management. The dairyman is compelled to place business before pleasure or suffer serious losses. Regularity in feeding and milking is one of the great secrets of success in the dairy industry. Any branch of agriculture that involves such strenuous effort as dairy husbandry should receive reasonable profits.

There is no class of farming more under the control of the proprietor than dairying. It is a branch of husbandry that calls for the exercise of intelligence and judgment. The merchant and the manufacturer keep a record of their transactions and can tell whether their business is operated at a profit or loss. The milk producer can keep a record of his cows and weed out the unprofitable members and replace them with better performers. To keep a record of the individual production of the different members of the herd will add interest to dairy husbandry and show the proprietor how to increase his profits.

FEEDING THE CALVES SKIM MILK

By Prof. A. L. Haecker, Nebraska Agricultural College.

The use of the hand separator has brought about the rearing of many calves on hand separator skim milk. The calf stanchion is the best equipment for calf feeding. This stanchion should be supplied with a little box or manger, and the stanchion should be used both in the calf pen and in the calf pasture. Care should be used to feed the skim milk fresh and warm from the separator, giving small rations in preference to large ones.

With the present prices paid for butter fat it requires a rich man to afford his calves the luxury of nursing their dams, and the one who says he cannot afford the time to milk and feed calves is either getting a very large salary or is well enough off so that he need not economize in this way. This does not, of course, refer to the man raising pure-bred beef cattle or the range conditions. There is quite a diversity of opinion in the method of rearing a calf on skim milk, and I do not assume that mine is the only one or that it is particularly better than others. But I have been very successful in raising calves for the past 20 years and attribute this success largely to the method employed.

After the calf is removed from the cow it should be given its mother's milk for a few days, and then any whole milk will answer, but it is better to give milk that is low in per cent. of butter fat than that which is high. Feed small rations in clean pails. When the calf is from ten days to two weeks old it may be changed from whole milk to skim milk by adding a small amount of skim milk, say one-fourth, and increasing this per cent. at each feeding until the change is made, and the calf is on a skim milk ration. The skim milk to be the best for calves should be fresh and warm from the separator.

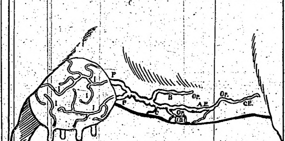
Now is the time to start feeding a butter fat substitute and this may be given in the milk until the calf is able to eat ground feed. Oil meal makes a good calf feed and a little added to the skim milk will answer the purpose. Here is when the calf stanchion will come in handy, for with such an equipment the calf can be taught to eat grain much earlier, on account of its being held in front of the grain and its being free from the annoyance of the other calves.

A good calf feed may be made by mixing the following food stuffs: Blood meal ten pounds, bone meal five pounds, oil meal 20 pounds, oat meal 20 pounds, corn meal 20 pounds. This mixed well together and given in small rations after the skim milk has been fed. The calf should also have free access to water and salt as well as hay or pasture as the season may require. The grain may be changed to simply corn and oats or bran as the calf grows older, say after three months old. In this way good calves may be raised in an economic way, and the valuable butter fat will be saved.

Dehorning Cows.—Do not dehorn dairy stock after the middle of March in central latitudes. As soon as green flies come they are almost sure to lay eggs in the wounds which hatch maggots. The dehorning itself is a severe enough shock to the cow, and the ravages of maggots will almost finish the animal. Dehorn as cold weather comes on, rather than at its close.

Hay for Cow.—Timothy hay is not a good cow feed. If you have a surplus of timothy and are short on clover, it will pay to sell the timothy hay and buy clover hay for the cows.

Judging the Qualities of a Dairy Cow



Can a dairy cow be judged by outward form or by any special character? There are judges who claim that they can pick out the animals of good dairy form with a fair degree of assurance that these will be the best milkers. Other judges, and among these are Prof. Dean, declare that form counts for little or nothing, and that all depends upon the performance at the pail. Most practical men, however, would allow themselves to be influenced by the size and apeparance of the udder when purchasing a cow. The development of the mammary veins is also worthy of note. In the illustration the situation of the veins is indicated by I, I, I, on the udder. The extensions of these veins along the abdomen are indicated F, F., and the branches by B.

Overtaken.

A wizened little man charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half, or in this case better two-thirds, was a big, square-jawed woman with a determined eye.

The judge listened to the plaintiff's recital of wrongs with interest.

"Where did you meet this woman who, according to your story, has treated you so dreadfully?" his honor asked.

"Well, judge," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to glare defiantly at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."

Fruit and Temperance.

In America a distinctly increased demand for fruit has been noticed within the last year or two, and is ascribed in the first instance to the growth of the temperance movement. As a man loses the taste for alcohol so he encourages the more natural and primitive appetite for fresh fruit.

HARDSHIPS OF ARMY LIFE

The experience of David W. Martin, a retired merchant of Bolivar, Mo., is just like thousands of others. Mr. Martin says: "I think I have had kidney disease ever since the war. During an engagement my horse fell on me, straining my back and injuring the kidneys. I have been told I had a floating kidney. I had intense pain in the back, headaches and dizzy spells, and the action of the bladder very irregular. About three years ago I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and inside of a comparatively short time was entirely rid of kidney trouble."

"I am convinced," said the proprietor of the jeweler's shop, as the plate-glass window shivered into a million fragments and the chauffeur and his machine began to nestle behind the counter, "that the taxicab has come to stay."

Officially Ignored.

On the relief train that had been rushed to the scene of the railway wreck was a newspaper reporter.

The first victim he saw was a man whose eyes were in mourning and whose left arm was in a sling. With his hair full of dirt, one end of his shirt collar flying loose, and his coat ripped up the back, the victim was sitting on the grass and serenely contemplating the landscape.

"How many people are hurt?" asked the reporter, hurrying up to him.

"I haven't heard of anybody being hurt, young man," said the other.

"How did this wreck happen?"

"I haven't heard of any wreck."

"You haven't? Who are you, anyhow?"

"I don't know that it's any of your business, but I'm the claim agent of the road."

TOTAL LOSS OF HAIR

Seemed Imminent—Scalp Was Very Scaly and Hair Came Out by Handfuls—Scalp Now Clear and

New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Penn., May 7 and 21, 1908."

A Business Letter.

It is supposed that business letters are deficient in humor. Still, there have been exceptions, and the latest, sent by a member of the well known wholesale soap making firm of (let us say) Cake & Son, is one of the most brilliant. A retail dealer in a small way had sent for a consignment of their goods: "Gentlemen" (he writes), "wherefor have you not sent me the sope? Is it bekawse you think my money is not so good as nobody elses? Dam you, Cake & Son; wherfor have you not sent the sope? Please send sope at once, and oblige, your respectfully, Richard Jones. P. S.—Since writing the above my wife has found the sope under the counter."

A Winter's Tale.

Mme. De Navarro praised at a luncheon in New York American wit.

"It was horribly cold the other afternoon," she said. "A bitter wind whirled the dry snow through the air. The policemen had red, swollen faces, and all the teamsters, as they drove, kept slapping their poor frostbitten hands against their breasts.

"Getting into my hansom I said to the driver:

"'This is real winter weather, isn't it?'

"The driver nodded and smiled grimly.

"'I give you my word, ma'am,' said he. 'I ain't seen a butterfly all day.'"

SICK DOCTOR

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way is valuable:

"An attack of grip, so severe it came near making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four tablespoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food; it tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

"I am convinced that were Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians, it would save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment."

Absolutely the most perfect food in the world. Trial of Grape-Nuts 10 days proves. "There's a Reason."

Spring is here. If you don't believe it look at the almanac.

It is customery to cuss the legislature, but the late session seems to deserve it more than any of its predecessors.

Governor Johnson has signed the anti-cigarette bill, and it is now against the law to expose for sale or give away coffin-nails.

Senator Bailey threatens a constitutional argument against the tariff. We have been expecting the menace for some time. The tariff is a terrible pretext to provocation.

There is talk on the iron ranges of seceding and creating a new state to be called North Minnesota. Here's a chance for Thief River to get in on the ground floor and go after the state' capitol.

The newspapers in speaking of Kermit Roosevelt making a fuss during a dollar limit poker game on shipboard seem to think the small limit an excuse for the young man. The Northfield News editor adds that a Quaker father taught us many many years ago that gambling was gambling whether it was for marbles, doughnuts, pennies or dollars.

Home-seekers will be greatly encouraged by the announcement that the interior department will soon throw open for settlement about a million acres of land which formerly belonged to the Crow Indian reservation in Montana. Opportunities to secure homes by entering upon government lands are growing fewer as the country fills up, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconisn, and in comparatively short time the land rushes will be reminiscenses to which future "old timers" may point as experiences that will never again be enjoyed by new-comers.

DEATH OF MR. ROSING.

Leonard A. Rosing, whose death at St. Paul was announced last week, has been for many years one of the prominent figures in Minnesota politics, being at the time of his death a member of the state board of control.

Mr. Rosing first came into public notice in the campaign of 1896, when he organized the silver forces of the state. Defeated at the convention which selected delegates to the national convention, he nevertheless became the leader of the state democracy after the nomination of Bryan, and in the three Lind campaigns was chairman of the state committee, and in 1899-1900 was private secretary to Governor Lind. In 1902 he was candidate of his party for governor, being defeated by Governor Van Sant.

He was a man of strong convictions and of great ability as an organizer, having the happy faculty of making and holding friends. His friendships were not confined to his own party, for even those he opposed recognized his ability and his sense of fair play. In this connection, the Northfield News editor says:

"While it was as an adversary that he knew him best, the writer bears ready testimony to Mr. Rosing's capacity and resourcefulness, to his honorable methods and the eminent fairness which characterized him. Mr. Rosing was the kind of man to win confidence and to make friends. We know of no man who has taken so active and so prominent a part in the public affairs of this state who enjoys in so high a degree the respect of his opponent. However earnest he may have been in his advocacy of any cause he espoused, there was no bitterness in any campaign in which he took part that could be traced to him. He was a good man, a competent and conscientious public servant, and his death in the very prime of life will be widely and sincerely mourned."

Remarkable Career of Works Bill in Legislature.

It is hard to escape a note of jubilation in commmenting upon the passage of the Works bill through the legislature, says the St. Paul Dispatch. It certainly was a remarkable procedure, and, everything considered, almost without a precedent in the leigsleative history of the state.

Here is a measure which opens the door and smoothes the way to what is scarcely less than an economic revolution, and yet, so chrystalized is the sentiment that it is adopted by both branches of the legislature without one dissenting vote.

True, the enactment of the law binds no city or town to the adoption of the simplified form of government and its terms are essentially elective, but nevertheless, it is remarkable that it should have received the solid affirmative vote of a deliberative body in which the practical side of politics is never wholly negligible. It is so remarkable that it can be attributed only to the sweep of a sentiment amounting to a public conviction, and too powerful for resistance. It was coming; it has come; it is bound to stay.

Senator Works and Representative Jorgenson, as sponsers in their respective bodies, of the advanced idea, exhibited the statesmanlike qualities of keen preception and thorough appreciation. It is no small thing to be the advance agents of such a propaganda.

There would be shotgun matinees, lynching bees, hatchet parties, gore, imprisonment, desolation and misery. Many people continually find fault with the newspapers when as a matter of fact they owe their very standing in the community to the editorial waste basket."

THE TONNAGE TAX

Provisions of Bill That Caused Big Fight

The tonnage tax divides lands containing iron ore into two classes. Mines producing over 20,000 tons of ore in a year are put in Cass A, and other properties in Class B. The Class B mines are to be taxed in all respects on the adyallorem basis. The class A mines are to be assessed on the valuation basis just as now, and are to pay all local taxes in the same manner as other property. Instead of paying state levies on their valuation, they are to pay the state a tonnage tax on the output.

"In lieu of such ad valorem tax for state purposes," says the bill, "on such land and ore there shall be levied and collected a tax upon each and every long ton of the output of such mine or mines based upon the percentage in metallic iron, when dried at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, as follows:

"Ore yielding less than 49 per cent in metallic iron, 2 cents per ton.

"Ore yielding 49 per cent or over and less than 54 per cent, 3 cents per ton.

"Ore yielding 54 per cent or over and less than 59 per cent, 4 cents per ton.

"Ore yielding 59 per cent or over, 5 cents per ton.

"Said tax shall be paid into the general fund of the state treasury at the time and in the manner hereinafter provided. The provisions of this act shall apply to taxes on lands leased by the state the same as other lands. Ore heretofore taken from any mine and placed in stock piles, shall be subject to taxation for all purposes, as personal property and shall not be affected by the provisions of this act; but ore hereafter taken from mines subject to a tonnage tax as herein provided, remaining in stock piles on May 1 of any year, shall be assessed the same as other personal property for all other than state purposes; but no tax for state purposes shall be levied or collected on the ad valorem basis upon ore in stock piles, or otherwise, which is subject to or which has paid a tonnage tax for state purposes, as herein provided. In determining the boundary of the land containing mineral land of class A, which shall be exempt from ad valorem taxes for state purposes, the taxing authorities shall take the smallest subdivision according to the United States government survey, upon which the mining operations for the production of such ore were carrid on."

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 48 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

There is an evaporation from the body going on continually, day and night, through the pores and glands of the skin. This is nature's way of maintaining the proper temperature of our systems and preserving the softness and flexibility of the skin, and so long as the blood is free from impurities no trouble will result. When, however, the blood from any cause becomes infected with humors and acids, these too must be expelled, and coming in contact with the delicate fibres and tissues with which the skin is so abundantly supplied they produce irritation and inflammation, and the effect is shown by Eczema, Acne, Tetter, and skin affections of various kinds. These impurities and humors get into the blood through a deranged or inactive condition of the system; the members whose duty it is to carry off the waste and refuse matter of the body fail to properly perform their work, and this impure, fermenting matter is left in the system to be absorbed by the blood. The skin is not only affected by poisons generated within the system, but poisons from without, such as Poison Oak, Poison Ivy, Nettle Rash, etc., enter through the open pores and glands, and so thoroughly do they become rooted in the blood that they are ever present, or return at certain seasons of each year to torment the sufferer. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., cannot cure skin diseases. True, such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, and aids in keeping the skin clean, but it does not reach the real cause, and at best can be only palliating and soothing. A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only certain cure for skin diseases. S. S. S., a gentle acting, safe blood purifier, made entirely of vegetable ingredients of the forest and field, is the proper treatment. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation, and neutralizes the acids and humors, thoroughly cleansing and purifying the blood, and curing skin affections of every kind. It supplies to the blood the fresh, nutritive qualities necessary to sustain the skin and all other parts of the body, and rids the blood of any and all poisons. S. S. S. cures Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Poison Oak and Ivy, Nettle Rash, and all other skin troubles, and cures them permanently by removing every trace of the cause from the blood. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired furnished free to all who write.

> I have used your S. S. S., spring and fall, for the past two years, with the result that it entirely relieved me of a form of Eczema which my doctor was unable to cure. My arms, lower limbs, and, in fact, the biggest portion of my whole body was affected, and when I first began S. S. S. the itching, etc., was worse, but I continued the remedy with the result that the dry, itching eruption entirely disappeared. I think a great deal of your medicine, and have recommended it to others with good results. It is the best blood medicine made, and I can conscientiously recommend it for the cure of all blood and skin affections. CHAS. HORSTMAN.

It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak stomach, heart or kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling nerve. When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days and see! CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress from Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes in Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it indegestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or catarrh of the stomach; it does not matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to the Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is food fermentation—food souring; the digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nauseau, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constiptaion, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong.

Stop this fermentation and begin eating of what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin. 27-80

Do You Love Your Country?

In coming to Red Lake Falls, I find a class of people with whom it does one good to meet. They are kind, genial and obliging, and, I think, are looking to the good interests of the city and community as all good citizens should.

The city of Red Lake Falls, I find, is located in a beauty spot, and one, too the like of which, very few cities can boast; I find also that the surrounding country is as good as the average in any community.

The land here will average up with land, less than 100 miles from here, in North Dakota, where it is being sold for as high as $50.00 to $60,00 per acre; our land is as good, we have more advantages, in the nature of our creameries, etc.; then why isn't our country as good? It is, and better.

What we want is more confidence: when we have a good horse for sale, we don't tell the wouldbe purchaser the poor qualities of the horse and let him find out for himself the good qualities; indeed no. Or if our neighbor has a good horse for sale, do we, as his friend and neighbor tell to strangers, or wouldbe purchasers, anything that is likely to spoil the sale, so long as we know that the horse is as good as the average, and our friend is asking a reasonable price? Again, no.

What this country wants is more farms owned and farmed by the owners; the land, with fertilizign and rotation of crops, (rotate with clover etc.) can be made very productive, and combining with agriculture, the dairying industry, there is all the chances in the world of this becoming a community of wealth.

Smile, and the world smiles with you, "knock" and you go alone; for the cheerful grin will let you in where the kicker is never known. Growl, and the way looks dreary, laugh and the way is bright; for a wholesome smile brings sunshine, while a frown shuts out the light. Sing and the world's harmonious, grumble and things go wrong, and all the time, you are out of rhyme with the busy bustling throng. Kick and there's trouble brewing, whistle and life is gay, and the world's in tune like a day in June and the clouds all melt away.

Don't knock, but boost.

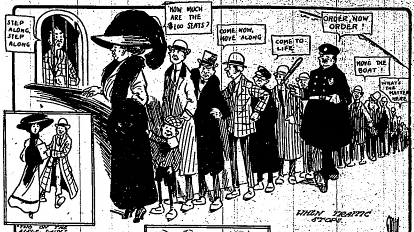
"THE BOX OFFICE MAN"



"SMILE AS IF YOU LIKED IT."

"I believe the public has a right to expect endless patience from the box office man," said an actor, who is a veteran theater ticket seller. "If you go into a hat store you expect the salesman to show you hats until you're suited. If a lady goes to buy silk the clerk is expected to pull down roll after roll until she is suited. Why not at the box office?"

"I fail to find it funny when a purchaser asks me how much are the three dollar seats—or something equally foolish. I know they are thinking about going to the opera and are anxious to get something desirable. I believe courtesy can be demanded of the box office man, and I believe the box office man should be able to supply it.

"Here are some of the box office rules which I had framed up. They express my creed:"

1. You must be a mind reader.
2. You must always be polite, but not familiar.
3. Never assert your rights.
4. Take all; say nothing.
5. Give the people what seats they want, even if you have to get them back from the person who bought them a week in advance.
6. Say, "Please, Sir," etc.; it costs nothing and makes a good impression.
7. Don't argue—an experienced ticket seller never does.
8. Never ask "How many," "What price?" "For when?" You are supposed to know.
9. Always wear a smile; look pleasant when you are called a liar, and beg pardon for not knowing it without being told.
10. When a lady stands for an hour or two selecting a seat don't suggest to her to bring her sewing and spend the afternoon, as she might be offended.
11. When a man comes up to the window smoking a bad cigar and blows the smoke in your face, smile as if you liked it, and ask him the brand so as to make him feel good.
12. When a person leaves a quarter be sure to call him back, for they will come back later and declare they left a dollar.
13. When asked if the play is good be sure to say yes. You may as well; they won't believe you, anyway.
14. When a lady comes up and asks for a balcony seat down stairs, don't look foolish, but give her a seat in the middle of the longest row, so that she can't get out to get at you.
15. Study all periodicals, almanacs, timetables, weather reports, etc., for you never know what questions you will have to answer.
16. Well, after all, is life worth living?

Snowballs Rolled by the Wind.

A correspondent from Nicholville, a town in the northern part of New York state, tells of a storm lasting several hours, during which time the wind made snowballs. It began with small lumps of snow which it rolled over and over till they were too large and heavy to move. The ground was almost covered with these balls, some being as much as ten inches in diameter. A great many people noticed them, and some of the oldest inhabitants of the place said they never had seen such a thing before. Nevertheless the occurrence is in reality not extremely rare.

SIBERIAN HARDTACK.

Many Uses of a Bread Much Favored in Cold Countries.

Of all the hardtack breads of the universe I have found by actual experience the small ringed bread of Siberia the most substantial. When the Russian engineering parties were constructing the Siberian railroads this white ring bread (with the coarse rye bread) was their main staff of life.

It is made without salt or yeast, and is first steamed, then lightly baked to expel the moisture. Some curious uses were made of these breads by the engineers. When soaked in hot pure tallow for a few moments till they sank they were used in soups or soaked in and eaten with tea during the severe winter months. This tallow bread was considered the most heat producing article in the dietary. It should be utilized by our Arctic explorers.

Another curious use to which it is put is as an extempore candle, or coffee pot boiler. A nail is used to make about eight holes in the tallow ring bread; wax vestas are placed in these and ignited. It will burn slowly for about an hour, emitting a strong heat sufficient to warm and light a small tent and boil the tea or coffee water. There is a rather strong odor of toasting bread, but that is tolerated in preference to smoke. While sojourning with the engineers in Siberia I have also seen them using the larger sizes of ringed bread as makeshift quoits for Sunday afternoon sport in their tents, and the bread would stand the knocking about pretty well, and would eventually appear in the soup at the evening meal.

Small Siberian storekeepers also use the ringed bread as an abacus, or primitive counting apparatus for calculating small sums in rubles and kopeks, and simple figuring. Three strings are suspended above the counter; ten breads are strung on each; the top line represents the rubles (their money transactions rarely going above ten) and the two lower strings stand for the kopeks. Of course, the strings of bread can be increased to mount into the thousands and up if desired.

You may know some men if you know the people they know.

A BUZZLESS PHONOGRAPH.

German Inventor Replaces the Stylus With Compressed Air.

A recent German invention, it is expected, will obviate the buzzing or rumbling sound of phonographs, caused by the friction of the needle resting upon the surface of the rapidly revolving disk or cylinder.

The new device combines the leading elements of the phonograph and the siren. The novel and essential feature is the substitution of a current of compressed air for the needle or stylus of Edison's invention.

On the surface of a large record cylinder tangential incisions are made. A second and perfectly smooth cylinder rests close against this perforated cylinder, revolving in unison with it. A constantly varying succession of minute openings between their surfaces is presented, due to the incisions on the record cylinder.

When a powerful blast of compressed air is directed upon the line of contact between the two cylinders, at such an angle as to be an exact tangent to the surfaces of both, sounds are evoked identically as in the case of an ordinary siren. The cylinders thus far employed are about ten times as large as an ordinary phonographic cylinders, and this renders the instrument somewhat clumsy.

Cromwell's Seal.

The seal of Oliver Cromwell, now in the possession of a prominent family in Wales, is a plain gold mounted corundrum stone five-eighths of an inch in diameter. It dates from 1653 and was used on several of his deeds. The whole of the Lord's Prayer is engraved upon it.

Mysterious Disappearance of Lemuel Stagg

"It's a queer thing to me," said the Buffalo man, commenting upon a story in the days' news, "how a prominent citizen can vanish in broad daylight without leaving a clew. There's something uncanny about it."

"That's exactly why these so-called mysterious disappearances are so fascinating," remarked the passenger from Baltimore; "and yet it's the easiest thing in the world for a man to drop off the earth, as the saying goes. No matter how prominent you may be, you can walk along for blocks along a crowded city street without seeing anybody you know, or who knows you. You can step out of that crowd onto a street car without being noticed. You can ride for miles, and when you get off no man on that car will remember that you were a passenger. Most people are too occupied with their own affairs to pay any attention to strangers, and, unless a man has something distinctive about him to attract special notice, he can travel from one end of the country to the other without leaving a trace."

"That's true enough when you are referring to the man who wants to disappear," said the red-headed man in the corner, "but how about the man who doesn't?"

"That, of course, is more difficult," admitted the passenger from Baltimore, "but chance and calculation can form many curious combinations to bring about that end. Take, for instance, the case of Lemuel Skaggs, with which I've no doubt all of you are familiar."

"Never heard of Skaggs," said the red-headed man in the corner, and the other passengers confessed themselves equally ignorant.

"Then I suppose I'll have to illustrate my illustration," laughed the Baltimore traveler. "I thought everybody had heard of the Skaggs case, and yet, come to think of it, there's no reason for surprise. The newspapers these days keep us so well supplied with sensations that events which are on everybody's tongue today are forgotten tomorrow, and I doubt if there are many even in Baltimore who remember the disappearance of Lemuel Skaggs.

"This man Skaggs was a commission merchant of some wealth and prominence in public affairs. He had never held office, but had always taken an active interest in politics, and there were few men who had a larger acquaintance. He was married, had several children, and a beautiful home. One evening in March, in '92 or '93, I'm not sure which, he left his office about 6 o'clock and started down the street. On a corner, two blocks away, he stopped and talked with a friend a few minutes, apparently in good health and good spirits; said he was going home to dress for a social engagement after dinner. He turned down a side street on the way to his car, and that was the end of Lemuel Skaggs, so far as the knowledge of any one who knew him went.

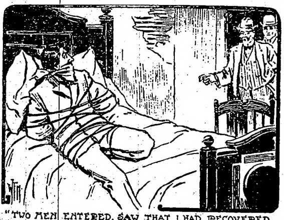
"His troubled wife walked the floor all night. The next morning she sent for her two brothers, and started a quiet investigation. They acquired all the information they could, which was practically nothing, and then employed a private detective agency. It was a week before the police were notified, and in the meantime there had been collected nothing but negative facts. He was not in financial difficulties. His books disclosed a prosperous business. He had no debts worth mentioning. There seemed to be no social entanglements, and if he had a bitter enemy in the world no one knew of it. A large reward was offered. All sorts of theories were propounded, and his record from birth was raked over as with a fine tooth comb, but all the theories and all the facts helped not a bit to solve the mystery. Skaggs was gone. That's all there was to it, and after about three months the case passed from public attention and the police laid it on the shelf as one of the unraveled riddles of the department.

"But Lemuel Skaggs wasn't dead. He hadn't even left town. He hadn't even left the block in which he was last seen. Six months after his disappearance he walked slowly and feebly up the walk leading to his house, opened the door with his own key, and presented himself to the woman who by this time had become convinced that she was a widow. He was but little more than a shadow of his former self, his nerves were wrecked and he looked to be years older. He had on the same outer garments that he wore when he left his office six months before, but they were torn, dirty and greasy. It was a week before he could give a coherent account of himself, but I'll tell you the story as he told it after his health was restored.

"'A man never knows,' said he, 'where trouble is lying in wait for him, nor in what queer shape is may appear. When I left Charlie Hamilton at the corner I started for home, feeling as fine as I ever did in my life. I was stepping high, holding my head well up, and humming a tune of some kind. Suddenly I heard a metallic click at my feet, the earth opened under me, and down I shot. I didn't know any more for some time. When I come to myself I was lying on a little pile of coal on the floor of a very deep basement. Above me, fully twelve feet up, was the hole in the sidewalk through which I had plunged. It was a large circular hole, with an iron cover. I suppose the cover had been pushed a little bit to one side or carelessly placed, so that one edge was not supported. I had stepped on this free edge, the lid had dropped under my weight as if swung on a central pivot, and after I passed through had dropped back into place, leaving the hole covered as before.

"I was pretty badly bruised, and there was a cut on my head that was bleeding a good deal, but I soon found out that no bones were broken. I sat up, bound my handkerchief around my head to stop the flow of blood from the wound, and congratulated myself that it was no worse. The easiest way to get out, I thought, would be by way of the stairs or ladder leading up into the building. I was pretty weak, but managed to get to my feet, and, lighting a match, began the search for the exit. It was a long undivided basement, and I found the stairs at the other end of it. I went up to the first floor and entered a small hall. There was a door there, leading, I supposed, into the storeroom which faced the street. But the door was locked and the storekeeper and his clerks had no doubt gone home. The stairway continued to the second floor, and I painfully climbed up. Here a larger hall opened into two rooms. Both doors were shut, but, hearing voices in the farthest room, I raised my hand to knock. As I did so the door flew wide open and a man came out of the brightly lighted room so suddenly that he almost ran over me before he could check himself, and then, with an exclamation of surprise and a fierce oath, he grabbed me by the throat, and for the second time that evening I went down.

"When I opened my eyes again it was the next morning, or at any rate it was daylight. It might have been the next week for all I know. But no matter about the time; I wasn't at home. I soon realized that I was trussed up like a turkey, my hands tied behind my back, my legs doubled up and tied, an old rag fastened tightly over my mouth, and I was strapped to a bed that stood in a corner of an otherwise empty room. I couldn't move a thing but my eyelids. I suppose they didn't blindfold me because they were certain I had seen enough in the one brief glimpse I had got of that other room before I went down and out. I knew as soon as I got my wits together and recalled that scene that I was in the hands of a gang of counterfeiters. The question was, What would they do with me?



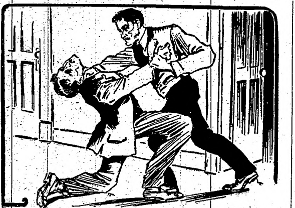
"TWO MEN ENTERED, SAW THAT I HAD RECOVERED CONSCIOUSNESS, REMOVED THE GAG AND ROUGHLY ORDERED ME TO EXPLAIN MY PRESENCE THERE."

"That question was quickly answered. Two men entered, saw that I had recovered consciousness, removed the gag and roughly ordered me to explain my presence there. I told them who I was and exactly what had happened, and there was evidence enough to make it plain to them that I was telling the truth. But it seems that they had just started on an extended campaign for the distribution of counterfeit money in Baltimore. Their plans had been well laid and were being successfully carried out. The counterfeits were so good that their existence was not even suspected as yet. To have turned me loose at that time would have necessitated an immediate flight and the abandonment of their plans, perhaps their capture. They didn't want to kill me, and so they decided that the only thing to do was to hold me a close prisoner until they had finished their work in Baltimore. It was pretty tough on me, but, looking at it from their standpoint, I couldn't blame them.

"'And there in that little back room,' said Skaggs, 'I have spent the last six months. There was no window and no ventilation. I was under constant guard, and most of the time was chained to the bed. The only time when my hands were wholly free was when they brought me my meals, which, I must say, were not bad. But I was kept in absolute ignorance of what was going on outside, and as I had nothing to do but think of my troubles and the grief my disappearance was causing to others, it is a wonder that I didn't go entirely crazy. No doubt I would if they had kept me much longer. But the other day they doped my coffee, and when I awoke they were gone and I was free to make my way out as best I could. I went down the stairs, out the back door of the building into an alley, made my way to a car unrecognized, and here I am.'

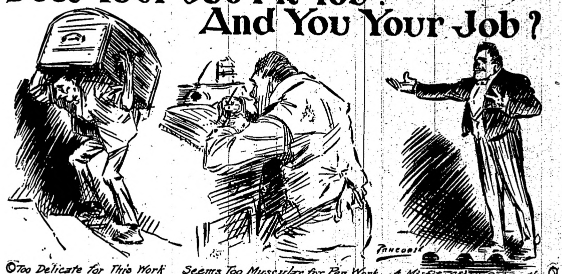
"That," concluded the Baltimore passenger, "is all there is to the case of Lemuel Skaggs.

"I am not superstitious," said the red-headed man in the corner, "but I have always believed it unlucky to walk over cellar doors and the like. Now I'm sure of it."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.



"HE GRABBED ME BY THE THROAT AND FOR THE SECOND TIME THAT EVENING I WENT DOWN."

Does Your Job Fit You? And You Your Job?



① Too Delicate for This Work ② Seems Too Muscular for Pen Work ③ A Misfit Often Seen—the Prize Fighter on the Stage

The distinguished prize fighter slammed the villain into unconsciousness with a wide swing of his strong right arm, slouched across the stage to the pallid heroine, and growled, in a voice meant to be melodramatic:

"Thank heaven, Gwendolyn, I have saved you from a fate worse than death."

"What did he say?" queried a back-seat orchestra patron of his neighbor.

"Said he'd saved 'er from a fate worse'n death—and he done it, too, you bet. He's got a punch'd save anybody from anything."

"Looks it. But his stage presence isn't, er—well, isn't of the romantic type."

"Sure not. But he's a perfect gent, and the greatest of 'em all on the stage, see?"

"I do—and yet I have had some doubts whether this particular job fits him as well, say, as it would Faversham."

It didn't; but fortunately for the distinguished one, he enjoyed a constitution rugged enough to avert fatal consequences.

Others whose jobs don't fit them sometimes prove less immune to the results, while the majority of the misfits just drag along, objurgating the hour when the "boss" gave them the chance to push a pen instead of telling them they were too husky for anything but hammer heaving, or deploring the day when they carried the first hod of bricks instead of staying a little longer in the congenial atmosphere of the perfume counter.

"Is it true that there are many people whose jobs don't fit them?" repeated Dr. William J. Dugan, assistant neurologist at Jefferson College hospital in Philadelphia, where many of the world's greatest specialists have had their training.

"Well, I should make a conservative estimate that the misfits in the various 'professions' amount to 40 or 50 per cent of the total. Those who are measurably fit assuredly number no more than 60 per cent, and possibly only 30 per cent are conspicuously fit.

"I have known many physicians who ought to have been mechanics—and would have made good ones; and I have known many mechanics who would be good physicians.

"Once, walking with a famous surgeon, I heard him call 'Hello' to a cart driver. It was a dump cart.

"'Know him?' I asked the famous surgeon.

"'For years,' he answered. 'He was in my class at college. He's found his proper job at last.'

"It is a fact, as important as it is little known, that every man should decide whether his job fits him in the light of serious moral and physical question. I've had cases where unfitness for the particular employment by which a livelihood was earned reduced men to nervous wrecks—patients who felt their lives were in a way misspent because they were in the wrong calling.

"I remember a woman who came to me with every symptom of nervous exhaustion, and the incidental statement that she worked in a store. I asked whether she did not hate her work. She promptly admitted that she did hate it.

"'You need no medicine,' I told her. 'You need change of occupation. Get some place in the country if you care for country life; and do it at once.'

Change Brought Back Health.

"She complied, and her health returned to her within a short time.

"While the fitness of one's occupation resolves itself into congeniality, if we are content to deal merely with the surface of things, every one should consider at least three essentials—an inborn love for the work itself, not for the money to be earned by it, but in the strict sense of a vocation—a calling to do it; the possession of a mental capacity for mastering the knowledge required in practice of the occupation and—a thing of very great importance—a physical endowment equal to its requirements.

"Lack of any one of these three essentials leaves a man unfit for his job, however 'congenial' it may be otherwise.

"But a job that 'fits' its owner is not always the complete solution of his uneasiness, for many a man who is in all three ways adapted to his work finds himself going stale. He loves his work by first instince, and comes to detest it by long practice. That man, unrelieved, may go on to a desperate breakdown from sheer boredom, for he is usually the man of spirit, and his very soul gets sick.

"His salvation will be some hobby, some avocation, which, distracting his overwearied brain from the bruising iteration of things he knows too well, gives his normal instinct for the regular work a chance to recover its freshness of sensation, which is the pleasure in the practice of any vocation."

A Common Sentiment.

The news agent was dilating on the wickedness of paper boys. "Just look at this postcard I've had from a customer," he said. It ran:

Dear Sir: When your boy was (as usual) drinking the milk that is left on our doorstep he dropped the can and spilt a quart of milk on the path. In his hurry to leave the premises he omitted to leave the paper. Yours truly.

P. S. Please send paper.

P. P. S. Also kill boy

Fall of a Meteor in Missouri.

The New Truxton people received quite a scare about midnight Friday by a falling meteor. The stone was picked up next morning and weighed five and one-half pounds. It fell with such force that it sank into the ground about seventeen inches.

The ground was badly burned around the stone for some distance, indicating that it was very hot. There are no other records of meteors falling in this country for several years.

Uncle Jerry Thinks It's So.

"I shouldn't wonder," said Uncle Jerry Peebles, "if there was something in this idea that the condition of a man's teeth has a whole lot to do with his moral character. The biggest liar I ever knew in my life wore a full set of false teeth."

The Hand Behind the Fashions.

But for the inventive faculty of man in the matter of feminine clothing, how would fair woman exist and enjoy life? asks the Drapers' [illegible]

The Lapps and Their Stimulants.

The Lapps are very fond of stimulating drinks. They think nothing of drinking fifteen or twenty cups of coffee a day, while their consumption of punch is on a vast scale. It is no uncommon thing to see numbers of hopelessly drunk natives in the streets of Tromso, especially when the sale of reindeer flesh has been profitable. Yet robbery, and indeed crime in general, is practically unknown among them. The innate honesty of the people is quite extraordinary.

PRIMITIVE ANIMALS RETURNING.

Wild Creatures of Which Kansans Thought Rid of Again Found.

Some time ago Kansas newspapers printed a line or two about the discovery of a white weasel at Oak Mills, adding that while weasels are extremely rare. Lewis and Clark, in 1804, in the journal of their famous expedition, speak of having procured from an Indian on the Missouri "a weasel which was perfectly white, except the extremity of the tail, which was black." Perhaps this weasel was the progenitor of the Oak Mills animal. By the way, it seems that Kansas is coming back to its primitive condition again, especially as regards wild animals.

Many wild creatures that were thought to have long since disappeared from our soil are making their appearance again. A little over a year ago a paroquet was killed on the Remsburg farm east of Potter. Paroquets swarmed in this locality in the early days. A beaver is occasionally seen in the Missouri river along the Kansas shore. They were formerly as plentiful in Stranger creek as muskrats are now. Last year Herbert Rogers caught a beaver in the Kaw river near Lecompton.

Sam and Will McConnell killed a large black bear near Ely City some time ago. John M. Hicks of Kingman county killed a fine specimen of a bald eagle out there recently. John Burns caught a white squirrel near Salina last January. It was a perfect albino and had pink eyes. Charles Husted, near Lawrence, comes forward with a black pocket gopher captured near that place. It is on exhibition at the state university.

Some time ago a deer was roaming about in the western part of Atchison county, but we have not heard whether it was captured or not. Deer were once plentiful, and Atchison county has a stream named for them. Elk, antelope, buffalo, wild turkeys and other game which once abounded here have entirely disappeared, but we may expect a stray of specimen of birds to bob up any old time.

Pennsylvanian Eases His Conscience.

John Donges, a retired merchant of Myerstown, has received a letter enclosing 25 cents conscience money from a Lebanon man whose name he refuses to divulge.

With the money was a letter saying that the sender more than thirty years ago had stolen a 2 cent penholder from the Donges' store, and that the theft had so worried him for years past that he finally mustered up courage enough to admit the truth and pay for the article, the extra money representing accumulated interest.

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JORDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NO NEED TO TAKE CHANCES.

There Is a Sure Way of Knowing Good Paint Material.

There is really no need whatever for any property owner to take chances in the selection of his paint materials. It doesn't cost a cent to learn how to be on the safe side. Certainly every property owner has enough at stake to find this out.

A complete painting guide, known as Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York. This company is the largest maker of pure white lead in the world. Its Dutch Boy Painter trademark is famous as a guarantee of purity and quality. The outfit includes a book of color schemes, for either interior or exterior painting, a book of specifications, and a simple little instrument, with directions for testing the purity of paint materials.

Gounod's Villa.

Not every Riviera tourist knows of or has ever seen one of the most celebrated of modern musical shrines in France, Gounod's quaint Oustalet dou Capalan, where the master composed "Romeo et Juliette," and that wonderfully sympathetic though little heard score which accompanied Mistral's great epic of Provence, "Mireille." This famous Riviera villa is on the shores of the blue Mediterranean, just beyond Saint Raphael, on a comparatively little used roadway, but surrounded by one of the most beautiful settings on the whole Mediterranean round.

HER HUSBAND

By ANNE WARNER.

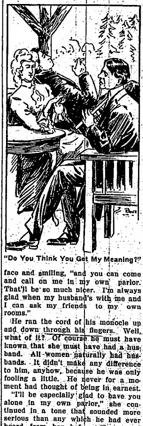
(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Jerry was fond of trout-fishing, and, being fond of trout-fishing, was naturally attracted to the brand new resort which advertised square miles of virgin forests with sport for the multitude. Siddons had been there and said it was all true and that Jerry would be in Paradise. Jerry, with the hotel's folder in his vest pocket, was easily persuaded to believe his friend's statement, and took the Saturday's train. Siddons followed him on Sunday. "She" arrived the Tuesday after!

"She" arrived in a peacock blue broadcloth traveling dress, the cut and style of which was so perfect that everyone forgave and forgot the color. She brought with her a maid and 16 trunks. There are no better social vouchers (in a new place) than a maid and 16 trunks, so she was accepted with open arms, and Siddons introduced her to Jerry, and Jerry—who had nothing half-hearted about him—fell madly in love with her at once.

Siddons fished and his friend walked and talked with "her." It was all very delightful until, just as the fortnight was closing in, she suddenly referred to an expected arrival upon the morrow.

"I sha'n't be alone any more," she told him, looking straight up in his face and smiling, "and you can come and call on me in my own parlor. That'll be so much nicer. I'm always glad when my husband's with me and I can ask my friends to my own rooms."



"Do You Think You Get My Meaning?"

He ran the cord of his monocle up and down through his fingers. Well, what of it? Of course he must have known that she must have had a husband. All women naturally had husbands. It didn't make any difference to him, anyhow, because he was only fooling a little. He never for a moment had thought of being in earnest.

"I'll be especially glad to have you alone in my own parlor," she continued in a tone that sounded more serious than any which he had ever heard from her before, "because I want to say something very important indeed to you; it's something that I want to ask you about, and it's a subject which one would never think of trying to discuss in public."

He looked at her in some surprise, but she never noticed the look, and continued:

"I expect that my husband will arrive about noon to-morrow. Won't you come in at five o'clock and meet him and let me give you a cup of tea?"

He saw no reason why he should refuse to meet her husband or drink her tea, so he accepted the invitation to do both, and the next day, having gone fishing to please and pacify Siddons, he hurried home extremely early so that he might please and pacify his own contradictory inclinations.

Her suite was on the third floor and gave upon the forest. It was one of those which include two towers and a balcony. The tea table was spread upon the balcony, and some lazy East Indian chairs and rugs and cushions kept it company there. He observed all this during the half minute that he waited in the small reception room. Then she came in—and her husband.

The caller received rather a startling shock when his eyes met those of the husband.

For the husband was a giant, and his eyes were simply electrifying in their piercingly quick and intent glance. He was very handsome, and the hand-clasp which followed the introduction was most cordial—almost too cordial, in fact, for it was of that species which preclude all sensation until ten minutes after.

They passed out upon the balcony at once, and she poured the tea, chattering gayly, almost nervously, as she did so. Her husband sat at her side in silence, looking sometimes at her, sometimes at Jerry, and sometimes at the forest; he did not appear particularly interested in what she was saying, but his expression was more placid than bored.

After the tea-drinking was completed a maid came out and removed the tray. Then her husband placed his chair so that he could rest his feet upon the balustrade and offered Jerry his cigar case. Thereupon the latter helped himself to a cigar and soon discovered that it was by long odds the best that he had ever knocked over the head with his cigar cutter.

She had been laughing and talking every minute up to now, but now, when the two cigars were well alight, she suddenly grew quite grave, leaned her elbows upon the table, rested her chin upon her crossed hands, glanced at her husband, and addressed the visitor thus:

"You won't mind my being very serious indeed now—will you?—because—as I said before—I have something very serious that I want to talk to you about—and I never could talk to you alone until my husband came."

Jerry felt his fingers seeking the cord of his monocle in a species of qualm over the extreme earnestness of her address, but before there was any such a pause as demanded filling by him she went on:

"You don't know how dreadfully I've wanted to be alone with you ever since I first met you. It's so crazing to have things to say that you can't say unless you're positive that you won't be interrupted—and you know, although we've been together all day long, still we've never been really like this before."

Jerry felt horribly uncomfortable and didn't know what to say, so looked at his patent-leather toes and shook his head. He didn't know just why he shook his head, but it seemed the only safe thing to dare just then.

"What I want to talk about," she went on, "is the feeling that men like you and women like me have for one another. I know that you are just as attractive to women as I am to men, and I want to know whether the basis of that attraction is the same with you as it is with me."

She paused; her husband was looking at the forest; Jerry was grasping the cord of his monocle with a strength that he could feel in the back of his neck. Within his heart he felt that the peacock blue hadn't been so far wrong after all.

"Do you think you get my meaning?" she asked after a moment.

"I don't think that I do," he answered, bluntly.

She laughed softly.

"Yes, you do, too. It's a species of vanity—now, isn't it? We're naturally attractive and we know it, and we want every one else to know it, too—don't we? You wanted me to like you the first instant that you saw me—didn't you? Why won't you own up?"

Her husband was looking at her now; he was so large that the back of his chair was tipped against the wall and his legs bridged the width of the balcony. Jerry, big as he was, was a pigmy beside him. He wished like thunder that he was off fishing.

"I can't at all admit any of that," he asserted.

"What nonsense! But if you won't admit it, it's true, none the less. But we'll go on a step further. Grant the mutual attractiveness, and let's see how much further the similitude extends. When you met me and were attracted by me did you recognize the fact right off, or did it dawn upon you gradually? I saw that you were epris at once. You see I'm honest."

Her husband was shaking the ash from his cigar, and as he did so his eyes encountered Jerry's. The latter was beginning to feel decidedly ill.

"I don't know that I thought anything about it," he said, miserably.

"You don't expect me to believe that, do you?" she asked, half smiling, "not after the way that you acted that first evening! Don't you know that I saw that you were wild about me from the first instant. A woman always knows. And what I want to know is—does a man know, too? Or does the woman hide her heart better? Did you know that I was specially interested in you before I told you so?"

Jerry felt his shirt-collar melting (it wasn't a warm day, either). He threaded the cord to his monocle up and down through his fingers, recrossed his legs, and coughed.

"Really," he said at last—"really, you must believe me when I say that this is the first time that I ever posed as a psychological problem, and I don't at all know how to play the part."

She looked disappointed.

"You won't own up," she said, shaking her head; "well, I've never yet found the man that would. They're all alike—men are—and my husband is the only exception to the lot."

She rose as she spoke and, passing behind her husband, threw her arms about his neck and kissed him.

"Oughtn't you to go now?" she asked, looking over his head at the stunned, benumbed, and paralyzed caller—"it's quite quarter of six, and we've all to dress before dinner."

Jerry arose with the promptitude of a steel spring just loosed in its coiling.

"I'm sorry not to have given satisfaction," he said, "but really—"

She extended her hand.

"I don't bear you any ill-will," she said, smiling.

Her husband quitted his seat and gave the visitor another heart-crushing, muscle-rending handclasp.

Then at last Jerry got out into the corridor and breathed again.

Siddons found him packing when he came in to dinner.

"Going?" he asked, in astonishment.

"Business telegram," Jerry explained, briefly, throwing his toothbrush in on top and banging the cover down.

"Then you didn't get to the tea-party?"

"Yes, I did, too."

"Was her husband there?"

"Oh, yes, her husband was there."

"Horrible about him, isn't it?"

"What?" Jerry asked, turning sharply.

"Didn't you know that he's deaf and dumb?"

Not a Success.

The manager of the subscription book department was telling of some of his experiences. "The funniest case I ever remember," he said, "was that of an applicant for a job at book canvassing from whom I expected great things. He made a careful study of the literature we supplied him with and was very enthusiastic. Judge of my surprise when the first morning he went out back he came and handed in his resignation.

"'But you should not be so easily discouraged,' I told him. 'Few make a success at the start, and you acknowledge that you went into only two places.'

"'Only two,' he said, lugubriously. 'One was a real estate agent, who persuaded me to sign a contract for two lots in Fizzlehurst, and the other was a tailor, who sold me a suit of clothes I didn't want,' and, shaking his head mournfully, he mumbled 'Good day,' and went out."—Lippincott's.

FOR GRAINING PAINT.

Hereafter it will not be necessary for a painter to learn graining and such work will probably not command such high prices as it does now. An Ohio man has produced a handy little tool that is destined to revolutionize this work, for it means an incalculable saving in time, and the graining is more accurately done. This tool consists of a head made in the form of a quarter cylinder, a handle for the head and a rubber graining pad composed of concentric ribs and a graining surface of irregular projections, which fits on the head. To imitate graining all that is necessary is to give a board a thin coating of paint and pass the tool over it, as if it were a blotter. The design on the pad thus leaves its impression on the paint and a whole door can be "grained" by this process in a fraction of the time it once took to paint in every curve and twist and knot. No skill is required in the use of the tool, only a little practice.

VIRGINIA CITY TODAY.

The Gold Seekers Have Gone and the Town Is Dilapidated.

Virginia City is indeed a strange town—a living skeleton. In the height of its opulence it boasted a population of 30,000. Today there are less than one-tenth that many. Dilapidation and ruin are seen on every hand.

The chief streets terrace along a great hillside. Further up the slope are wastes of sagebrush growing in stunted clumps that half hide the earth with their gray twigs and foliage. Down below is a valley where the mines have dumped vast heaps of waste.

The entire region is a wild upheaval of hills and around the horizon are seen ranges of snowy topped mountains. The only trees are an occasional gnarled scrub pine or dwarf cedar a few feet high.

The town streets are rough and dirty, and as I walked about I was constantly encountering old tin cans and getting my feet tangled up in wires from the baled hay. Buildings in good repair are rarities. There are tottering fences and ragged walls and broken roofs and smashed glass and many windows and doors are boarded up.

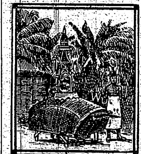
The search for gold has resulted in tearing the country all to pieces. Everywhere the hills are dotted with prospectors' holes. From any height you can see dozens—perhaps hundreds. They suggest the burrowing of woodchucks or prairie dogs. The region along the Comstock lode abounds too in deserted shafts.

IDOL OF THE CAMEROONS.

Imitation Tortoise Is an Object of Worship.

One of the principal objects of worship by dwellers in the Cameroon mountains is the imitation tortoise pictured above.

It does not appear exactly true to nature, because workmanship of that kind is in a very crude state in that section. The builder and the worshipers both probably regard it as a marvel of high art, however. The native shown beside the idol is one of the priests in attendance.



Idol of the Cameroons.

Devotees of the tortoise reside on the slopes of the Cameroon mountains, in the German dependency on the west coast of Africa. The mountains are the highest on the coast, and their tops are covered with snow.

Style That Couldn't Be Copied.

A Belgrade woman sent her last year's hat to Vienna to be remodeled and received back a weird shape, strange hued creation that baffled all the envious efforts of the local milliners at imitation.

The secret of this success of fashion is now revealed by official documents showing that the police at the Vienna railway station mistook the parcel for a Servian bomb, and, after subjecting it to various tests, including immersion in water, returned it unopened.

Fogs and Wireless Telegraphy.

It is one of the many marvels of wireless telegraph that the ether waves which carry its messages, unlike light waves, suffer no absorption in mist or fog. Quite the opposite, in fact, is the case, for the effect on them of clear sunlight is so marked that they can be sent with equal initial power only less than half the distance by day as by night. For this reason press dispatches and long distance messages sent by wireless telegraphy are, wherever possible, committed to the ether waves after sunset.

Refined Pessimism.

Burton was writing his "Anatomy of Melancholy."

"I suppose," he sighed, "I'll accumulate a big stack of bones out of this."

However, as he further reflected, this was not much better than having a family skeleton in the closet.

A CURE FOR FITS.

The Treatment Is to Accomplish What Science Has Been Struggling to Attain for Centuries.

The intense interest that has been manifested throughout the country by the wonderful cures that are being accomplished daily by epilepticide still continues. It is really surprising the vast number of people who have already been cured of fits and nervousness. In order that everybody may have a chance to test the medicine, large trial bottles, valuable literature, History of Epilepsy and testimonials, will be sent by mail absolutely free to all who write to the Dr. May Laboratory, 548 Pearl Street, New York City.

A Sponge Garden.

A beautiful effect may be obtained by means of a damp sponge and a few seeds. Take a large piece of coarse sponge and cut it in any shape desired. Then soak it in water, squeeze half dry and sprinkle in the openings red clover seed, millet, barley, grass, rice, oats—any or all of these. Hang the sponge in a window where the sun shines at least part of the day.

Cant About Advertising.

There is a great deal of cant at the present day about advertising, emitted by persons who are very keen to get all the advertisement they can, and to get it for nothing if possible. Quiet people, who really do not want to advertise themselves, are much less censorious.

DR. J. H. RINDLAUB, (Specialist), Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Fargo, N. D.

Autos With Dog Kennels.

The dog trotting contentedly along between or just back of the rear wheels of a carriage is one of the pleasant remembrances of the time when the horse was supreme, but horses and dog were both rudely disturbed by the advent of the automobile.

Automobiles run too fast for a dog to trot along beside, and as there is not room within the automobile for anything larger than a lap dog the coach dog had to go.

One English automobile firm is now manufacturing an automobile body that opens at the back, disclosing a roomy kennel for dogs, but it is probable that although better than nothing at all this arrangement will not be completely satisfactory to either dog or master.

Need of Ventilation in Winter.

The necessity for ventilation in winter is extreme, and it seems strange that so many people who are in all other respects persons of intelligence and thoroughly conversant with the needs of the body, should in this particular instance, demonstrate such a lack of common sense. Another essential to good health is the daily use of some good malt tonic as golden grain belt beer, the ideal home beverage. It is brewed from the best of nature's products in a better way than other beers and deserves a place on your home table. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

His Inexcusable Act.

By ANDREW E. EWING.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Sitting on a hotel porch among the Swiss Alps in August with my Uncle George, both of us gazing up at a glacier winding its way to the valley, I noticed a sad look in his eye.

"Doesn't the view invigorate you, uncle?" I asked.

"I've been thinking, Billy," he replied.

"Of what?"

"Our contemptible natures."

I knew my uncle was a pessimist. Most old men are. I made no reply.

"When I was your age," he continued, "I gave way to a weakness—a good many weaknesses, but one especially right here in these mountains. At the time to have confessed it would have been a strain on me. Now my act seems nothing more than what might be expected from a descendant of that half brute, half savage, called prehistoric man."

"But there are redeeming traits."

"I wish I could see them in my case."

"Well, tell your story. I'm sure you have one to tell."

"I was in this region with a party of tourists. Bob Southwick, a classmate of mine in college, had come over with me, and we were doing these mountains on foot. Bob was a great climber, while I preferred to look at the mountains from a distance, as we are doing now. The party I mention joined us here. Among them was a girl of nineteen, and Bob fell in love with her. Then he was called away to Paris for awhile, and during his absence I—well, I cut him out with the girl."

My uncle paused and seemed to see again after an interval of forty years the degradation of his act.

"When George came back, as was to be expected, there was constraint between him and the girl. George seemed to be in a mental fever; but, strange to say, it showed itself toward her and not at all to me. But I found out afterward that he didn't know what I'd been up to, and I hadn't the manliness to tell him. At any rate, he was hot for climbing and wanted me to go with him. The very day after his return he wanted me to make a trip as far up the glacier as we could go between daylight and dark. I didn't wish to go, and I didn't like to refuse. To stay behind with the girl I had robbed him of seemed to add to my contemptible conduct. I consented to go.

"We started at 4 o'clock the next morning, taking axes and a rope for making difficult passages. We climbed over those places that from here look a trifle rough up there—we found them at times impassable—proceeding on our way till noon. Then we stopped and ate our lunch, after which we started to put in another hour on the upward course before returning.

"Coming to a crevasse perhaps six feet across, we determined to jump it. We fastened the rope about our waists, and Bob jumped first. The other side was steep and somewhat soft, but Bob after some stamping and cutting with his ax got a foothold. Then I jumped and struck snow. I felt myself going backward and tried to get a hold on projecting ice with my ax. I failed. Bob saw what was coming and braced himself for the shock. I went over."

Another pained look came to the old man's face.

"The rope held. Bob was dragged a few feet and then got a firmer foothold, but a precarious one. There was no possibility of his pulling me up, and if the strain continued I would soon drag him over. We talked together about the prospect, he trying to encourage me. I knew I had to go to the bottom and it depended upon me whether or not I dragged Bob with me. I'd done one mean act toward him, and I couldn't bring myself to drag him down with me, especially when it wouldn't save me. I put my hand in my pocket, took out my knife and, breathing a prayer that my soul should be received in the other world, cut the rope."

Another pause. I saw my uncle shudder.

"I heard something between a shriek and a groan from Bob. To my astonishment, I fell only about thirty feet and landed in soft snow. I was buried up to my armpits. Of course I called up to Bob that I was all right, and I shall never forget the 'Thank God!' I heard him utter.

"Well, there I was, stuck in snow at the bottom of a crevasse, with no means of getting out. The rope wasn't long enough by half to reach me. Bob of course was enabled to secure his own position, or, rather, to jump to the other side of the crevasse. He jumped safely, and we held a parley. There seemed nothing to do but for him to go down to the hotel for assistance and a rope. Fortunately some one there was watching us through a glass, saw the accident and met him on the way. In the middle of the afternoon I was drawn up."

We sat for a few moments in silence, I overwhelmed with the utter absence of consciousness on the part of my uncle of his heroism; then I said:

"What did your friend say about your cutting the rope?"

"He never thought to examine the cut. He supposed the rope had broken."

"And didn't you tell him?"

"No. What was the use?"

Again I was lost in astonishment.

"And the girl?" I asked presently.

"Oh, the girl! Well, she fooled us both."

"Uncle," I said after another pause, "if you were conscious of being a hero, I suppose you wouldn't be one."

BIG DITCH ESTABLISHED

The Mayfield-Kratka Ditch Will Drain Country in Eastern Part of County.

In spite of the fact that it was expected that some difference would have to be settled before final action could be taken on the petition for the construction of the Mayfield-Kratka ditch, the matter was disposed of very harmoniously by the commissioners in session last Friday forenoon. After the settlement of some minor questions the ditch was ordered established and the commissioners adjourned after a short session.

The petition was considered for the third time at the meeting last Friday and it is gratifying to those who have been working for the establishment of the ditch to know that all questions of dispute were so satisfactorily adjusted.

The ditch will be twelve miles long, much of it in the towns of Mayfield and Kratka, and when constructed will drain a large amount of land in the eastern part of the county.

Notice of Dissolution of Partnership.

To whom it may concern:

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between A. G. Groshong and James Blake, conducting a meat market in the city of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota, is in all things dissolved, the said James Blake retiring from said business, and the said A. G. Groshong continuing the business. The said A. G. Groshong will collect all claims due the former firm of Groshong & Blake, and will pay all debts owing, or owed by said former firm of Groshong & Blake.

Dated April 10th, 1909.

Another Consolidation.

The Bemidji Pioneer has purchased the other two papers of the town and in the future the city of Bemidji will have just one newspaper. The fact that a city the size of Bemidji is to have only one newspaper is evidence that the business men of that hustling place have seen the light.

With two or three papers in a town the advertisers have to pay twice for their advertising service or get an incomplete sevrice. They are sometimes deceived in the belief that they are geting a bargain because two papers sometimes cause a rate war, but a moment's thoughtful reflection shows that that is a mistaken idea. The one paper covers the same field that two or more might cover, covers it better, because of less risk of financial loss in the attempt to serve the town well, and even though there is not a rate war the advertiser is dollars and service ahead. Merchants all over the southern part of the state where consolidations and better papers and better service have become the rule, will vouch for the truthfullness of this statement.

If the business men of Bemidji will spend one-half of the money that the advertising in the other two papers cost them with the Pioneer that paper, always an excellent one, can give them an improved service and there will be money left in their pockets. The business men of the town as well as the publishers of the Pioneer are to be congratulated.

Section Boss to President.

Minneapolis Journal: It is altogether fitting that, at this precise historic moment in the development of the Soo system, there should succeed to its titular healship the man who has for a number of years been its actual chief, Edmund Pennington. The election of Mr. Pennington to the presidency of the Soo is a signal illustration of that democracy of birth and aristocracy of merit which are the boast of America.

Mr. Pennington has risen from sheer force of ability and energy from a humble post as section foreman to the presidency of one of the greatest railroads in America. In what other country of all the world would that be possible? In the early days young Pennington operated a snow plow out of Sioux Falls. He did his work well, and he showed a capacity for better things. Step by step he advanced in the railroad world until he is now entrusted with the highest place in the gift of the company he had served so well. It is an example on which the young men of today may well ponder.

STATE CONVENTION

Big Gathering at Crookston Next Week—Excellent Program Has Been Arranged.

Next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 4, 5 and 6, the state Sunday School convention will be held at Crookston. At the convention will be speakers of note from all parts of Minnesota, and from Chicago and Des Moines as well. A very large representation of Sunday school members is assured. It is unusual to have such an important meeting so close and the Red Lake Falls Sunday school will no doubt send a large delegation to the convention. Crookston is extending a generous invitation and will entertain all Sunday school people with lodging and breakfast during the three days of the meeting.

On Friday, May 7, there will be a Christian Endeavor rally at Crookston for the purpose of effecting an organition of the societies in this district This convention meets in the Congregational church.

Rev. C. C. Warner of Crookston visited Red Lake Falls one week since to present the invitation to these meetings. He delivered an address Thursday evening at the Presbyterian church upon "Youthful Conversions."

COURT HOUSE BURNED FRIDAY EVENING

Fire Caught From a Defective Chimney—Building Burned Like Tinder.

PROPERTY WELL INSURED

County Will Lose Little—All Valuable Papers in Vault None Were Lost.

The Red Lake county court house in this city was destroyed by fire last Friday evening. The alarm was turned in about 8:30, but the fire had such a start that the firemen could do nothing to stay the progress of the flames and the building burned to the ground in a short time. It was an old shell of a building and burned as rapidly as would a pile of sun cured dry goods boxes.

The fire originated from a defective chimney. Late in the afternoon there was considerable smoke in the building and it was found upon investigation by people in the building that the chimney was burning out. This was attended to and it was thought that there would be no further trouble, but in the evening the chimney was seen to be smoking violently and when an investiagtion was made it was found that the chimney was burning like a furnace. The contents of two extinguishers thrown into the chimney had little effect and it was then discovered that the woodwork had become ignited from the defective chimney and that the fire had worked between the walls and by the time the alarm could be sounded the flames had broken out in several places. The old building burned so rapidly that the first people to arrive in response to the alarm had difficulty in getting the desks out of the offices before the ceilings fell.

All of the valuable documents of the county had been placed in the vaults before the county officials left the building for the night and nothing of value was lost.

The building was insured for $2,500, the furniture and fixtures for $1375 and the maps, books and cockroaches for $625. The court house was not a valuable piece of property and the county has lost little in the destructon of the building.

The members of the county board met Saturday as a ways and means committee of the whole to arrange for quarters for the county offices. The auditor and treasurer now have offices in the Bank of Red Lake Falls building. Superintendent Anderson has a room in the second story of the same building. Judge S. A. Swanson now holds court in his old office room, one door north of the Gazette office. Frank Jeffers, register of deeds, is temporarily located at the First State Bank and C. W. Johnson, clerk of court, occupies a room in the Hunt building, across the street and south from the site of the old court house. The old office building of the Red Lake Falls Lumber company, north of Freund's store, is being fixed up and will be occupied by Messrs. Jeffers and Johnson.

All managers of the different opera houses and theatres gladly indorse The Ruth Craven Co., that is billed to appear at the opera house on Monday night, May 3, playing Dora Thorne. I have arranged to have them stay tonight, April 27, 1909, and produce Barrie's famous Scotch play, "The Little Minister." Come and see them and I will guarantee that you will be highly pleased.—J. Dora Thorne.

The greatest of emotional dramas, from the pen of Bertha M. Clay and conceded to be her best effort.

It is touching in heart interest and rich in comedy, is a strong play with stirring incidents but which does not depend on gun play or the customary blood and thunder.

The story is a wholesome and interesting one and is treated with great reverence and delicacy by the auther. Mr. Harry L. Peck has beautifully mounted the play scenically while he has also shown great regard for his audience by giving the play one of the best acting companies to be seen at these prices.

The celebrated Ainsworth orchestra of Minneapolis has been engaged to furnish a concert previous to the play for a half hour and a dance will be given after the performance of Dora Thorne until two a. m. by the same music.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c. Dance extra.

Seats are now on sale. Don't forget the date, Monday, May 3. adv.

A Pert Suggestion.

Wheelock's Weekly: The tariff on stockings has solved one vexatious question for the ladies. With the new hipless effect in clothing the stocking suspenders had to go along with the hips that are no more. "What shall we do to keep our stockings up?" The tariff will keep them up, of course.

MAN FOUND IN RIVER

Body of Unknown Man Found Floating in River at Crookston.

Plummer Pioneer: Yesterday morning Chief of Police Eck, of Crookston, called up the Pioneer and stated that the body of an unknown man had been found in the Red Lake River at that place and asking for information regarding any one who might have disappeared from Red Lake county last fall or subsequently. The body is that of a man about five feet ten inches tall and apparently in the neighborhood of fifty years of age. He had evidently been in the river all winter and was badly disfigured. He was dressed in overalls and a watch and some money were found in his clothes. He also had a memorandum book in one pocket but no name or address of any kind was in the book.

Chief Eck thought that perhaps the body might be that of David Pearson, who formerly lived west of Plummer and who disappeared last fall and was advertised for in the Pioneer. Pearson was a younger man than this one appears to be and was over six feet tall, so there is little liklihood that it is his body. Pearson was last heard of at Ardock, N. Dak., and did not return to Minnesota so far as can be learned. The body, having been in the river for a long time, may have traveled a long distance during the winter. Chief Eck is inclined to believe that it may have come down the stream from any place west of Terrebonne, on the Clearwater or any point on the Red Lake river.

Local News.

Jos. Miller of Dubuque, Iowa, was here last week. Mr. Miller is a real estate dealer and made several trips into the county looking over Red Lake county farm lands. He says that he was very much pleased with what he saw and that he is going to bring some settlers from Iowa to Red Lake county. Those Iowa fellows are good farmers and there is room for a lot of 'em here.

At the meeting of the M. B. A. lodge Monday night five new members were initiated. Of course the public can not get a detailed report of the affair, for a special effort is made to keep the newspaper people "in the dark." But it has "leaked out" that as a goat tamer Mr. Holzman is a star performer.

Mr. and Mrs. August Grimm and family of Vicksburg, Mich., arrived here last Thursday for a short visit with Mrs. Grimm's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schoaneur. From here they go to Billings, Mont., where they intend to make their future home. Their many friends here wish them abundant success in their new home.

The Chatel stock of groceries and crockery which had been in the hands of a trustee for the past three weeks while an inventory was being taken, was yesterday sold to Theo. LaBissoniere, proprietor of the Big Store. Mr. LaBissoniere will have a big sale, commencing tomorrow, and the announcement published in this issue will be of interest.

Crookston Times: J. J. Padden, the well known miller of Red Lake Falls, arrived in Crookston last evening and held a conference with several business men. He said there was no question but that the present year would see much activity in the milling line. He had nothing to say in regard to whether or not the company was going to rebuild the mill which was burned at Red Lake Falls last Thanksgiving. He could not tell really what the company intended to do in this line.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Janne of Two Harbors, on their wedding tour, are spending the week with Mrs. Janne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Marchidon, in this city. Deceased had been ill with consumption for some time. He was the son of Herman Schultz of Louisville, was about twenty-six years old and unmarried. The remains arrived here today and funeral services will be held at the home in Louisville township.

The fishing season opens Saturday, May 1, and on and after that date it will be lawful to catch most kind of fish. But don't go after bass or brook trout. They won't bite. It's against the law for them to do so and they have received instructions from Bill Munch, deputy game warden. All of the birds of the air and the little fishes in the county ditches know Bill and they know that what he says goes. Bill is the State of Minnesota, ss. in the game department, so beware. Bass may bite after June first and brook trout after September first.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zeigler left Red Lake Falls Tuesday and are now on their way to Germany. They will sail from New York May 5 and will spend three months in the Fatherland. Mr. Zeigler has four brothers in Germany whom he has not seen since he came to this country twenty-seven years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler are anticipating a most enjoyable visit among friends of younger days and no doubt they will not be disappointed. Their many Red Lake county friends will wish them a pleasant voyage, a happy sojourn in the "old country" and a safe return.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

REVIEW OF THE MOST IMPORTANT WORK OF THE STATE LEGISLATORS FOR THE WEEK.

St. Paul, April 16.—The house yesterday passed the reapportionment bill, which in its present form adds fifteen to the membership of the house. The bill had been discussed Wednesday, so that there was very little debate yesterday.

Senator Clague's bill for proceedings against persons guilty of neglecting their children, passed the house yesterday. The bill in effect extends the probationary system now in force in the three large counties to the rest of the state.

The house got into a tangle yesterday over an attempt to resurrect the bill requiring corporations selling mining and oil stock to list their property with the secretary of state so as to protect investors from buying worthless stocks. After two roll calls several other motions and about sixteen points of order, the bill was finally placed on the calendar.

A bill authorizing the state board of control to put in machinery and furnish crushed rock from the waste at the reformatory at St. Cloud free to the state highway commission, was passed yesterday.

Every bushel of grain passing through an elevator in Minnesota will pay a tax hereafter if the senate approves a measure passed by the house yesterday. Under the bill, every bushel of grain handled during the year up to March 1 must be kept track of, and will pay a flat rate tax of one-fourth of a mill on each bushel of wheat or flax, or one-eighth of a mill on other grains.

In the Senate.

There will be no extension of the manufacturing activities of the state prison. The senate yesterday adopted the report of the majority of the state prison committee recommending that the bill establishing a factory for manure spreaders and mowers be killed.

After a severe fight the senate yesterday passed th bill licensing peddlers of the state.

The senate yesterday again refused to take the hint of some of the more conscientious members of the body and declined to work at night. The last day for passing bills is next Wednesday, and there are two hundred or more bills to be acted upon, in addition to those which have not yet come from the committees or from the house.

Bills passed: Requiring casualty companies to report accidents to workmen for the employes' compensation commission; authorizing combination of record books by county commissioners; relating to salaries of officers of courts; providing for the division of indebtedness of villages; legalizing floating indebtedness of villages in certain cases; establishing contingent fund for county attorneys.

St. Paul, April 17.—The tonnage tax bill passed the senate yesterday after being under consideration five hours and a half. The vote was 38 to 24. The bill was not amended, despite the vigorous efforts of the opposition, who forced sixteen roll calls on various propositions before the bill was carried. It now goes to the governor for signature. In addition to amendment after amendment, with the same result on each proposition, the opponents of the bill signed a protest against its passage, which was read just before the third reading of the bill. The fight was a most determined one. There was no yielding on either side. Despite the lateness of the hour and many efforts to adjourn or postpone the special order, the thirty-eight favoring the bill sat through all the amendments and arguments and voted "no" on every attempt to kill the bill or any of its clauses. The bill levies a tax of 2 to 5 cents a ton on ore shipped from mines producing more than 20,000 tons annually. This is for state purposes only. For local purposes the present ad valorem taxes are to remain. At a rough estimate the bill will produce $600,000 a year to the state, or over $325,000 more than at present.

In the House.

Friends of the county and district agricultural schools gave up yesterday and submitted to the plan proposed by Senator Putnam, which proposes state aid to high, graded and rural consolidated schools, which established departments of agriculture, manual training and domestic science. The bill passed the house yesterday without any opposition. The bill appropriates $25,000 for each of the next two years to aid such schools. Not over ten schools may establish such departments and get state aid each year, and no school shall get over $2,500 a year.

A bill cutting the appropriation recently made for the new state prison to $1,750,000 was introduced in the house yesterday. The bill was introduced by a majority of the special committee appointed to ascertain how the board of control proposed to expend the $2,250,000 appropriation. The majority report states that the plans and estimates for the new buildings are too elaborate and that some of the items are absolutely unnecessary. The minority offered a report in which they deny that the sum appropriated is excessive. Both reports were laid over for a day.

The house finally killed the bill to regulate the sale of mining stock yesterday. The bill had been killed, reconsidered, laid on the table, amended and worked over more than any other bill during the session.

A bill was passed yesterday authorizing the governor, auditor and attorney general to investigate the scheme of canals from Sauk Center to Duluth and from Big Stone lake north to Red Lake and Lake of the Woods, as proposed by R. J. Mershon of Chicago.

That the difference in price between velvet chaff wheat and northern grades is greater than the difference of quality is the opinion of the special committee appointed in the house to investigate that question. They believe, however, that there is a difference in quality in favor of the northern grades.

The house in committee of the whole took favorable action on two bills to restrain the white slave trade.

A bill to give the Bazille heirs the right to test their title to the old capitol grounds in St. Paul was killed by the house.

St. Paul, April 19.—The first state law governing the issuance of licenses for automobiles and motorcycles passed the senate Saturday. The bill forces all owners of motor vehicles to obtain a tag from the secretary of state at an annual cost of $1.50 each. Each automobile will receive a different numeral. The speed of the machines shall be "reasonable and proper," except in streets where the speed must not exceed twenty-five miles an hour. The bill takes effect May 15.

The newly constituted office of superintendent of banks will get a new job in looking after loan sharks. The bill which compels chattel and salary loan brokers to take out licenses from the superintendent of banks, passed the senate without opposition.

The senate passed the house bill making the open season for ducks and prairie chickens open Sept. 7 instead of Sept. 1. This makes the Minnesota season conform to that of North Dakota.

Rates on surety bonds are to be filed with the state insurance department for inspection to prevent discrimination, under a bill passed by the senate.

The senate passed a bill permitting a reapportionment at any session, providing the people adopt it as part of the constitution.

In the House.

The house Saturday passed the bill resubmitting to the voters the state hail insurance constitutional amendment, which was lost last fall.

The bill allowing the state board of control to pay a daily wage of 25 cents to prisoners at Stillwater passed the house. The money is to aid in caring for their families, if they have any, otherwise it may be paid to the prisoners when they are released, according to the discretion of the board.

The house passed the white slave bill without opposition.

Senator Glotzbach's bill prohibiting shooting from motor boats, sailboats and launches was killed by the house.

St. Paul, April 20.—A reduction in the state tax levy of about four-tenths mill will be made possible by the economy shown by the omnibus appropriation bill which the joint committees of the house and senate reported to both houses yesterday. Unless the legislature increases the appropriations the tax levy will be only 1.3 mill for state purposes, as against 1.6 and 1.7 during the last two years. The omnibus bill carries appropriations immediately available totaling $500,000, appropriations of $4,700,000 available July 31, and $4,000,000 available July 31 next year. The standing appropriations under existing laws amount to about $1,750,000 a year, so the total expenditures of the state authorized until July 31, 1911, are $12,700,000. This does not include the state school and university tax of 1.23 mills.

The senate did a good day's work on the calendar yesterday, passing in all forty-two bills.

The house bill permitting creameries to get a license from the state dairy and food department certifying that the products are pasteurized passed the senate.

If the governor signs the bill, Sunday baseball in Minnesota from 1 to 6 o'clock will be legal. The senate yesterday passed the house bill after refusing to amend it in any way. The vote on the bill stood 32 to 23.

Other important bills passed were: Providing for the examination of the books and all records of cities of less than 10,000 inhabitants; providing for the inspection in cities of 10,000 or less, of dairies and dairy herds, the products of which are sold in such cities, and making the violation of this act a misdemeanor; enabling counties to establish and maintain public tuberculosis sanatoriums; regulating the labeling of the products of pasteurized milk and cream; relating to the suppression of dangerous, contagious and infectious diseases of domestic animals.

In the House.

The house yesterday passed the redrafted text book bill. The new bill provides that the school districts shall abolish the contract system and provides that books must be sold here as cheaply as elsewhere. Penalties are also provided for influencing school authorities for any book.

The house concurs in the senate amendments to the employers' liability commission bill, and sent the bill to the governor.

By a resolution by Representative Spooner March 5 of each year, which is the birthday of Gov. Johnson's mother, is designated as Mothers' day each year, to be observed by public gatherings and appropriate exercises.

The house passed the Indian soldiers' pension bill in its original form as it came from the senate.

The house had a sort of "field day" all day. The general orders and calendar had been made a special order for the day, but no attempt was made to take bills up in their order. Every member had a motion, and bills were picked up here and there and passed under suspension of the rules, so that by evening a good-sized bunch had been passed, few of them being of great importance.

St. Paul, April 21.—With two amendments, totaling less than $12,000, the omnibus appropriation bill passed both houses yesterday without any increases. The fact that the legislature stood by the committee and refused to make any increases in appropriations made it possible to reduce the state tax levy to 1.2 mills, and the bill authorizing the state auditor to levy a tax not exceeding that amount passed the house in the afternoon. Two years ago the tax levy authorized 1.7 mills. The house added $5,000 to the bill to provide a department to teach the poultry industry at the state farm school and $6,000 for improvements at the state school at Owatonna. The senate cut the appropriation of $5,000 a year for gathering fish fry from the sloughs along the Mississippi river to $2,500 a year, and put the $5,000 thus saved into an extra building at the Deerwood hatchery. Both houses stood by the finance and appropriation committees, and with the exceptions named turned down all efforts to amend the bill. The bill had a tempestuous passage in the senate, but the committee was able to marshal enough votes to stave off all efforts to amend the mill.

The senate yesterday passed the bill permitting cities of the first class to establish a teachers' pension fund. The bill passed the house several days ago.

Four county schools of agriculture are provided for in a bill passed by the senate yesterday after a sharp debate. The bill carries an appropriation of $200,000, which is in addition to the omnibus bill passed yesterday.

The house reapportionment bill, which added fifteen members and one senator to the present membership, was killed by the senate yesterday.

An effort was made in the senate to advance to the calendar the anti-pass law amendment, but it failed to get the necessary votes.

The house adopted a resolution for a commission of three representatives and two senators to investigate and report to the next legislature what they can get for the old capitol and what it would cost to build new buildings to accommodate the state departments now quartered at the old capitol.

Consideration of the omnibus appropriation bill consumed the greater part of the session of the house. The governor's message vetoing the tonnage tax bill interrupted the debate for a time.

An effort was made in the house to strike out of the omnibus bill the item of $200,000 for a new grand stand at the state fair, but without success.

JULY WHEAT TAKES DROP.

Chicago, April 22.—Bulls in wheat were leaderless yesterday, and a dashing bear raid wrought considerable confusion in the pit when July, closing at $1.12 5-8, showed a net loss of 3 5-8@3 3-4c.

The raid weeded out small marginal traders, enabled a lot of profit taking by shorts, not to mention the reinstatement of long lines previously disposed of at a higher figure.

"It's old Mother Earth warning Patten et al. that Secretary Wilson knows something about crops himself," said the bears.

FIGHT FREE WHEAT.

Minnesota Representatives Oppose Corner Remedy.

Washington, April 22. — Declaring that the proposed plan of Representative Scott, chairman of the agricultural committee, to rebate all duties on wheat shipped in from Canada and other countries until the Patten corner is broken, is both dangerous and ineffective, the Minnesota members will resist the plan to have the duty taken off of wheat temporarily.

JILTED GIRL KILLS LOVER.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 22.—Following closely on the heels of an announcement of the approaching marriage of Earl P. Adams, an actor now playing here, to Miss Elizabeth Bagley, Miss Jessie Brown, a well known young woman, to whom Adams had been previously engaged, shot and killed him yesterday afternoon at her home, where it is alleged Adams went to explain to her his approaching marriage to Miss Bagley.

INVESTIGATE RAIL ACCIDENT.

Papers Relating to Death of Waseca Woman Forwarded to Mexico.

Washington, April 22.—Representative Tawney received a letter from Secretary of State Knox advising him that all the papers relating to the death of Mrs. E. A. Everett of Waseca in a railroad accident in Mexico had been forwarded to the American ambassador at Mexico City, with instructions to lay the matter before the Mexican government.

A Common Sentiment.

The news agent was dilating on the wickedness of paper boys. "Just look at this postcard I've had from a customer," he said. It ran:

Dear Sir: When your boy was (as usual) drinking the milk that is left on our doorstep he dropped the can and spilt a quart of milk on the path. In his hurry to leave the premises he omitted to leave the paper. Yours truly,

P. S. Please send paper.

P. P. S. Also kill boy.

Fall of a Meteor in Missouri.

The New Truxton people received quite a scare about midnight Friday by a falling meteor. The stone was picked up next morning and weighed five and one-half pounds. It fell with such force that it sank into the ground about seventeen inches. The ground was badly burned around the stone for some distance indicating that it was very hot. MORSE WILL SUSTAINED.

An Aged Bachelor of Mower County Left an Estate Worth $100,000.

The will of the late O. B. Morse of Grand Meadow has been under contest in probate court at Austin. Morse was an old bachelor who was reared at Wallingford, Conn. He came to Racine, Mower county, in 1856, and settled on a farm. There he lived for over fifty years except for a few winters spent in Grand Meadow village. He made a will just before he died giving the bulk of his property, amounting to nearly $100,000, mostly in bank stock, to a few favored relatives, and the contest was made by other relatives of equal nearness.

After hearing both sides the court ordered the will sustained.

The principal bequests are to Mrs. W. P. Hoppin of Northfield, a niece, $32,000; Mrs. C. M. Martin of Grand Meadow, a niece, $20,000; C. W. Martin her husband, $16,000; Isaac L. WANTS NEW HOME.

Biennial Report of State Historical Society Gives Reasons for Request.

The fifteenth biennial report of the Minnesota State Historical society was distributed last week, and much of it is devoted to the settting forth the progress the society has made and the grounds on which it has petitioned the state legislature for a building of its own. The report says that, due to the great increase in its library, portrait collection and museum it is unable any longer to find adequate room in the present quarters in the state capitol, and adds that the example of Iowa and Wisconsin should be followed, and the society given a home of its own.

The bill introduced in the legislature for the construction of a building for the society provides for its erection on some site near the state capitol.

The historical society has 289 members, and is growing rapidly. It is the wish of the organization to have every county in the state well represented.

STATE MAY BENEFIT.

Minnesota Will Receive About $3,000,000 if Government Owns All Post-offices.

Many millions of dollars would have to be expended by the federal government to comply with the provisions of a bill introduced in congress. This bill requires the government to own every building in the country used as a postoffice.

In Minnesota alone, according to the postoffice manual, there were recently 1,397 postoffices, of which no more than half-a-dozen are maintained in buildings owned by Uncle Sam. There are five first-class postoffices, 38 second-class, 175 third-class, and 1,129 fourth-class offices.

That is to say, if the average post-office building in this state cost the government no more than $2,000, the proposed new law would graciously distribute about $3,000,000 in Minnesota.

Ramsey County Pays State.

Ramsey county last week paid the state treasurer $10,068.36 as its March tax settlement, $954.65, for sale of absolute property, and $665.10 for hunters' licenses. St. Louis county paid $52,997.73 personal taxes and $133.53 on land collections. Benton county paid $2,000 on ditch loans. Grain inspection receipts enriched the coffers by $13,216 in fees.

Many a man thinks he is working hard when he is only wabbling between duty and desire.

Bill to Protect Hunters.

If hunters after bear or deer do not wear a red coat and a red cap they will subject themselves to a fine of $25 or twenty-five days in jail if a bill which Representative James C. Cole of Adams county introduced tonight becomes a law.

A red sweater, the bill says, will do, but it does not specify permission for a red hat instead of a cap. The object is to prevent hunters from being shot as supposed game. [illegible]

ALL READY FOR DRAINAGE WORK

Commission Has Surveys, Plans and Estimates Prepared.

All preparations for a big season's work of the state drainage commission have been made. Everything has been planned, ditches surveyed, all estimates made and maps and plans drawn. Work will begin in earnest immediately after the passage of the appropriation bill fixing the amount available for drainage.

The commission expects no less than it received from the last legislature two years ago, when it was given $100,000 for each year.

All ditches for draining state lands have been surveyed in St. Louis, Aitkin, Hubbard, Marshall, Roseau, Kittson and Polk counties.

About ten co-operative ditches, which are built by the state with the co-operation of counties in the improvement of river channels, have been planned.

The state land ditches, built by direct assessments in which the state pays pro rata portion of the cost, have been surveyed in localities where the land if drained, will be immediately available for agricultural purposes.

No ditches have been planned so far in lands heavily timbered, the work being confined to meadows and swamp lands.

Several of the projects under consideration will, if carried out, entirely exhaust the appropriation for one year. Contracts have been delayed awaiting the appropriations and will not be let for about two months. This wait has caused a delay in the entire system of the work.

The commission is at present seeking a plan whereby the work will not be needlessly delayed pending action by the legislature. It is thought that the appropriations can just as well be made several years in advance.

ARREST FORMER OFFICIAL.

Extradition Papers Issued for Former Treasurer of Beltrami County.

Oliver J. Shinn, former treasurer of Beltrami county, who is accused of having decamped six years ago with nearly $400 of the state's cash, has been arrested at Portland, Ore., and will be brought back to face trial.

Extradition papers have been issued by Gov. Johnson to the governor of Oregon, and Sheriff Hazen of Bemidji is on his way to secure the fugitive.

Shinn is charged with having collected $355.40 interest on June 1, 1903, on state timber, from the J. Niels Lumber company, while treasurer of Beltrami county. By tearing a receipt from the back of his regular book he evaded notice for some time, it is said. When discovered he fled and was not heard from until the authorities arrested him at Portland. Steps were taken immediately to bring him back.

Shinn's sureties made up the loss of $355.40, with interest of $115.40, and have been trying to locate him ever since. The man was well liked in the community and many would not believe that he taken the cash until after he had failed to show up.

MAKES NEW BUTTER PRIZE.

A new feature is to be added to the butter scoring contests this year, and known as the "improvement" contest. The idea is to give a prize to the contestant who shows the largest percentage of gain this year over his record for last year, irrespective of whether he stands near the top or the bottom of the list.

The state dairy and food commission believes that this will supply an incentive to the man who did not win any prizes last year to strain every nerve to better his dairy products this year.

Last year about 200 butter and cheesemakers took part at different times, although only eighty-five entered in all six contests. The first prize in each of the three classes, whole milk, butter, hand separator butter and cheese, was a trip to New York, and the second a trip to Chicago. Arrangements are now being made for the contests, the first of which will probably be held at the Booth cold storage warehouse, St. Paul, about the middle of next month.

NO RACE SUICIDE HERE.

Vital statistics for 1908 showed up well in comparison with those of previous years. The state department of public health reports that in the past year there was 44,274 births and 22,160 deaths.

"No race suicide here," said Dr. H. M. Bracken, gloating over the complete nature of the report. "I think that the great increase in the number of reported births and deaths is due largely to the operation of the new law which has been in force during the past year, forbidding the burial of a body without a burial permit."

It was the itchy watery kind and we had to keep his little hands wrapped up all the time and if he would happen to get them uncovered he would claw his face till the blood streamed down on his clothing. We called in a physician at once but he gave an ointment which was so severe that my babe would scream when it was put on. We changed doctors and medicine until we had spent fifty dollars or more and baby was getting worse. I was so worn out watching and caring for him night and day that I almost felt sure the disease was incurable. RUSSIAN NOBLEMAN'S WOOING.

Posed as a Lady's Maid to Make Acquaintance of a Baroness.

A St. Petersburg paper publishes details of a Russian romance in which figures the wealthy and beautiful young Baroness Urusoff, the widow of a distinguished Russian government official.

All the young cavaliers of Moscow were hopelessly in love with her. The baroness, however, rejected all attempts to obtain an introduction to her and lived in perfect seclusion, attended only by an elderly relative. Some months ago a young peasant girl began to visit the residence of the baroness, offering the servants cheap articles for sale. Subsequently the baroness used to buy different articles from the peasant, who was intelligent, had good manners and considerable conversational talents.

The baroness eventually asked the girl whether she would enter her service as a lady's maid. She agreed and discharged her duties to perfection for a fortnight and then revealed "herself" as a young Russian nobleman named Maximoff, who, taking advantage of his fair hair and complexion, had masqueraded as a domestic servant to break down the barriers with which the beautiful baroness had surrounded herself.

The baroness was so much impressed by his extraordinary perseverance that she became engaged to him, and the marriage took place a few days ago.

"COFFEE DOESN'T HURT ME"

Tales That Are Told.

"I was one of the kind who wouldn't believe that coffee was hurting me," says a N. Y. woman. "You just couldn't convince me its use was connected with the heart and stomach trouble I suffered from most of the time.

"My trouble finally got so bad I had to live on milk and toast almost entirely for three or four years. Still I loved the coffee and wouldn't believe it could do such damage.

"What I needed was to quit coffee and take nourishment in such form as my stomach could digest.

"I had read much about Postum, but never thought it would fit my case until one day I decided to quit coffee and give it a trial and make sure about it. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions.

"Soon I began to get better and was able to eat carefully selected foods without the aid of pepsin or other digestants and it was not long before I was really a new woman physically.

"Now I am healthy and sound, can eat anything and everything that comes along and I know this wonderful change is all due to my having quit coffee and got the nourishment I needed through this delicious Postum.

"My wonder is why everyone don't give up the old coffee and the troubles that go with it and build themselves up as I have done, with Postum."

Easy to prove by 10 days' trial of Postum in place of coffee. The reward is big.

DESTRUCTIVE SAN JOSE SCALE EXCITES INTEREST AND ALARM

Pest May Be Controlled by the Proper Use of Insecticidal Sprays.

"In the entire history of destructive insect pests," said Entomologist Howard the other day, "no insect has excited so much interest and alarm as has the San Jose scale. Its attacks are insidious and in many instances it has acquired a firm foothold in a section of country before its presence was suspected. But a few years ago the San Jose scale was considered a veritable menace to the growing of deciduous fruits in the east, and its discovery in an orchard was often followed by the destruction of the trees in the hope that its extermination might be secured. However, this feeling of alarm has now given way to one of confidence that the pest may be controlled by the proper use of insecticidal sprays, and without belittling the serious character of the insect, it may be said that it has simply taken its place among the several insect pests of the orchard, whose control must be enforced as a regular feature of orchard or garden work.

"Since its introduction into the east from California some 17 or 18 years ago it has become established in the principal deciduous fruit-growing regions in the more eastern states from Canada south to Florida and Texas. There are still many fruit-growing sections throughout this area where the scale has not made its appearance and no effort should be spared to keep it out for as long a time as possible; but its appearance in an orchard should not be the occasion of the destruction of otherwise valuable trees, in view of the fact that it can be controlled by thorough painstaking work with sprays. The insect is introduced into new localities principally on nursery stock, but once established, under conditions of neglect it spreads more or less rapidly from orchard to orchard. The system of inspection and fumigation of nursery stock which has been in practice for some years in most states has been an important means of restricting the more general distribution, and prospective purchasers of trees should assure themselves of their freedom from this and other pest likely to be distributed from nurseries."

BURN OUT THE BUDDING HORNS

How One Can Prevent the Horns Growing on Young Calves.

When circumstances are favorable, as in the case of farmers who build up their herds by raising the progeny, the horns may be prevented from growing by a simple and practically painless method, and the custom of preventing the growth of the horns rather than deferring the matter with the necessity of removing them from the grown animal is becoming more popular and more generally practiced under all conditions except in the case of calves dropped on the open range. To do this successfully it is necessary that the calf should be treated not later than one week after its birth, preferably when it is from three to five days old. The agent to be used may be either caustic soda or caustic potash, both of which may be procured in the drug stores in the form of sticks about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil and five inches long. These caustics must be handled with care, as they dissolve the cuticle and may make the hands or fingers sore. The preparation of the calf consists in first clipping the hair from the parts, washing clean with soap and warm water, and thoroughly drying with a cloth or towel. The stick of caustic should be wrapped in a piece of paper to protect the hands and fingers, leaving one end of the stick uncovered.

Moisten the uncovered end slightly and rub it on the horn buttons or little points which may be felt on the calf's head, first on one and then the other, alternately, two or three times on each, allowing the caustic to dry after each application. Be very careful to apply the caustic to the horn button only. If it is brought in contact with the surrounding skin it will cause pain. Be very careful also not to have too much moisture on the stick of caustic, as it will excoriate the skin and make the parts sore if allowed to run down over the face. After treatment keep the animal protected from rain, as water on the head after the application of caustic will cause it to run down over the face. This must be carefully avoided.

All of the preparations which have been used to prevent horns from growing on young animals have been composed largely of one or the other of the caustics above mentioned. In view of the fact that these substances alone, without the admixture of others, answer the purpose satisfactorily, it would hardly seem to be necessary to give the following formula, but as it was used with good results when much was being written in regard to dehorning compounds, it has been thought best to insert it here, chiefly to prevent the necessity for any further inquiry on the part of those who may have used it and are no longer in possession of it. The formula was published in the eighth and ninth annual reports of the bureau of animal industry for 1891 and 1892, and the preparation was at that time quite largely used. It was made by combining in an emulsion 50 per cent. of caustic soda, 25 per cent. of kerosene, and 25 per cent. of water. The caustic soda is dissolved in the water and heated to the boiling point, then removed from the fire, and the kerosene added gradually, while vigorously stirring the mixture. This emulsion is applied in very much the same manner as the stick caustic, except that it is necessary to employ a short, stiff brush, or meat skewer, using the large end, which has been previously mashed or contused to form a stubby brush. Two or three applications should be made to each horn button, as in the case of the stick caustic, with intervals to allow it to dry.

When a calf is three or four weeks old the caustics or caustic preparations are of little or no use. The horns on young animals of this age can be removed by one cut of a good sharp pocket knife, but when the treatment is delayed to this age there is considerable hemorrhage as a result of cutting the starting horns, which can be entirely avoided if the animals are treated with one of the caustics at the earlier age above indicated.

In the very young calf the horn button, or point that will ultimately develop into a horn, has scarcely any attachment to the skull and may be felt as a small button embedded in the skin. [illegible]

The nursery, orchard and forest interests of the country are menaced just now by an imported danger perhaps comparable with the foot-and-mouth disease in animals, and undoubtedly destined, like that plague, to be shut in and stamped out by the vigorous and enlightened methods of the present day, says a writer in the Country Gentleman. We refer to the brown-tail moth, which has made havoc for years in eastern New England, but was not found elsewhere in the United States until a fortnight ago, when living caterpillars of the creature, in their winter nests, were discovered in a shipment of apple, pear and cherry seedlings and quince stocks received by a New York dealer from Angiers, France, and possibly existing in nobody knows how many more of the hundreds of boxes of similar stock now regularly arriving in the United States from the same country. So far as this state is concerned, the instant attack that was made on this invasion by the state department of agriculture has undoubtedly ended all danger of distribution from this particular source; and the entomological authorities of all the states of the union having been notified of the discovery, it is to be supposed that vigilant watchfulness will everywhere be exerted, with the result of preventing any general outbreak. Nevertheless, country residents everywhere should be apprised of the possibilities of the case, and should consult the nearest entomologist immediately in the event of discovering anything like the winter nest of the creature on imported plants of whatever name or nature, the moth having a wide range of feeding. We give in this article engravings which may be serviceable, but would add the caution that the caterpillars now found in the nests are in many cases very minute creatures that only an entomologist with a microscope can satisfactorily pick out. Our picture is copied from one of the publications of the Massachusetts board of agriculture, which gives also this description of the winter nest:

"Each web is composed of a tenacious silk hibernaculum, inclosing leaves from which the epidermis has been consumed, although the outer leaves on the web may not have been attacked. The webs are firmly attached to the twigs by stout bands of silk. Almost invariably the web commences where the egg cluster was deposited, and remains of it can usually be found on or in each web. Exit holes sometimes remain open on the webs throughout the winter, but as a rule they are closed by the matting together of the web under the influence of rain. The web consists internally of numerous layers of silk, inclosing a great many small, irregular silk-lined chambers, which are often connected, and contain from six to fifty larvae. The usual number found in the chambers is about a dozen each. The larvae are also often found in the galleries in the web. The lowest part of the web is usually full of fine black excrement, and the castoff skins of the first molt occur in many of the chambers."

Of course it is understood that these nasty nests are to be looked for only on imported stock. The figure in the center of the illustration has no bearing on the case in this country at present, except in eastern New England; and we have faith to believe it will not be necessary to study it elsewhere. Still, there's no knowing; and forewarned is forearmed.

Inoculation of Clover.—Clovers do not always grow as readily or as vigorously as might be expected from the richness of the soil. In recent years it has been discovered by scientists that the growth of plants of this class (clovers, peas and beans) is dependent to some extent on the presence of small nodules or bunches on the roots. These nodules contain bacteria which in some mysterious way assist the roots in taking up food from the soil. If these bacteria are not present in the soil the clovers will be likely to make poor growth—indeed alfalfa may not make any growth. If the proper kind of bacteria are supplied and the inoculation of soil and root is successful the plants will show extra vitality.

Cultures containing these bacteria have been sent out to farmers from the Ontario Agricultural college for the past four years, with directions for applying to the fields that are being seeded with clover. Last season 800 farmers reported that their alfalfa crops had been benefited by the application while 140 reported that there was no gain. With alsike clover the reports were equally favorable over 66 per cent. of the experimenters finding that the culture had improved the crop. With red clover the results were not so favorable only 55 per cent. having noted a gain. Peas and beans showed still less benefit from the applications. As the work is still in its infancy it is probable that better results will be obtained as the methods of application are better understood.

Building a Wire Fence.—Often, when building a wire fence, it is necessary to cross a small ravine or depression in the field. In such cases it is sometimes a puzzle how to anchor the post in the lowest place, so that it will not "pull out" when the wires are tightened. The accompanying drawing shows a good method of solving the problem. A wire (doubled to secure strength) is stretched from the bases of the two posts near the ravine edge over the top of the lower post.

To Make Concrete Cistern.—Cistern walls should be eight inches thick and floor four inches thick as the cistern is very large. Material will be: Cement, 13 barrels; gravel, 13 yards; sand, one yard; concrete, mixed eight parts gravel to one part cement. Mortar for plastering side walls should be mixed two parts sand to one part cement.

MADE UP ANOTHER PACKAGE.

Congressman Had Misunderstood Friend's Embarrassed Allusions to Father-in-Law.

A prominent member of congress, who is a teetotaler, but who usually keeps a little scrumptious and ancient whisky on hand to distribute at irregular intervals to his friends, stopped one of these friends—who happens to be one of the best-known employes at the capitol—in a corridor the other day.

"Better come around," said the congressman; "for I've just received a case of the same old stuff. Mighty old and fine—better come."

The friend looked real cheerful for a moment, but then his face attained repose again and he hesitated.

"Well—er—" said he, "I'm much obliged, but father-in-law is visiting me and—er—I—"

"Oh, never mind that," said the member, "just you come along and bring father-in-law, too. I'll wrap up the package so he'll never know it is whisky."

"But," said the friend, "I wasn't think—"

"Hush," said the member, "do as I tell you. You bring father-in-law, if you can't get out without bringing him, and he'll never know what's in the package."

And the member blew away, leaving the friend biting his lips and looking foolish.

On the appointed evening friend and father-in-law arrived on time—the father-in-law a distinguished looking gentleman of the old school, reserved and dignified to a degree. Finally, after they had chatted for a little while the congressman had begun to wonder, after gazing at the father-in-law, whether he had really wrapped up the whisky in sufficient of a disguise, father-in-law opened his mouth and spake.

"James," said he to the friend, his son-in-law, "I beg to remind you that it is getting late and that we have an engagement. I dislike to hasten you but I would suggest that we take the whisky and go."

Whereupon the member, who had misunderstood and misinterpreted the friend's suggestion about "father-in-law being in town," laughed until he cried and then trotted upstairs and made it two packages instead of one.

"By gracious," said he the next day at the capitol, "the whole blamed family is thirsty."

Mrs. Taft's Five O'Clock Teas.

Mrs. Taft is conducting a veritable salon these days in the dainty blue room of the White House, and those who feel entitled to pay their respects to the president's wife and to take friends along find an open door. There are the lightest of refreshments and everything is as informal as possible. There is the delightful golden Japanese tea, very mild and fragrant, each cup made to order. Mrs. Taft lived in the orient long enough to master the fine art of tea making. She brews the drink herself deftly. She uses a tea ball given to her by the Civic league of Manila. It is of filigree and exquisitely chased. With the tea ball and boiling water Mrs. Taft mixes a thick syrup of sugar, to which a few drops of lemon juice are added. The result is exhilarating. Chips of nuts or sticks of sugared cakes are served with the tea instead of sandwiches or layer cake or buttered toast. It is five o'clock tea and nothing more, but the spirit of good will which animates the company is inspiring.

Friendly Fish.

A keeper in the aquarium is sure that fishes know their friends just as much as other animals, and his long association with them has led him to become as fond of his finny pets as another man would be of a horse or a dog. One fish in particular seems to him to be more intelligent than the rest. It is of the box variety, triangular in form, and it has passed five years in captivity since it arrived from Bermuda. To see how well it knows the keeper it is necessary to go behind the tanks with him over the water. The fish answers to the name Peter, and when the keeper calls, "Peter, Peter, come and kiss me," it comes up to the surface of the water and puts its face close to his. He can tell whether it is feeling well, and often gives medicine or a tonic to his finny friend. "I used to have an earth worm as a pet," he said, "and when I went to the box where it lived and tapped on the side it would raise its head to mine and know I was there. It never was afraid, and I felt that it had come to know me and to like me."—New York Press.

Fascination of Club Life Puzzles.

"I have made a deep study of social topics, in and out of the pink tea class," said a woman writer, "but I have not arrived at a full understanding of the fascination that clubs exercise over women. By the last reports 3,460 women's clubs are thriving in the United States, with a membership getting near to 400,000. Women will work like slaves to get a club going and keep it going. Pretty girls near my home spent an entire day recently washing windows and generally fixing up a clubhouse for a leap year dance because the servants had a row with the housekeeper and decamped. Do you think those girls would wash windows and dust chairs at home? Not if the grime of ages accumulated all over the house! Wherein is the charm? Any woman can have a better time at home than at a club and for less money. The desire to ape man seems to be the only explanation."—New York Press.

Airships and the Smugglers.

While congress committees are wrestling with important schedules Maj. Baden-Powell projects the interesting theory that with the perfection of aerial transport the protection nations of the world will be faced with the necessity of adopting free trade. They will be unable to police the air and the terrestrial interior effectively enough to prevent the wholesale smuggling of the less bulky articles of commerce. An airship can cross international boundaries unseen and land a cargo of dutiable goods in a spot the customs officers cannot protect. Consequently in the view of this expert all duties will [illegible] abolished.

For Catarrh of the Throat of Years' Standing.

"I was afflicted for two years with catarrh of the throat. At first it was very slight, but every cold I took made it worse.

"I followed your directions and in a very short time I began to improve. I took one bottle and am now taking my second. I can safely say that my throat and head are cleared from catarrh at the present time, but I still continue to take my usual dose for a spring tonic, and I find there is nothing better."—Mrs. W. Ribbons for Table Ornaments.

Ribbon table ornaments are shown of pink satin ribbon, but they are copied in any desired color. The best colors for this purpose are blue, pale green, yellow and lavender. The ribbon fern dish comes in round, oval and oblong shapes, prettily trimmed with ribbon bows. Then there are single roses of ribbon to be scattered about the table and big ribbon bows to be placed at the corners. When souvenirs are given the guests, it is pretty idea to have them tucked away in a big snowball of the same color as the ribbon decorations, and hung over the table from the center light. Each gift is attached to a long ribbon, the other end being brought down to a guest's plate. When the luncheon is over the ribbons are pulled, the ball opens, and each guest secures a gift.

Grizzlies That Eat Violets.

In one locality the grizzly of the Rockies is found eating the fresh sprig of the dog-tooth violet and the green leaves of the spring beauties, while a few hundred miles farther on to the north or south, as the case may be, the grizzly doesn't touch them. Instead he may be discovered munching at the young shoots of the shooting star down in the Bitter Root mountain country, for instance, among the towering peaks of the higher Rockies. Upon this question of locality, which is often overlooked or even ignored by nature writers, lies the solution of many warmly disputed points between those who tell the public at large all about nature and its animals.

The Motor Bag.

The motor, or one-night, bag is an indispensable luxury for the woman who motors into town for luncheon or dinner these lovely spring days. It will also be found a great convenience for the woman who is to be away from her well-supplied toilet table for a day or so. This bag is in the form of a dispatch box or tiny suitcase, and is fitted around the sides and inside the lid with brush, comb, manicure set and other toilet accessories, while there is sufficient vacant space in the center for extra handkerchiefs, veils and gloves. A less expensive affair that is equally useful to the traveler is a soft, red leather case, just large enough to hold an extra pair of gloves, veil and handkerchiefs, and fitted with small cushions for fancy pins.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

The Detroit Record, the leading paper in Representative Bjorge's county, commends Governor Johnson's veto of the tonnage tax.

There was once a certain king who with his legions of soldiers marched up the hill and then marched down again. Perhaps Mr. O'Neill might find an apt comparison in his own predicament.

Nearly 1,000,000 voters of Pennsylvania have signed petitions asking the state legislature to start the movement which in 1913 will give a bond issue of $500,000,000 for building good roads. The sum of $5,000,000 will be asked for to begin immediate work.

There are numerous indications that Justice Jaggard is flirting with the nomination for governor. The judge is able, clean and genial. Furthermore he likes the limelight, and before he entered the cloistered precincts of the supreme court had the reputation of being something of a politician.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette is another ninth district paper that is of the opinion that Senator Hanson would make good as "our congressman."—Ada Herald.

We see that hereafter it will be necessary to diagram the Gazette's jokes. The possibility of Senator Hanson's accession to a place in the halls of Congress seems so remote that we haven't given it a serious thought.

The public were presumed to be satisfied when it was proposed to reduce the tariff on rough lumder $1 per thousand, but they very soon saw through the sham, says the Fairmont Sentinel. The only rough lumber imported is by the manufacturers, which they are interested in securing as cheaply as possible, but as soon as they run it through a planing mill it becomes finished lumber and ready to sell to consumers and on all other such lumber the Payne bill provides a prohibitive tariff. A nice little joke.

There is comparatively little criticism of Governor Johnson's veto of the tonnage tax, even in southern Minnesota. The trouble is that very few people understand the principal involved in a tax of this nature, and most of those insistent for the tax predicated, their belief on the theory that it was a deserved "swipe" at the steel trust. However, as the burden of the tax would fall most heavily on the independent mine owner and the "innocent bystander" it is but fair to ask that such a radical change in taxation methods be postponed for a little while. The farmers of the Red River Valley find a market for many of their products in the iron country, and they are particularly interested in preventing a season of depression on the ranges.

That the present legislature has not made good is a generally accepted proposition, says the Minnesota Mascot. The press of the state, regardless of party, has time and again called attention to the weak, inefficient and unstatesmanlike handling of the pubilc measures by the legislature of 1909. Every unmuzzled sheet in the state has told the present set of solons what it thought of the manner in which measures for the benefit of the state were being handled and from every quarter have come admonitions to the solons regarding one or another of the many important matters which have been up for consideration. But the solons have been a law unto themselves and have done just as they pleased and unless they make a record breaking run during the few days that are left their service to the state will not help the dominant poiltical party very much. The legislature is apparently going to pass up more opportunities to do service to the people than any of its predecessors of recent years.

REBUKING MR. ROBERTSON.

Representative Opsahl is entitled to great credit for his refusal to mix in the internal affairs of Red Lake county. He took the position that a member of the legislature was not justified in taking the part of one section of the county as against another section, and we believe he was absolutely fair with all the people he represented.

This position is to be commended, and it is to be regretted that some of the representatives of neighboring districts did not take this view. A notable instance is that of Donald Robertson of Marshall county, who used all the influence at his command to assist Thief River Falls in attempting to pass legislation inimical to the best interests of Red Lake county. Of course he was not successful, but this fact makes his attitude none the less unbecoming. Mr. Robertson knew little or nothing of local conditions, and yet his support and vote was always found on the side of Thief River.

Mr. Robertson may discover that two can play at his game. If it is incumbent upon him to interfere in the internal affairs of Red Lake county, there is good reason why outsiders may use their influence against him in future campaigns.

THE HOME MERCHANT.

In an editorial way on "Why It Pays to Buy Goods at Home," the Liberal (Kan.) Independent has this deserved appreciation of the home merchant:

NOT MADE BY THE TRUST CALUMET
BAKING POWDER
CALUMET BAKING POWDER CO.
CHICAGO

Pure in the can—Pure in the baking. Never Fails. Try it.

Without any thought of sentiment or suggestion that we owe allegiance to anyone, the cold, hard truth is that the retail merchants of our home town are the best business friends we have.

The retail merchant conducts a school of commerce for our education—and the tuition is free. Every man, woman and child gets the benefit of seeing in the home town about anything that is of real importance. He protects us against fraud and deceit. He stands for the square deal.

You never ordered a $10 lightning rod of your home merchant and then found your note for a thousand dollars in the bank the next day as a result. You never paid him $60 for a range that warped out of shape in six months—without your wife getting the money back. He never charged you $75 for a "trailer" buggy that you found out afterwards could be bought anywhere for $60.

No, the home merchant is just like you. He lives where he does his business and his success depends on making a friend of you and your neighbor. Like you, he has to make good.

The retail merchant is now the one great factor in our commercial system and this is true solely because he renders us better service than we can get elsewhere. Take him away and our home town is gone; take our home town away and we deprive our children of the retail store, which is the greatest single educational factor in modern life. No, it cannot be. The retail merchant will continue to abide in our affections so long as we value our homes, because the average citizen is proud of his town (he always tells how close his farm is to it) and he secretly despises the method of peddlers—and the peddler system is now known to be the legitimate father of the whole catalogue house business.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The impracticable thing about truth-telling is how it would make everybody hate you.

The most that a girl can ever see that a great grandmother was for was to inherit some old laces for them.

The surest way to lay up money for your future is to have some tight-fisted old relative do it for you and leave it to you in his will.

The way a girl likes to be kissed is when she's so excited about it she doesn't know whether she is going to lose her hairpins or pretend to be mad.

Nothing can make a man more disagreeable to his wife than going on a visit to their relatives, excepting having their relations come on a visit to them.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: A square meal is some people's idea of a square deal.

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

SCISSORETTES

A Kansas exchange says that when the drastic prohibitory law passed by the legislature goes into effect, the Kansas editors will have to quench their thirsts with that "due" from delinquent subscribers.

W. E. Blackburn of the Anthony (Kan.) Republican favors the plan of adopting a "code of ethics" for the State Editorial association. The code Mr. Blackburn suggests contains only five words: "Keep Faith with the Subscribers."

Otis B. Weaver, editor of the Ada (Okla) News and City Attorney Tom H. Holt mixed on the streets of Ada. Friends separated them and now Weaver is directing his criticism more at the "friends who held me" than at the city attorney. Hard indeed are the paths of the peacemakers.

A man in a neighboring town taking a city paper in preference to a country paper because he got more paper for the money, was attracted by the advertisement of a fire escape which would be forwarded on receipt of two dollars. He sent his cash and in a few days received a copy of the New Testament.

A Norton (Kan.) editor shot at a man who knocked him down, and although the shot was fired at close range the assailant received only a flesh wound. This prompts the suggestion that the school of journalism ought to include target practice in its curriculum, says the Salina (Kan.) Journal.

The new teacher had just taken charge of the school and was learning the names of the pupils. The first one she asked said his name was Jule. The teacher trying to reprove the boy said: "That's not proper. Your name is Julius." The next boy she asked was named Bill, and thinking he could please her said: "My name is Bilious."

City Editor—"What do you mean by saying in this robbery story that Brown was knocked down and relieved of a hundred dollars? Were you ever robbed yourself?" New reporter—"No sir." City Editor—"That accounts for it. If you'd been robbed you wouldn't describe the loss of a hundred dollars as a relief."—St. Louis Republic.

You'd scarcely expect one of my age, in handling merchandising to engage and hope to get a paying trade without the local paper's ad. And yet I did that very thing; I opened up a store last spring—this month the sheriff took my stock and sold it at the auction block. Don't view me with a scornful eye, but simply say as I pass by: "There goes a fool who seemed to think he had no use for printer's ink." There is a truth as broad as earth and business men should know its worth, 'tis simply this: The public buys its goods from those who advertise.—Polk (Neb.) Progress.

The precocious first born son of O. B. Boone editor and publisher of the Cleburne New Era, Heflin, Ala., announces his arrival as follows: "I'm a litle baby boy. I arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Boone. The editor says I'm a little Chinese with a red face and pug nose and that I only weigh seven pounds. But then I don't think he's so big. He made his brag that he will have me 'setting type' with him before many weeks, but I'll fool him. I'll lose my guess if I don't cause him to stick a tack in his foot before the summer is over by making him get up in the middle of the night for the paregoric."

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

There is an evaporation from the body going on continually, day and night, through the pores and glands of the skin. This is nature's way of maintaining the proper temperature of our systems and preserving the softness and flexibility of the skin, and so long as the blood is free from impurities no trouble will result. When, however, the blood from any cause becomes infected with humors and acids, these too must be expelled, and coming in contact with the delicate fibres and tissues with which the skin is so abundantly supplied they produce irritation and inflammation, and the effect is shown by Eczema, Acne, Tetter, and skin affections of various kinds. These impurities and humors get into the blood through a deranged or inactive condition of the system; the members whose duty it is to carry off the waste and refuse matter of the body fail to properly perform their work, and this impure, fermenting matter is left in the system to be absorbed by the blood. The skin is not only affected by poisons generated within the system, but poisons from without, such as Poison Oak, Poison Ivy, Nettle Rash, etc., enter through the open pores and glands, and so thoroughly do they become rooted in the blood that they are ever present, or return at certain seasons of each year to torment the sufferer. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., cannot cure skin diseases. True, such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, and aids in keeping the skin clean, but it does not reach the real cause, and at best can be only palliating and soothing. A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only certain cure for skin diseases. S. S. S., a gentle acting, safe blood purifier, made entirely of vegetable ingredients of the forest and field, is the proper treatment. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation, and neutralizes the acids and humors, thoroughly cleansing and purifying the blood, and curing skin affections of every kind. It supplies to the blood the fresh, nutritive qualities necessary to sustain the skin and all other parts of the body, and rids the blood of any and all poisons. S. S. S. cures Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Poison Oak and Ivy, Nettle Rash, and all other skin troubles, and cures them permanently by removing every trace of the cause from the blood. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired furnished free to all who write.

I have used your S. S. S., spring and fall, for the past two years, with the result that it entirely relieved me of a form of Eczema which my doctor was unable to cure. My arms, lower limbs, and, in fact, the biggest portion of my whole body was affected, and when I first began S. S. S. the itching, etc., was worse, but I continued the remedy with the result that the dry, itching eruption entirely disappeared. I think a great deal of your medicine, and have recommended it to others with good results. It is the best blood medicine made, and I can conscientiously recommend it for the cure of all blood and skin affections. CHAS. HORSTMAN.

The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the heart or kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments, the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak stomach, heart or kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling nerve. When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days and see! PLUMMER

On last Monday a prairie fire raged through northern Mayfield township and did considerable damage to isolated haystacks, etc. The dwelling and barn on the Helmer Nikstad land were completely destroyed but so far as can be learned no other buildings were lost.

William Hannay, youngest son of J. K. Hannay, formerly of St. Hilaire, died at Mount Vernon. Wash., on April 14th as a result of injuries received in trying to stop his team which was startled by a passing milk wagon. Young Hannay was thrown to the ground and the wagon passed over his body causing internal injuries from which his death resulted.

ST. HILAIRE.

From the Spectator.

Mrs. Jacob Einerson, of Rocksbury, was taken to Crookston and was operated upon Monday by Dr. Holte for appendicitis. She is improving rapidly and will soon be home.

Olga Fricker, the 13 year old daughter of Michael Fricker, was operated upon for appendicitis by Drs. Swanson, Cummings and Gamble of Thief River Falls, last Saturday. The case was a very difficult one and the little girl is not yet out of danger. She is, however, improving and stands good chances to recover.

Only the immediate members of the familes were present last Wednesday evening at the residence of S. J. Amble when his daughter, Blanch, was united in marriage to Mr. Axel Jacobson, of Black River, by Rev. Alex Sand. Both of the contracting parties are well and favorably known and their large circle of friends will unite with the Spectator in wishing the happy couple all kinds of prosperity and wedded bliss.

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

Impossible to be Well

It is impossible to be well, simply impossible, if the bowels are constipated. You must pay attention to the laws of nature, or suffer the consequences. THIEF RIVER FALLS

From the News and Press.

Sam Rusky, an Austrian, is being detained in the city bastile by order of the government. He came into this country without having the necessaries required by law and he will be deported to Canada as soon as the department here receives their orders.

James Bulman has resigned as a deputy sheriff of Red Lake county. The reason of Mr. Bulman's resignation is due to the fact that on the 1st of May he will remove to Prince Albert, Canada, to engage in the lumbering business. It is understood that Sheriff Nelson will not appoint any deputy for Thief River Falls, but will ttend to work here in person.

The fire department was called out Monday afternoon by the burning of a residence on the East Side occupied by Ed. Carpenter, a Soo brakemen. All of the furniture in the house was saved, but the house itself was a total loss. It was one of the houses built by Martin Evenson years ago and is now owned by Mikkel Seland, a Rocksbury farmer. There was $450 insurance.

A case was tried in the Municipal court in our city on Tuesday in which E. G. Buse was plaintiff and the Sortedahl Loan and Abstract company, the defendant. The plaintiff claims $305 due him for service for which he received no remuneration. A counter claim was alleged by the defendant and the case was continued until further evidence could be introduced.

CY YOUNG TO END HIS CAREER IN TOWN WHERE HE STARTED

Most Noted Pitcher in Baseball Has One Touch of Sentiment—Other Ball Players Who Felt the Same Way.

Through all the triumphs of a baseball player's career a certain sentiment continually carries him back to the major league town in which he first wore the spangles and heard the applause of the fans.

This explains why Cy Young, the great pitcher of the Cleveland club, was so willing to be transferred from Boston to the Forest City.

In Boston Young held a position that was probably unique in baseball. He had been there eight years. He had helped to win two pennants. He had figured in a number of wonderful pitching exhibitions, including the notable feat of 1904, when he retired twenty-seven members of the Philadelphia League club in order, not allowing a single man to reach first base.

In the midst of last season a "Cy Young Day" was held, in which thousands turned out to do honor to the Grand Old Man of Baseball.

Every club in the American league sent players to compose a picked team that was to play Boston and do honor to Cy. Presents galore were given to him by officials of the city, and noted baseball leaders paid him compliment.

Yet when the recent announcement came that Owner Taylor had sold the release of Cyrus Denton to the Cleveland club of the American league, old Cy did not deny that he was pleased.

Cy Is Glad of It.

"I'm glad to have a chance," he said, "to end my baseball days in the town where I first made my reputation as a big leaguer."

That is a long while to remember in the case of Cy, for with one or two exceptions he has been longer in the game than any man now actively connected with a big league.

By the time this season ends he will have been pitching for a score of years, and in that time he has attained honor that has come to only a few baseball players.

He was a lion in St. Louis, he was the idol of Boston, yet he never got over the old love for Cleveland, where, as a member of the National League club, he pitched his first ball as a major league player.

Some memory of the joy of hearing the first applause in honor of his exploits still lingers in the mind of the veteran, some recollection of how they rose at him when he struck out man after man and showed the baseball world that a new phenomenon had arisen, is ever present to carry thoughts back to the old town.

And Cy hasn't a monopoly of that same feeling, for a little examination of the records shows that other veterans leap at the chance to return once more to the triumphs of their youth.

Kid Gleason Also Sentimental.

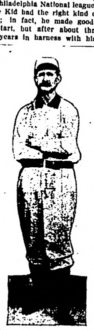
Kid Gleason, the assistant manager of the Philadelphia Nationals is an excellent instance of the impulse.

It is now twenty-one years ago since the Kid broke into baseball as a top notcher.

He was then a pitcher, short and powerful, and having a speed that was surprising considering his height.

The first man to give him a chance was Harry Wright, then manager of the Philadelphia National league team.

The Kid had the right kind of material; in fact, he made good from the start, but after about three or four years in harness with his first



Sam Thompson, the Old Detroit Star, love the Kid was sought by some other team, and, as he made the first-class basis of a profitable trade, he was allowed to go.

In the interval he wandered far and wide. St. Louis had him for a time, then he went to Baltimore and helped to win some of the pennants that put that city on the baseball map.

His pitching days passed, he turned his attention to infield work, and became a star second baseman.

He went to New York and managed the team there, then he went to the Detroit Americans in the early days of the American league.

But in the midst of all his passings from place to place his heart had never wavered in its loyalty to the club that had first given him a chance in the big show.

Finally he could stand it no longer. He went to James Potter, then president of the Philadelphia club and said:

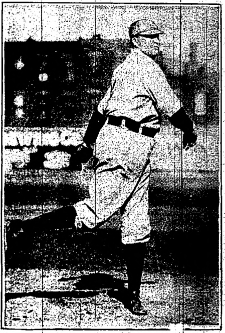
"Mr. Potter, I want to come back. Get my release."

Mr. Potter did, and for three seasons Gleason captained the club and played second base.

Young Blood Steps In.

Then came a time when a younger and faster man, Knabe, proved he had a better right to the job than the veteran. Gleason never whimpered. He stuck, and gave the youngster the advantage of all the knowledge he had amassed in his years of service. Other clubs wanted Gleason when they found he had been relegated to the bench, but Gleason declined to consider any proposition while the Phillies continued to want him, and he is there yet.

"I want to wind up in the town where I started," is the way he puts it.



"Cy" Young, Most Noted Pitcher in Baseball.

Joe Kelley got his first opportunity as a major league player in Boston, and though he won far greater fame in Baltimore as a member of the three-time champions, he did his last work in Boston as a big leaguer, having managed the team there last year.

Pat Donovan is another similar instance. It was in 1890, as a member of the Brooklyn club, that he had his opening experience of pitting his abilities against those of the fastest known company. He did not attract any world-wide attention at that time, but enough astute baseball managers had studied his form to see that in the lean, left-handed hitter there was the making of a future star.

Donovan Drifts Back.

Pittsburg wanted him, and Pat eagerly went. Brooklyn had not at that time the charms for him it came afterward to possess.

Years spent in the Smoky City established his reputation, and then he went to St. Louis to manage the National league team.

Washington, also, had him as a leader for a season; but it was to Brooklyn he went to wind up a major league career that had lasted for close to a score of years.

Donovan stayed three years before he moved out of the limelight.

One of the greatest characters of baseball, "Eagle Eye" Jake Beckley, first became known to fame as a member of the St. Louis Whites, then of the American association. He hit the ball so hard that his prowess as a batsman went all over the country. Pittsburg grabbed him first. He played in Cincinnati. He had a varied played there for a couple of years and then went back to the minors.

Greatest Slugger of All.

One of the cases that had the most experience, in fact, but it was at last as a member of a St. Louis team, the Cardinals of the National league, that he finally said farewell to the fastest company a couple of years ago.

Billy Hallman, the actor ball player, is another case in point. He began as a catcher with the Philadelphia National League club, moved all over the circuit, and finally came back after fifteen years to the old town.

Joe Kelley, Who Started and Ended in Boston.

sentiment is that of Sam Thompson. At one time he was one of the most noted sluggers in baseball.

He came to the fore as a member of the old Detroit club, when it numbered in its ranks the greatest collection of batsmen ever brought together on a ball field—Richardson, Rowe, White, Hanlon, Thompson, Dunlap, etc.

Thompson was a great home run hitter, thrower and fielder. He went to the Philadelphia National league club, played there about ten years till 1896, and then retired.

But in the closing days of 1906, ten years later, a whim seized him to get into the game again. He had practiced constantly; he was in good condition. Detroit, his first team, put him in. He played in half a dozen games, showed fair form and was wildly cheered by the fans. Then he went back into retirement content. He had played once more in the old town.

NEWS IN LAVENDER.

"Splinters" of "Gleason's Pictorial" Which Still Have Point.

Somebody of an investigating nature recently got down from his father's garret a bound volume of "Gleason's Pictorial Drawing Room Companion," published in Boston, 1854, and thumbing the yellow pages over he found on the editorial page of each weekly a refreshing compendium of short facts and editorial humor under the standing title of "Splinters." Here are some of them:

Little Cordelia Howard has made a most decided hit at the National theater in this city as Little Eva.

The engineers of the Erie railroad have struck on account of a regulation whose mandate is that every engineer whose train runs off the track shall be dismissed.

Miss Julia Dean's engagement in this city has been highly successful, though to us she lacks refinement and study.

A Rochester paper states that the Rev. Miss Antoinette L. Brown is not married.

We have had a remarkably open fall and a beautiful Indian summer in the State of Massachusetts.

Kasosky, the celebrated bootmaker of Paris, works only for people who ride in carriages. His boots cannot be walked in.

The governor of Arkansas says the state treasury is short—a very prevalent complaint.

It is now almost as much an evidence of foppery to have a close shorn face as it used to be to wear a mustache.

As many as eight dead horses are carried out of Boston daily to feed Mr. Ward's hogs. Who eats the pork?

Ninety tons of poultry came to New York for Thanksgiving. Great place, New York.

Mr. Joseph Breisford was accidentally killed at Coney Island, N. Y., lately. He broke his spine playing leapfrog.

Jake Beckley, Whose Career Has Centered in St. Louis.

One of the greatest first basemen of his day. Beckley has been in the game for many years. His greatest work was done in Cincinnati and St. Louis. Last year he drifted into the American association, and did great work for the Kansas City team. He will be seen with that organization again this year.

Society Nicknames in England.

It is difficult to imagine that dignified individual, the Rev. Lord William Cecil, who objected recently to common policemen restraining the exuberant spirits of high born youths at Oxford, being referred to as "Fish," or Lord Alington, his majesty's host the other day at Crichel, being called "Trotters."

Other nicknames are "Tatters," borne by the duchess of Newcastle, and "Cuckoo," which serves for both Lady Shaftesbury and Lady Lucan, while Lord Heneage is "Smike," Lord Raglan "Chalks," Lord Winchester "Tim," the duke of Marlborough "Sonny," Lord Londonderry "C," and Lord Yarmouth "The Bloater."

The Rickshaw in Japan.

In 1871 the introduction of the jinriksha (man power cart), now anglicized over the East as rickshaw, came at a critical time for the immense hordes of bearers and porters who had been employed on the great main roads. These men had supplied the demands of the processions of the territorial and smaller daimyo, on their journeys to and from Yeddo and when the shogun proceeded to do homage to the secluded emperor in Kioto. These had been out of work since 1868, and much distress was experienced.

Dora, the pet of the household, was very fond of oysters, and after eating her lunch of oysters and crackers she thought of her dear mother busy at her sewing machine. She selected a nice large oyster, put it in a plate and carried it to her mother, who, pleased with her little daughter's thoughtfulness, ate the oyster and said:

"It is most as good as my little girlie."

"Yes," answered Dora, "I know it is good 'cause I licked it all the way from the kitchen."

By the will of Miss Henrietta Knispel, who died Sunday at Belleville, where she had taught for more than thirty years, her old horse Nellie is condemned to death. Fearing that the animal, which for many years had hauled her to school, would not be properly taken care of, Miss Knispel ordered that after her death it be shot and buried in the orchard at the testator's country home, Rosedale. Another pet, her dog Belle, meets a better fate, the will providing it be given to someone who will give it a good home.

DANCING BAREFOOT FOR MONEY A NEW SOCIETY FAD

Will Others Follow Lady Richardson, Who Recently Startled New York?

"What will she do next?" That is the question almost the entire world is asking regarding Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, for if any woman has almost a world-wide reputation for unique stunts and daring performances, that woman is Lady Richardson.

Who would think of a titled English woman representing, in her own family right and that of her husband, two of the most dignified and austere lines of Great Britain, dancing barefoot in public, and for money?

She says she does it for a charitable purpose. She proposes to establish, in Scotland, a home, or training school, for boys. That seems commendable enough. But the burning question raised by her recent New York performances is, will barefoot dancing become a society fad?

Will others seize eagerly upon this new method of banishing the ennui of a long established routine, of securing a novel, if somewhat daring, relief from the palling monotony of teas, receptions and cards?

"There was a breathless silence when the lights were turned down in the big ballroom and Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, barefooted and in white garments, not voluminous, was seen silhouetted against a dark green curtain."

Thus began one account telling of the titled dancer's first public appearance in New York. Many pillars of society were present—and they were at a loss, apparently, as to how the startling innovation should be taken.

Lady Richardson, perhaps, did not care; she was getting $500 for her appearances, so why worry as to her reception?

Later, when the audience had recovered its breath, so to speak, there was considerable applause for the dancer.

"This came largely from the women present," a chronicler recorded faithfully. "The men in the audience looked bored."

"When she first came on the stage," the waiting world of newspaper readers was informed next day, "she wore a classic garb like Diana prepared for the chase.

"It was of soft clinging gray material, some crepy stuff that clung affectionately to her. With every move it followed her graceful contours. It reached a little below the knees, from which the limbs were bare, as well as her ladyship's feet. These, some one remarked, were rather large and flat.

"The robe was cut very low in the neck and under the arms; it was gathered just above the waist by a narrow cord, and in the same way the skirt was caught midway between hips and knees.

"Lady Richardson is graceful and charming, and she has a way of prancing about the stage in Mendelssohn's spring song that conveys a certain joyfulness, but her arms are too long and so are her fingers; her neck, too, is not flawless."

"Lady Constance danced the gloom of Grieg," stated another account "She tripped the wholesome mirth of Mendelssohn and trembled with all her interpretative spirit through the ecstasy of Rubinstein.

"She did all of this in the garb of a Greek naiad. The kind of naiad that Lady Constance copied is not found today, hence the room was well filled."

Previous to her public appearance Lady Constance had appeared at several private houses. She had given a barefoot dance for Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's dinner guests and had also danced at a dinner party given by Mrs. James A. Burden.

Society found the gyrations and barefoot pirouettings of the titled English woman so interesting and novel that a great demand sprang up for her services. She became greatly encouraged in the hope that she would secure enough money to establish her school for boys in Scotland.

"I propose to begin my school with five nice boys," she said, in explaining her plans. "I shall teach them agriculture, dancing and athletics, as well as the lessons they would learn in an ordinary school.

"Schools nowadays, especially in America, do not go in enough for outdoor sports—and outdoor sports make men of boys.

"In my school the boys will get as much outdoor exercise as they get indoor work.

"Why shouldn't I dance for money?' asked Lady Richardson, when some surprise was expressed at her latest attempt at unconventionality.

"I have traveled a great deal, I have been on hunting and exploring expeditions; I have won medals in swimming contests.

"Now I feel a desire to do something for those who are not as fortunate as myself.

"It seems to me I can do nothing better than establish the right sort of school for boys. I am growing weary of the monotony of everyday life; I want to engage in something new.

"However, I am poor. I haven't the money to found and maintain such a school as I wish, so it is necessary for me to earn money.

"I can dance well, I know, so I am going to make those who wish to see me dance pay for the privilege. I will use the money for my boys.

"Several years ago I learned professional dancing from an instructor in London, but up to the present I have not danced in public; I have done so only at small social affairs, where the hostess was my friend.

"Of course, I have been dancing nearly all my life, beginning at the age of two and a half years.

"I do not regard my dancing in the relation of the song to music; I try to give a picture of the sounds you hear."

Lady Richardson does not care for the Salome dance, although she has done it. Last season all England was listening eagerly to the story of how she did a Salome dance before King Edward.

A large and distinguished house party was being entertained by the duke and duchess of eWatminster, and the king was there for one of the week-end visits he is fond of paying his wealthy subjects.

Lady Richardson is not afraid of the king or anybody else, and one evening she proposed that she be permitted to liven things up a bit by giving the famous dance. The duke and duchess of Westminster consented.

After dinner the daring young woman appeared before the guests in a duplicate of the costume that Maude Allan had made the most talked of in England.

Lady Richardson did the dance exceedingly well, it was reported, and won generous rounds of applause.

It is seldom that Lady Constance can do anything of the sort without a sensational climax. When the dance was finished she threw herself dramatically at the king's feet and, extending her arms imploringly, exclaimed:

"Sire, I crave the head of Sir Ernest Cassel on a charger!"

This was the height of daring. Sir Ernest Cassel is one of the king's intimate friends, and the monarch never permits any levity or ridicule to be launched at his friends.

He was made exceedingly angry by Lady Richardson's words and did not attempt to conceal his displeasure. His anger, however, did not seem to worry the titled Salome in the slightest.

She has been accustomed to doing just as she pleased from childhood. Her husband, Sir Edward Austin Stewart-Richardson, a type of the "Earl of Pawtucket" style of Englishman, who came with her to America, evidently never attempts to interfere with her plans. While his wife was dancing barefoot before assemblages of New York's socially elect, Sir Edward remained discreetly in the background of hotel lounging rooms.

Lady Richardson's marriage was as unexpected as some of her more recent performances. She had not been without earnest suitors, but evidently gave little thought of matrimony.

Her acceptance of Sir Edward Richardson was a surprise to her friends. He was considerably older than she, and was not exactly the sort of man one would fancy as attracting a spirited young woman of her type.

Hunting is one of the ruling passions. She has killed ibexes in the Himalayas, antelopes and other wild game in Africa, grizzly bears in the Rocky mountains and has hunted in Texas, where she astonished the cowboys by appearing in a man's outfit.

"I have over 100 heads of animals I have killed," she states in a matter-of-fact way, in telling of her adventures.

"One hunts for heads, of course, and therefore shoots so as to avoid mutilating them. Naturally, a woman to be successful in this sport must be a good shot, possess a keen eye and a steady hand."

"Lady Richardson is almost as much at home upon the water as on land. For three years she carried off the ladies' challenge shield of the London Bath club, which won for her the swimming championship of her country.

She also made a good try for the golf championship of England, and in course of training for it took a ten-mile walk each morning.

Later in the day she was accustomed to put in an hour at fencing, another hour or so on a horse, still another of gymnasium work, such as punching the bag and pulling chest and shoulder weights.

After that she was ready to devote a reluctant afternoon to social duties.

This athletic young woman possesses a fair amount of good looks, is regular of feature and long limb.

She Won Prizes In London Swimming Pools

Delighted.

"Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," remarked Lightwit, meeting Sharp at a reception the other evening.

"That's right, my boy," rejoined Sharp, extending his hand, "but I'm delighted to seee you here, just the same."

ALASKA COAL

The Amounts of Coal That May be There Have Not Yet Been Estimated,

The amount of coal in the mines of Alaska cannot be estimated at this time, according to Albert H. Porter of Juneau, Alaska. Mr. Porter is interested in the mining industry in what he calls "the richest country on the globe."

"It is safe to say," said Mr. Porter to a Washington Post reporter, "that there are hundreds of millions and even billions of tons there. There are fully 150,000 square miles of Alaska whose mineral resources are unknown, and perhaps the remainder of the land, or the greater part of it, has been imperfectly explored. Some of the coal lands discovered approach close up to the shores of the Arctic ocean. There are some on the sharp peninsula which juts out from the southwestern corner of the territory, dividing Behring sea from the Pacific. The quality of the coal ranges from lignite to the best bituminous, similar to the Pocahontas coal.

"Some of the 'seams' are of great thickness, with 'swells' in them said to be sixty feet of solid coal. It is also claimed that there is good anthracite coal in Alaska, the whole area of the coal fields now known being as much as 12,000 square miles. It may be that steamer coal can be produced near enough to the coast or on navigable rivers which will be available for the bunkers of warships and of the commerce carriers of the Pacific.

"On the other side of the Pacific, it is said, the United States is in possession of a good coal supply. In one of the islands of the Philippines recent discoveries have established that fact. As for Alaska, there seems to be no end to its resources as a national treasure house. When the United States bought it the general impression was that there was nothing to it but barren rocks, icebergs and polar bears. But in reality it has produced a vast treasure from its salmon and seal fisheries and its gold mines. Now an inexhaustible store of coal is added to the list of assets.

"All we need now is a territorial government that would bring about more satisfaction among the people up there."

Handsome and Useful Dog.

"That's a handsome dog you keep," said a wayfaring man to the proprietor of a Highland inn where he was lately sojourning.

"Aye, aye," was the appreciative reply, "an' he will be a useful dog as well. I haven't washed a plate since I got him, whatever."

Why is it that nearly every woman who marries for love always insists that her daughter shall marry for a home? [illegible]

A Jolly Trade.

"I am a student of rural humor," and this is the gem of my collection.

"It was a horse trade. 'What's Bill laughing about?' I asked a farmer friend.

"'He just bought a horse.'

"'Well, well, what are you laughing about?'

"'I sold it to him!'"

Keep your eye on the coal supply. There may be a large supply of cold storage weather still in stock. [illegible]

Logical Trading.

"I see by your sign," said the lady customer, "that you sell cracked eggs at half price."

"Yes, ma'am," answered the grocer. "We always make a 50 per cent reduction on goods that are cracked."

"Thank you," rejoined the lady customer. "You may send me a dollar's worth of cracked wheat—and here's your 50 cents."

The better you behave the better you'll get along. Now try it. [illegible]

The Easiest Way.

She—And knowing my sentiments on the subject, did that od'ous Mr. Binks insult you by offering you a drink?

He—That's what Mr. Binks did.

She—And how did you resent it?

He (meekly)—I swallowed the insult.

The long run seems to demonstrate that the man who was a little selfish displayed more sense than those more generous.

THE APPOINTED TIME

By CLIFFORD HOWARD

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

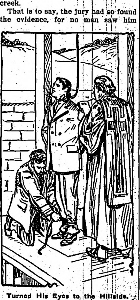
Now it came to pass, when the condemned man entered the prison yard and walked towards the scaffold, that the sun broke through the clouds and smiled upon him.

Within the yard were many men. And when the prisoner appeared some of them took off their hats, for they were nervous and knew not what to do. And many of them spat. Yet they did not spit noisily, as was their custom, but quietly and in corners.

There had been no hanging at the county jail for well-nigh a generation, albeit two years ago a black man had been strung to a tree near by, but it was in the night time and there was much haste. So it happened that there were many among those now gathered within the prison yard who had never seen a man hanged. Yet they had not been drawn thither by mere idle curiosity to behold a fellow-creature done to death, but that they might with their own eyes bear witness to the righteous punishment of Judson McLeod.

For Judson McLeod, coming to town as a stranger, while it was yet winter—for it was less than a year ago—had beguiled the trustful heart of Molly O'Brien, for he was fair of speech and his purse ministered worthily to his convivial tastes, and he was withal a handsome man. And one day it had come to pass that in a fit of jealous wrath he slew Molly O'Brien and cast her body into the creek.

That is to say, the jury had so found the evidence, for no man saw him commit the deed, though all men knew in their hearts that Judson McLeod was a villain.



Turned His Eyes to the Hillside.

So the judge had passed sentence upon him, condemning him to be hanged by the neck till he died; and he had set Friday, the 13th day of September, as the day of execution.

And the sheriff had said: "The drop will fall at 12:30;" which was no idle statement, for every man in the county knew that if the sheriff said the drop would fall at 12:30, it would be even so.

Now the sheriff was a quiet man and truthful.

When Judson McLeod came forth from the prison it was 26 minutes past the hour of noon. His face was haggard and his eyes shone large in their sunken sockets; for he was a young man, and the shadow of the gallows creeping across the face of the calendar through the long, bright summer had chilled his soul with terror.

On either side of him walked a jail-guard, and following close was a black-robed priest, holding in his clasped hands a crucifix and chanting dolefully.

But the prisoner neither heard the priest nor heeded the presence of the awed spectators. His terror-stricken soul was conscious only of the gallows—the grim minister of death biding silently the hour of its mission.

But when suddenly the sun smiled forth upon him from the darkened sky there flitted across his countenance an answering smile, for unto his heart the sunburst was an omen of deliverance. Yet the meaning thereof was known to no man save only the sheriff, for of those that were gathered about the scaffold there was none but him who knew that the life of Judson McLeod might be spared at the final moment.

For on the night before a visitor had come to the jail, hurriedly and on an errand of vital import. He was a man unknown to any in the jail save to Judson McLeod, and when he had conversed earnestly with the prisoner for a space of more than an hour he went his way as mysteriously as he had come. Yet the sheriff minded well the things he heard and saw, and he said to himself: "This man has come at the eleventh hour thinking to save the life of Judson McLeod, and therefore it is that he has hastened to the capital on the midnight expres, that he may for some deep reason intercede with the governor for the slayer of Molly O'Brien."

But the morning hours had passed away and the sheriff had seen the kindled radiance of hope in the visage of Judson McLeod grow slowly dim beneath the gathering darkness of death, for there had been no message from the governor.

So Judson McLeod ascended the steps and stood upon the scaffold. And it lacked two minutes of the appointed time.

The priest drew near to him and prayed for his soul's salvation. But the condemned man turned his eys to the hillside afar off and gazed despairingly along the road that descended the hill towards the jail. It was the road leading from the town.

And even as he looked his feet were bound with a cord and his knees likewise, and a noose of rope was put about his neck, with a great knot behind his left ear, for so it is that all hangmen do. And then the light of the world was shut out from his eyes, for a black bag was drawn swiftly over his face and fastened beneath the chin.

And the sheriff, who stood at the foot of the scaffold, lifted up his eyes and beheld afar off a cloud of dust appear suddenly upon the road on the hillside. A lad on horseback was coming towards the jail at full speed. And although he was still distant nearly a mile, the keen eye of the sheriff recognized him. He was a messenger from the telegraph office.

None saw him but the sheriff. The eyes of all others were riveted in morbid tension upon the quaking figure on the scaffold. Men dared not speak, and they feared to move. The shadow of impending death stilled their hearts with dread, and a silence like unto that of the grave brooded upon the scene.

The sheriff slipped his watch into his pocket and raised his cap. It was a signal to the hangman. And the next instant Judson McLeod plunged down through the opened floor. His body jerked convulsively for a moment and then hung limp and still, by which sign all men knew his neck was broken.

Now the sheriff had loved Molly O'Brien, and it was 12:30.

FEW LIBERTY POLES NOW.

But They Were Once Very Near to the Heart of Our Forefathers.

An interesting feature of the early history of our country was the liberty pole, so dear to the heart of our forefathers, but generally unknown to the present generation.

Liberty poles were for the most part erected after the revolutionary war was so long an acknowledged fact that the rebels could take time to give it some picturesque expressions.

After the republic was established no more was heard of them until the war of 1812 roused the antagonism of the people, and up went the long shafts again, each a protest against British aggression.

During the whisky insurrection in the last decade of the eighteenth century, when seven counties in Pennsylvania and Virginia arrayed themselves in defiance of the government, liberty poles shot up during the night in the rebellious towns and villages, painted a bright red as signals of war.

Liberty poles were erected during presidential campaigns in the first part of the last century by both Whigs and Democrats.

They were usually made of white pines, lashed together until they reached a great height. The more fervid the zeal of the party, the higher rose the pole. Sailors were often brought out from the seaboard to inland towns to assist in the erection and to rig flags, to the amazement and delight of the boys who knew nothing of ships or seamen.

Mass meetings were held under these poles, which were often regarded with superstitious affection. The blowing down of a pole by a high wind during a campaign chilled the hopes of one party and cheered the others.

These singular emblems of protest against oppression have wholly disappeared of late years throughout the country, except in some remote districts where old customs are still cherished by rural communities.—Sunday Magazine.

Defying Old Age.

A vista of conjecture is opened by the announcement from Paris that an experimentalist has been able to produce artificially in apes all the characteristics of old age. By injecting a principle taken from a capsule which rests above the kidneys it was discovered that nerves grew feeble in sensitiveness, bones hardened and became brittle and the walls of the arteries thickened exactly as old age affects the human body. If old age is no more than certain alterations in cell growth, sapping of muscles and deadening of nerves, caused, as the experiment upon the apes suggests, by the slow distribution of a chemical constituent of the body, then it may be that man might be retained in the state of eternal youth by the finding of an antidote to this creeping poison. Death would be pushed into the indefinite background, a process of nature left for the trolley cars, the automobiles and the fool killers to carry out. We may yet live to hear of race suicide set forth as a commendable doctrine as tending to prevent the overcrowding of the earth. There is no guessing where these scientific people will stop.

Women Wage-Earners.

One woman in five in the United States has abandoned the domestic life and has become a wage earner. Even this does not accurately state the situation. In country districts only two women out of every 11 are at work, but in cities, that is, wherever industrial opportunities are present, two women out of every seven are at work, nearly one-third of the total women population.

How far the father of the family has ceased to be the sole supporter thereof is shown in the statistics gathered in 27 cities and tabulated by the census bureau. The total number of women at work in the 27 cities is 964,695. Of these 173,000 are boarding or living in the families of their employers. The remaining 731,665 are described as follows: Women the sole wage earner, 98,861; one other wage earner in family, 218,415; two other wage earners in family, 188,089; more than two other wage earners in family, 226,300.

He Didn't Know Adam.

In his latest installment of his autobiography in the Cornhill Bob Lucy refers, among other things, to his connection with Sir F. Burnand and the Punch staff. On one occasion Mr. Lucy and Sir Francis were talking in the crowded assembly at the foreign office on one of the queen's birthday nights. A guest in uniform, starred and medaled, came up and effusively shook hands with Burnand, whose reception betrayed some embarrassment. Observing this, the newcomer said: "I see you don't know me from Adam." "My dear sir," said Burnand, "I didn't know Adam."—London Tit-Bits.

SAVING PAINT MONEY.

It Cannot Be Done by Using Cheap Material and Cheap Painters.

In arranging for painting, a good many property-owners try to save money by employing the painter who offers to do the job cheapest—or try to save money by insisting on a low-priced paint. But no property-owner would run such risks if he realized what must be taken into consideration in order to get a job that will wear and give thorough satisfaction.

No houseowner will go wrong on the painting question if he writes National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, for their Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49, which is sent free. It is a complete guide to painting. It includes a book of color schemes for either exterior or interior painting, a book of specifications, and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint materials.

Nearly every dealer has National Lead Company's pure white lead. (Dutch Boy Painter trademark.) If yours has not notify National Lead Co., and arrangements will be made for you to get it.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Camden, N. J.—"It is with pleasure that I send my testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, hoping it may induce other suffering women to avail themselves of the benefit of this valuable remedy.

"I suffered from pains in my back and side, sick headaches, no appetite, was tired and nervous all the time, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman—and this valuable medicine shall always have my praise."—Mrs. W. P. Valentine, 902 Lincoln Ave., Camden, N. J.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I hope all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. 7, Erie, Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

☞ If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, obtained by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially, and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy, and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

The club now has sixty enthusiastic members and as a get together organization will be able to do much for the good of the city as well as providing social enjoyments for its members.

Sunday was a delightful day. This is cause for comment, for there have been so few of them, though the almanac says there should be many. Many people were out to enjoy the pleasant aftrenoon. The birds were singing in the trees and the blades of grass were trying to poke their noses through the ground, it is supposed, to enjoy a little sunshine. But there was a discordant note. The pop of the rifle was frequently heard in the woods. A companion said, "They are killing innocent birds; you ought to write an article on that." That's so. But what's the use? There was a story in the "first" reader about the cruelty of killing song birds, innocent creatures whose one excuse for being is to add to man's enjoyment of the many other gifts of nature. There was another story in the "second" reader and books have been written and songs sung about the beautiful birds. On the first bright spring morning the song birds were awake long before you were, singing you a welcome to the enjoyment of the beautiful things in nature. But what's the use—what's the use preaching in the paper, if the singing birds and careful instruction have failed to teach boys the cruelty of slaughtering song birds.

WILL BUILD A NICE NEW COURT HOUSE

Red Lake County Will Erect New Building in Red Lake Falls

Commissioners Vote to Bond County in the Amount of $35,000

At the meeting of the county commissioners held last Friday definite action was taken, the purpose of which is to secure the erection of a suitable court house for Red Lake county.

A resolution passed the board providing for the issuance of the bonds of the county in the amount of $35,000, to bear interest at the rate of not exceeding 6 per cent., the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used in the construction of a court house in this city.

It was decided to ask for bids for the purchase of these bonds and also for bids to be submitted by architects for furnishing plans and specifications for the building. These bids are to be opened and considered at a meeting of the county board to be held Saturday, May 22. The official publication of the notice of the action taken by the board at the last meeting is made in this issue of the Gazette.

In the tranaction of the business of the last meeting, which is the contribution of an interesting chapter to the history of Red Lake county, the commissioners are acting under authority of the statutes. The law provides that when there is no court house in the county, or when there is one and the building is not suitable for the purpose, the commissioners shall have the power to issue bonds and do all things necessary for the erection of a suitable building. Of course there is a limitation to the amount that may be expended, depending upon the assessed valuation of property in the county, and the commissioners have in this case kept well within the limitation.

There are rumors to the effect that there will be strenuous objection to the erection of a building here. Of course the Thief River people are very much disappointed, but this is a pretty good time for them to call off their county-seat committee. The commissioners are acting legally and the law is a fair one. Why should not the commissioners have power to erect a suitable building when there is none? Or, would it be better if a few people could prevent the erection of a suitable building by keeping up a county-seat squabble for years? Is $35,000 too much for Red Lake county to spend for a court house? Would the people of Thief River Falls decide to erect a building that would cost less than that amount, if they had power to determine its location in their city? All that the Thief River county-seat committee can hope to accomplish is to cause the commissioners some inconvenience, and that isn't accomplishing anything.

Thief River Falls is a pretty good town, and we'd like to see her get most anything she wants—railroads, a normal school, anything worth having. But the county-seat—never! The county-seat is in Red Lake Falls, and lest we forget, again let us send home the challenge, she's going to remain here.

New Sport of Aviation.

How soon shall the average man be able to add flight through the air to his list of available sports? This is the natural query suggested by the recent successful experiments with flight machines. People are beginning to realize more and more the necessity of serving a good malt tonic, such as golden grain belt beer, at mealtime. The practice of keeping a case on hand at home is so general that it is well nigh universal. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thomp-Thompson, Crookston.

Announcement.

The undersigned takes pleasure in announcing that Mr. C. R. C. Baker, who has been in charge of the Gazette during the past eight months, has purchased a half-interest in the paper.

Mr. Baker has proven a valuable acquisition to the Gazette, and we believe the people of Red Lake Falls will be glad to know that he is to be permanently located here and financially identified with the business interests of the town.

There will no change in the policy or management of the Gazette. It will continue to be an exponent of the best interests of the city and county, and hopes to continue to merit the generous support and approval of the community it serves.

JOHN E. KING.

Caron-LaPlante.

The Gazette has been favored with an account of the Caron-LaPlante wedding which occurred ta Crookston last week, which will be of interest to Red Lake Falls people since the bride formerly resided in this city:

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Anne's church, Rev. Father Tapin officiating, occurred a handsome spring wedding, when Miss Clara Caron became the bride of Albert La Plante. The bride looked charming in a white net gown trimmed with messaline ruffles, worn over a white silk slip. A wreath of white roses and a bride's veil made a beautiful head dress, and she carried a boquet of pink and white roses.

The attendants were Miss Lucy Benoit of Red Lake Falls, a cousin of the bride, who was gowned in a cream Lansdowne princess, and Joseph LaPlante, a brother of the groom. The Sodality girls, of which Miss Caron was a member attended in a body and the music as furnished by them was especially well rendered. Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was enjoyed by the relatives of the contracting parties at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Caron, Mr. and Mrs. LaPlante, Mr. and Mrs. Aime Benoit, Mr. and Mrs. Pete Benoit, Mr. and Mrs. James Hance, and Mr. Charles Benoit, grandfather of the bride, 80 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. LaPlante and Lucy Benoit arrived last Thursday and visited with friends and relatives for a few days before returning to Crookston where they will spend the summer, leaving in the fall for Spokane, Wash., where they expect to make their future home.

The bride is well known in Crookston having been connected with the Sperry-Klock millinery firm for the past three seasons and is a favorite with all who know her. The groom has resided near Crookston for several years and is well and favorably known here.

Wreck at Plummer.

While switching in the yards here Wednesday afternoon, two cars, one of which was loaded with furniture and lumber belonging to Hans Peterson, ran through the derail at the south end of the elevator track and into a ditch. The engine wheels also left the track and the rails were twisted and torn from the ties. Both cars cut deep furrows in the grade and both were tipped up in such a way that it would need a gentle push to turn them on their sides. A wrecking crew was sent down from Thief River Falls in charge of Roadmaster Sullivan and Master Mechanic Horton. After several hours of hard work, the engine was put back on the track, but the cars were left for the derrick crew to take care of on Thursday. No blame has yet been attached for the accident as it is impossible to say who was responsible.—Plummer Pioneer

LIEUT. GOVERNOR WILL GIVE ADDRESS

Hon. A. O. Eberhart Will Be Commencement Speaker for Class of '09.

He Is a Fluent Speaker—Will Speak at Opera House Monday, June 7.

Hon. A. O. Eberhart, lieutenant governor of the state of Minnesota, will deliver the commencement address to the class of 1909 of the Red Lake Falls high school. It had been previously announced that Hon. C. C. Dinehart, state treasurer, would speak, but Mr. Dinehart was compelled to cancel the engagement.

Lieutenant Governor Eberhart is a fluent speaker, a man of prominence in the affairs of the state and will deliver an address that will be worth hearing.

The members of the board of education were fortunate to be able at this late date to secure a man of Mr. Eberhart's standing and ability to deliver the address.

The fact that Mr. Eberhart may be a candidate for governor at the next election will add interest to the occasion, though of course no political significance attaches to the commencement event because of his coming.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE

REVIEW OF THE LAWS ENACTED—POSITIVE RESULTS ARE FEW—MUCH TIME SPENT ON MEASURES WHICH COME TO NOTHING.

Minnesota's thirty-sixth legislature has passed into history, and its work before the people.

The important results of the session are not many. A large part of the time and attention of both houses was taken up by measures that came to nothing, such as tonnage tax, county option, the Cass Lake normal school, primary election amendment; gross earnings measures, reapportionment and the bills concerning the building of the Armour plant near New Brighton.

The session, however, had some positive results, among them the following:

Creation of a state department of banks.

Provision for a new state prison, to cost $2,250,000.

Creation of a commission to study the employers' liability question and report a scientific compensation act at the next session.

Relief of Minnesota river valley from flood conditions by dykes and dredging.

Extension of university campus, $350,000 more allowed.

Creation of correspondence school of agriculture attached to state agricultural college, $20,000 provided.

New inheritance tax law.

State license of automobiles and chauffeurs, with road regulations.

Authority given cities to adopt the "commission plan" of government under home rule charters.

Designation of 1,000,000 acres of land in northern Minnesota as a big game preserve.

Six constitutional amendments submitted.

Anti-cigarette law.

State aid for ten high schools installing departments of agriculture.

Sunday baseball legalized.

State's title to minerals under lake beds asserted.

New act for protection against forest fires.

State license act for peddlers outside large cities.

Teachers' pension bill.

Probation system for juvenile delinquents extended to whole state.

Uniform bill of lading act.

Law defining vagrancy and enabling police to drive out fortune tellers.

Saloon licenses hereafter limited to one for each 500 people.

Suburban electric lines taxed 4 per cent of gross earnings.

State's appraisal of railroad property to be kept down to date.

Railroads required to keep track of freight charges paid in excess of state law while in the courts, and refund excess if state rates are sustained.

Two new district judges for northern Minnesota.

Prohibiting indecent medical advertising.

Regulating trading stamps.

Give $600,000 to roads.

Ten cent mortgage tax.

Extending Torrens system to whole state.

State fair grandstand.

More than 2,000 bills were introduced, and the record shows that 508 of them passed. The senate was in actual session on seventy-one days, and the house seventy-nine days. Owing to the new salary law the cost of the session to the state was far in excess of any previous one. The sum of $288,000 was set aside, and will nearly all be used. The 1907 session cost $189,975.25.

The tonnage tax bill caused the biggest fight of the session. It was introduced in the house by Mr. Bjorge. The bill provided for a graded tax from 2 to 5 cents a ton according to quality of ore, for state revenue only, the property to be assessed and taxed as before for local purposes. The bill aroused a storm of protest from the northern part of the state. It was made a special order in the house for March 17, after many public hearings by the committee, at which advocates and opponents of the tax were heard. The bill passed the house by a vote of 61 to 57, after three hours of debate. On April 16 the senate passed the bill after debate lasting five hours and a half. The vote was 38 to 24. Duluth and the iron range was afire when the news of the vote reached there. Immediately telegrams and letters began to pour in on the governor asking him to veto the bill. On April 20 the governor returned the bill to the house without his approval. The veto was based on the grounds of public policy.

Probably the greatest constructive work of the session was one whose tangible results will not be seen for another two years, but are bound to assume vast importance. This was the creation of a commission of three men, to be appointed by the governor, to investigate the question of compensation of employes for injuries, and report a workingmen's compensation act to the next legislature. Two bills were also passed requiring reports on accidents to employes, which will give the commission Minnesota data to work upon.

Another important piece of legislation was the creation of a state superintendent of banks with a staff sufficient to examine all state banks twice a year. The law goes into effect Aug. 1, and Gov. Johnson will name the superintendent after consulting with the leading bankers of the state. This act leaves the public examiner with nothing but public offices and institutions to supervise.

Two years ago a start was authorized on a new plant for the state prison at Stillwater, which long ago had outgrown its cramped quarters. At the same time the act was passed under which the state is to undertake the manufacturing of harvesting machinery. At the very opening of the 1909 session the movement began to provide for the new state prison. Under the plans and estimates of the board of control and its architects the amount was finally fixed at $2,250,000, to be raised by certificates of indebtedness, and paid off in nine years by special levy. The legislature made a special trip to Stillwater and inspected the site, after which the bill was passed. Another important bill, in connection with the prison, allows the board of control to set aside 25 cents a day from the earnings of any prisoner for the support of his family.

A bill prohibiting the sale, manufacture or giving away of cigarettes or cigarette material was passed. It becomes effective Aug. 1.

There was a marked change in the attitude of this legislature toward the railroad problem, as compared with other sessions of recent years. It was recognized that the state had gone far enough along the line of regulation, and that under present economic conditions it was wise to give the big transportation companies a little rest. Two measures growing out of the state suits were passed. One re-enacted the commodity rate law of 1907, with the penalty section omitted. The other measure requires the companies in all cases where rates fixed by the state are resisted in court, and are not put into effect, to report monthly to the railroad commission as to every shipment under the contested rates. The report must show the excess paid by every shipper over the state rate, and in case the state rates are finally upheld the railroad is to pay the full amount of such excess with interest to the railroad commission, which is to distribute it to the shippers. Another bill requires the railroads to keep in all towns of 500 or more an agent at the station at least an hour and a half before the arrival of each train. The distance tariff bill was again killed. The railroad commission was given authority to keep up its work of the physical valuation of railroad properties.

The need for more adequate protection against forest fires was emphasized by the heavy losses of 1908, and there was little opposition offered to a bill making stringent rules about the setting of fires in the timber country.

The needs of reforestation were recognized, but little provided for. In compliance with the views of the tax commission, a constitutional amendment was submitted which, if passed at the election, will make it possible to exempt lands for taxation which are being used for reforestation.

Rather less time was spent in the investigation business than usual, but the results gained were fully as important as at previous sessions. Two special committees were engaged in such work. One took up the school problem and the other looked into the financial operations of the state agricultural society. There was considerable spicy testimony in the book inquiry. Interference by an agent of the American Book company in the selection of a superintendent at Winona, and activity in school board elections in Minneapolis, were testified to. The committee's report was a thoughtful discussion of the problem. It found there was no real book trust, but a sharp competition which led the companies to unwise methods.

Some complaints against the management of the state fair were heard by the special committee. The report offered some criticisms mostly regarding the methods of bookkeeping.

Many attempts were made during the session in the line of regulating street railways, telephone companies and other public service corporations. The one which aroused the most attention was the Nolan bill placing street railways under the control of the state railroad commission. The matter was thrashed out in the house, and was finally defeated.

Outside of voting money liberally from the state treasury, to be spent under local supervision, the legislature did nothing toward improving the highways of the state. The funds at the disposal of the state highway commission were not increased. The "pork barrel" bill, voting money to each county in the state, was raised from $200,000 to $800,000 a year.

A bill providing for local option was introduced early in the session. It was killed by a vote of 51 to 66. Similar treatment was given to every measure proposed by the radicals relating to the liquor question.

Many attempts were made to amend the primary election law, but they came to naught.

A bill was passed which prohibits the killing of game in the limits of national forest reserves. The bill's main effect is to create a preserve of 1,000,000 acres on the northern boundary of the state, opposite a like area set aside by the province of Ontario, within which moose and deer may not be legally killed.

A bill permitting all cities of the state to adopt the commission form of government was passed.

Bills creating different state systems of extending courses in agriculture dragged along during almost the entire session. The only one that passed was Senator Putnam's bill appropriating $25,000 a year for the first ten high schools to comply with its conditions.

The liberality displayed toward the new state prison did not operate to the serious injury of other institutions. The buildings for which money has been provided within the next two years do not meet all the needs of the situation, but will make a big showing nevertheless. The state university gets several new buildings. Normal schools at Winona, Moorhead and Duluth draw $290,000 for new buildings. New buildings at four of the institutions for the insane will cost $240,000.

More than usual attention was paid to the solution of the drainage question. The claims of the Minnesota valley for relief from the frequent overflowing of the bottom land were heeded. A complete survey of the basin will be made to determine what improvements are practicable.

Owners of automobiles are required to get licenses from the secretary of state in a bill which also imposes strict road regulations.

Uncertainty as to the constitutional latitude for tax legislation was not removed until the session began, when the supreme court decided that the "wide-open" amendment of 1906 really carried. The tax commission, on account of the uncertainty, made a few important recommendations to the legislature, and it was hard to command support for any of the numerous innovations proposed by members. The end of the session found the state about where it was before. Many bills aimed at corporations were offered, but nearly all were killed in committee. A bill taxing all grain passing through elevators half a mill for wheat and flax and one-fourth of a mill on coarse grains was passed. The bill raising the gross earnings tax on freight line companies was passed, raising the rate from 4 to 6 per cent.

All attempts to correct the inequalities in representation in the legislature failed. Efforts in the house to give the northern counties a better representation in the lower house were nullified in the senate. One slight change was voted, giving the seventeenth legislative district three members, so Lincoln, Lyon and Yellow Medicine counties will each have a house member. This raises the house to 120 members.

The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective chimney, but there is also a rumor that it was of incendiary origin. The loss is about $10,000, with $5,000 insurance. It is probable that the hotel will be rebuilt.

C. T. Olson, who tried to kill his wife and her daughter at Kiester, was brought to Blue Earth and lodged in the county jail for safekeeping. Public sentiment is strong against him. The shot from the gun which he intended would end his own life took away a part of his head. He is in a serious condition, but has a chance for life.

John Witherlee, one of the pioneers of Perham, died from exposure in a meadow near the village of Richdale. He lived with his daughter and came to town Wednesday. State Treasurer Must Put His Name to 1,479.

In past years many payments like these were made by vouchers, which finally dwindled into checks paid by various towns. A law went into effect causing each man to be paid with state checks.

Treasurer Dinehart is busy signing his name to these, as each one must bear his name. Rubber stamps won't do. The work was started Saturday and will probably not be finished before the first of next month.

STATUE TO BE UNVEILED MAY 29

Survivors of First Minnesota Prepare to Honor Colvill's Memory.

The statue of the Gettysburg hero, a replica of the one recently unveiled in the state capitol, is to stand on a massive granite pedestal on a knoll overlooking the cemetery. A field cannon will be placed on a smaller pedestal a short distance in front of the statue.

A straw vote was also taken on the proposition of the city's buying the local telephone exchange from the company which now holds the franchise. This vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the city's owning its own telephone system.

MANY JOB-SEEKERS APPLY.

Governor Is Mum, but Is Expected to Choose Northern Man.

Gov. John A. Johnson announced that he absolutely refuses to consider any applications for the position of state bank examiner at present. Hundreds of applications have been coming into his office from all parts of the state. It is generally conceded that the examiner will come from some town in the northern part of the state.

INHERITANCE TAX STANDS.

Governor Vetoes Vail and Kneeland-Stuart Amendments.

Gov. Johnson has vetoed the Vail and Kneeland-Stuart bills providing for exemptions in the state inheritance tax law. One exempted bequests to charitable institutions, and the other relieved immediate members of a family from the tax. The veto came following a conference with C. L. Hilton of the state legal department and State Auditor Iverson. It was agreed that the exemptions might invalidate the entire inheritance tax law.

TO OPEN 163,000 ACRES.

Washington, April 29.—The department of agriculture announced yesterday that the order opening up for homesteading all land in the Superior forest reserve zone not actually included in the reserve includes 163,000 acres of public land. This is in the northeastern part of Minnesota, and some of it is excellent agricultural land. It will be subject to entry as soon as the general land office issues the official notice, which will probably be within a few days.

Four St. Louis hunters were run down by a passenger train near the city limits. Henry Stumpf was killed and John Knoll was seriously injured. Others in the party were uninjured.

A Common Sentiment.

The news agent was dilating on the wickedness of paper boys. "Just look at this postcard I've had from a customer," he said. It ran:

"Dear Sir: When your boy was (as usual) drinking the milk that is left on our doorstep he dropped the can and split a quart of milk on the path. In his hurry to leave the premises he omitted to leave the paper. Yours truly, [illegible] P. S.—Please send paper. P. P. S.—Also kill boy."

Crank—What! That little machine sixty horse-power?

Frank—No; sixty skunk-power.

A Humble Suggestion.

Scientists say the white ant lays 80,000 eggs a month. Would it, we desire to ask, would it be possible to cross the white ant with the Plymouth Rock hen?

Wasted Mistletoe.

Another illusion dispelled. Mistletoe, it seems, is not a Christmas decoration. "Holly, the box and the bay," should deck forth our houses and churches at Yuletide, but mistletoe should not make its appearance till the New Year. It may help to restore the practice of making the hanging of the mistletoe a separate New Year's ceremony to state that its efficacy is entirely lost if it is hung and used for the encouragement of osculation before the first day of the year.

WESTERN CANADA'S HAPPY PROSPECTS.

In no year since the development of Western Canada began has spring brought a brighter outlook than it brings this year. In no preceding spring has there been greater assurance of advancing development and prosperity. The movement of immigration has already assumed large proportions, and is as desirable in character as it is satisfactory in volume; from across the Atlantic sturdy, industrious and thrifty newcomers are arriving in large numbers, homeseekers from Ontario and the other older Provinces are coming in a steady stream, and from across the international boundary a movement is already in full flow, which, it is confidently predicted, will beat the records of all previous years; special settlers' trains are crossing the line, loaded with effects, actual material wealth being thus brought into the country at the rate of millions of dollars' worth monthly.

The movement is so unprecedentedly large that extra Dominion Immigration officials have had to be provided at both North Portal and at Emerson, and it is estimated that the total number of new settlers from the United States this year will be 70,000, at least, and may run well up toward 100,000. Last year's total of new settlers from the South was 53,723; thus the area that will be placed in wheat and other grains this year will greatly exceed that of last year. Settlers are making extraordinary efforts to get on their lands and begin seeding operations. The price of wheat now, away above the dollar mark, is incentive enough, and when one has in view the splendid results that the past few years have shown, it is not to be wondered at that the present will be the banner year for Immigration to Canada. Ask your nearest Canadian Government Agent for rates of transportation, and he will also send you illustrated pamphlets.

ROLE OF THE COCOANUT.

A Real Staff of Life to Natives of Sea Washed Islands.

It is more than a coincidence that the tree which furnishes a greater amount of available material to man than any other in the vast kingdom of vegetables is the first to spring up on the bare rocks of the newly arisen coral reef. The cocoanut, so formed that it may have floated half way across the Pacific, is thus universally distributed throughout tropical islands.

It thrives best near the sea, seldom penetrating far into the interior. Its hard shell is a coat of mail for the embryo plant, says the New Age, enabling it to stand hard usage for a protracted period and locking up securely the precious life in miniature.

The fibrous husk which envelops it, and is seldom seen in the market on account of the greatly increased bulk, breaks the jar which would be inevitable should the hard nut fall unprotected from the tall tree to the ground sixty or ninety feet below.

Such a blow would scarcely fail to break the shell, occasioning the loss of the nourishing milk so necessary to the germ. The outer husk not only breaks the jar of the fall but buoys it up on the water, while the tough outer cuticle is waterproof.

Thus is the tree which offers to man almost in the raw state all his necessities freely scattered where the warm seas and their borders offer a footing; and from it the humble native secures sugar, milk, butter, wine, vinegar, oil, candles, soap, cups, ladles, cordage, matting, thatch for roof and material for raiment—combining food, clothing and shelter in a single gift, continually making waste places habitable.

LARGER WAISTS NOW.

Rule for Fashion Models in London Shops is 24 Inches.

The manikins who are employed by many west end dressmakers to display the new season's dresses are trying to bring their waist measurements up to a uniform twenty-four inches, which is the ideal waist of the present fashion.

The eighteen or nineteen inch waists which were once the rule in many west end show rooms and which necessitated excessive tight lacing for the girls employed are not only no longer required in the better class establishments, but their possessors are required to develop a waist measurement several inches larger.

"Our stock waist is twenty-four inches, for it is impossible to show present-day gowns to advantage on a smaller waist," explained the manageress of one well-known establishment. "Many people have developed unnatural waists in course of time, and when a girl has acquired one of these small waists a pad is placed inside her corsets to fill up the waist cavity.

"Tight lacing only obtains in old fashioned show rooms which have not yet taken cognizance of the entire change in the character of dress."

The Cheerful Errand Runners.

"It is really a pleasure, ma'am, to observe how readily your little boy runs your errands!"

"Oh, he's the boy that lives next door. I get him to do my errands because my own boy won't."

"Ah! What is your boy doing now?"

"There he is, rushing on an errand for the lady next door."

A Wry Jest.

"Um! I thought that Noah took two of every kind in the ark."

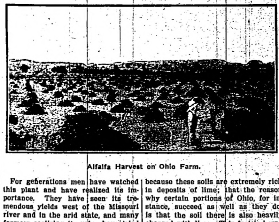
SUCCESSFUL GROWING OF ALFALFA IN UNITED STATES

Farmers of the East, as Well as the West, Realize Importance of Its Value and Turn to Its Cultivation—

By Charles B. Wing.



Alfalfa Harvest on Ohio Farm.

For generations men have watched this plant and have realized its importance. They have seen its tremendous yields west of the Missouri river and in the arid state, and many farmers realizing its value have tried to grow it in the eastern and central states. Unfortunately, some portions of the country are not naturally adapted to growing this plant, and there have been many failures, which have discouraged the farmers. We are glad to note now, however, that scientific study of the subject appears to have solved practically all of the troubles, and that it is possible to grow this plant in any state in the Union, and to make it succeed in splendid condition even where the soil is not naturally adapted to it. Men are doing this all over the country to-day, says C. B. Wing in the Farmers' Review, making their soil right where it is not so naturally, and their success is inspiring. Entirely too much mystery has been made of the growing of alfalfa, so that many farmers hesitate about trying it, simply because Jones recommends one method and Smith another and the uninitiated are uncertain as to what the proper way really is. Alfalfa really requires four things: Lime, drainage, inoculation the conditions. We think we have stated the conditions in the order of their relative importance. We believe there have been more failures throughout the country owing to the lack of sufficient lime in the soil than from any other single cause; and we feel sure that the interest that is now being taken in the question of lime, and the number of men who are using lime on land on which they contemplate sowing alfalfa, will result in a very large increase in the acreage of this plant. Formerly it was supposed that there were "alfalfa belts" throughout the eastern and central states which were the only places in which alfalfa could be successfully grown; but this theory is now rapidly becoming obsolete, because many are changing their conditions sufficiently to permit a splendid success with alfalfa in every state in the union, and this in the face of the fact that many of their localities were very ill-suited to its growth. It now seems to careful observers that the reason why alfalfa succeeded so splendidly west of the Mississippi river is because these soils are extremely rich in deposits of lime; that the reason why certain portions of Ohio, for instance, succeed as well as they do, is that the soil there is also heavily charged with lime. This fact is borne out by many things that we would like to enumerate, but we will mention one. In our own county alfalfa is growing wild for many miles along the railroad tracks. Section men complain bitterly of it, saying that it seems impossible to kill it. When we stop to think of the unfavorable conditions under which these plants started, merely dropped from a leaking bag being transported on this railroad, falling among gravel and cinders, with lack of moisture, no seed bed whatever, with the birds to prey upon it, and soil, where there is any, that is more than likely of sub-surface origin and decidedly lacking in fertility; when we consider these things, it seems to us that the only possible reason for its splendid success under these difficulties has been in three things: First, the railroad embankments are composed of limestone gravel; second, they are thoroughly drained, and third, owing to the presence of sweet clover growing along the railroad tracks, the probabilities are that the alfalfa very frequently finds its inoculation quickly. Humus is certainly deficient as well as soil preparation. We know of other instances where the alfalfa grows well along the railroad tracks, when the soil adjacent to these roads refuses to grow alfalfa satisfactorily. We believe that this confirms our theory of the lime, drainage and possibly inoculation which the alfalfa finds on the railroad track, but which are probably lacking to a certain extent when this ground is left. Our theory on this matter is confirmed from a great many other sources. Farmers who have had their alfalfa germinate properly in the first place, but gradually "go back" and in a year or so have it all gone, have probably in nearly every instance been unsuccessful owing to lack of lime. Farmers living in sections troubled by crab grass or by sorrel have actually found that liberal applications of lime would do a serious injury to these weeds, while the alfalfa throve splendidly.

CLIP YOUR HORSES EVERY YEAR

European Farmers Treat Their Horses Thus Twice a Year.

Horses should be clipped at least once and sometimes twice a year. It has been demonstrated a number of times that every horse should be clipped. In Europe farmers and horseowners generally clip their horses in the spring, and sometimes in the fall, but when the horses are clipped in the fall, they should be protected by a blanket or other covering if allowed to stand in the open air any length of time, especially if they have been doing work. Clipping seems to put new life into the horse, as it relieves him of the extra coat and readily permits the cleaning brush to do its work properly so that the pores are open and free at all times to rid the animal of waste matter, for which the natural outlet is through the skin pores.

Combining Dairying, Poultry, Fruit and Pigs.—Dairying may be profitably combined with poultry keeping, with fruit raising, or with pig growing. With any of these combinations, one is able to have two substantial incomes, utilize the waste products, and give profitable employment the entire year to hired help. If whole milk is sold to village or city trade, fruit growing and dairying are the best combination, the manure being used to fertilize the orchard and land for growing forage crops. When cream or butter only is sold, dairying and pig or poultry raising are a good combination, the skim milk and buttermilk being fed to the pigs or chickens. Pigs, poultry, fruit and dairy may all be profitably combined under certain conditions. The success of nearly all of the great industries has resulted from good management and the full utilization of all the by-products.

Give Pigs Salt.—Do not wait till the pig is dead before you give him salt. He should have salt every day in his life and then some rubbed in after he is dead.

How Coyotes Were Killed.—Brigadier General R. H. Pratt, stationed in Oklahoma in the 60's, wrote lately to an acquaintance this story of how he got coyotes pelts to make a robe. "Coyotes and wolves were plentiful about the camp and I decided to get a lot of skins and have an Indian woman tan them, leaving the tails on and making a carriage robe for sister. A Comanche named Essatoyet and his wife agreed to get the skins and tan them for a consideration, if I would give them a beef and some poison. The beef contractor sold me a beef for $7. We were then paying $2.50 a hundred for the best of beef for army use. I got the poison and went with Essatoyed and his wife to see them set the bait. They drove the beef to a glade a mile from camp, killed it, took off the hide and reserved all the best meat for their own use, and sprinkled the poison over the carcass. Essatoyet had cut thirty sticks a foot and a half long and sharpened them at both ends. These he stuck in the ground in a large circle enclosing the carcass, and on each put a chunk of liver or heart, saying as he did so, 'Sugan wolf heap like him.' The next morning I went with them to see the result of our venture, and we found twenty-seven coyotes and two large gray wolves dead about the carcass and vicinity. So I got my robe and had wolf skins to spare."

Goats Need Much Exercise.—Goats need a great amount of exercise, much more than sheep. The one is by nature a browser and the other a grazer, and the browsing habit naturally requires more activity on the part of the goats. They are sensitive to restraint and do better if not herded, but of course herding is often a necessity and therefore should be done under as favorable circumstances as possible. They should not be allowed to feel their restraint. If constant attendance is necessary, the herder should be of quiet disposition. The next best thing to the freedom of a range is a large pasture, where the goats may have oversight, but not constant attendance. Such pastures are considered the cheapest method of keeping these goats. They can easily be trained to come home by feeding a little and salting regularly at home.

SAVE WASTE WATER BY INSTALLING POWER PLANTS

Millions of Gallons of Water on Farms Can Be Harnessed and Power Utilized; Plans Showing Plant—

By R. M. Winans.

The only obstruction to universally installed individual water-power plants on the farm is that not every farm is blessed with running water to furnish the power. But there are thousands of farms in the United States which have running water that can be harnessed and made to work.

The government has been taking a census of the available water power in the union, and a report will be issued in the course of a few months showing that there is at present going to waste something over 50,000,000 horse power that might be developed from the streams and fields of the country, exclusive of Niagara. Some of this, of course, is available to the farms that are near the streams entering into the calculations, but little, if any, account is taken of the minor streams, the babbling brooks and rapid-flowing creeks that run through thousands of farms unintercepted on their idle way to the sea.

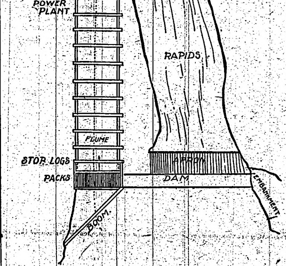


Fig. 1.—Ground Plan of Plant.

It does not require the thunderous rush and swirl of a Niagara to drive a turbine large enough to furnish power for the use of a farm. The most innocent-looking, spring-fed brooklet having the proper fall will be ample to serve the purpose of meeting every power requirement of the average farm, providing, of course, that it can be suitably dammed and a sufficient head given to the penned-up water in the reservoir. From three to six feet will give a working head of water to drive a turbine that will furnish an electrical generator.

On hundreds of farms with which the writer is acquainted in a number of states of uneven topography there are many streams with volume and fall sufficient to drive a turbine of from 50 to 200 horse power, and where the power plants could be installed at relatively small expense. And the first expense is practically the only expense in generations to come, except one counts the cost of oil for the bearings and the renewal of brushes (which are cheap) on the generator once a year.

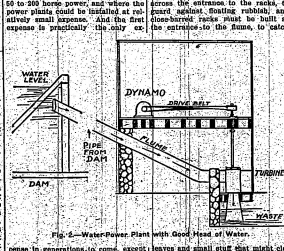

Fig. 2.—Water-Power Plant with Good Head of Water.

The main expense, where the work is done by contract or by specially hired labor, is that of grading, of excavating and filling; and the farmer is at an advantage in this, that he often has idle teams and labor that could not be better employed during the "slack" seasons, when most, if not all, of this work may be done. The cost of concrete for the dam may be largely eliminated by the use of timbers and plank in its construction, merely using enough concrete in which to embed the timbers and cover the planking, to protect from decay. In some sections where small timber is available and in some cases desirable to remove from the land, the dam may be built of logs very cheaply and substantially.

The gasoline engine was probably the pioneer in furnishing light power for the farm, yet it has been conclusively proved by farm water-power plants recently installed that where small, even very small, water powers are available, the gasoline engine is not to be compared to them in the matter of economy, practicability and perfect convenience, to say nothing of the matter of care and operation of the engine, or the facility with which the electric power from the turbine dynamo may be transmitted to various buildings and points on the farm for use at the same time.

Fig. 1 shows the ground plan of a plant located near the dam and connected with an open wooden flume and with a vertical turbine. This is an excellent plan where the fall is from three to six feet with a good supply of water. With this type of turbine the generator or dynamo may be placed overhead and driven by a bevel gear. The foundation of the power house should be of stone or concrete, with heavy timber bases for the turbine and dynamo, to insure steady running without jar or vibration.

A breakwater must be built at the power house to prevent ice and debris gathering or lodging across the outlet or tail race. The dam should have an apron of concrete or planks protected with concrete, to prevent wearing and washing by the flow over the spillway. A heavy boom is placed across the entrance to the racks, to guard against floating rubbish, and close-barred racks must be built at the entrance to the flume, to catch leaves and small stuff that might clog the wheel. A heavy gate or stop log is set inside the racks, to regulate the flow of water or to cut it off entirely.

Where there is the opportunity to get a good head of water, the plant and connection may be cheaply built, as shown in Fig. 2. The flume in this case may be of sewer pipe, of the proper size, or a square wooden flume heavily coated with some wood preservative may be used instead. This drawing shows a vertical turbine with a direct belt drive, which is cheaper than the bevel gear. With the closed-flume arrangement the power house may be located at any reasonable distance from the dam or head of water.

Wasted Advice.

AID TO MRS. TAFT

MISS ALICE BLECH CHOSEN FOR RESPONSIBLE POSITION.

Will Fulfill the Duties of Social Clerk to the Mistress of the White House—Post Is Most Important.

Washington.—Women and men in the social world of Washington have watched with keen interest for the first indication of the manner in which Mrs. Taft would conduct the social side of her duties as White House hostess. Those who have known her best in her official life in the Philippines and in Washington pretty clearly foretold just what would happen—the selection of a social clerk to execute her orders and the taking upon her own shoulders the full responsibility of the social side of Mr. Taft's administration as president.

After careful consideration Mrs. Taft selected Miss Alice Blech, until a few days ago a clerk in the bureau of American republics. She was so self-possessed, so modest, so businesslike and so altogether capable that when brought to Mrs. Taft's attention she was promptly chosen. In outlining her work in a general way Mrs. Taft came to believe that a woman who would have to devote more than two-thirds of her time to assisting the nation's hostess in meeting guests pouring tea, shopping, walking, driving, etc., as well as generally acting as chaperon for the younger members of the family, would have but little time to devote to the clerical work of the position. Besides, Mrs. Taft had said that she never had had a social secretary and never wanted one.

From all this it must not be inferred that Miss Blech will have no responsibility upon her shoulders. She will not take the initiative in anything, but she will have a man's work to do, and will perform the tasks which were usually divided among two or three men.

Miss Blech must have at her finger tips all of the necessary references in the way of social registers, diplomatic lists, congressional directories, etc. She must study the subject of precedence in its most serious phases, and she must sort the living from the dead.

There are thousands of letters sent to a president's wife every month, including congratulations, appeals for help, letters from business men and women soliciting trade, and letters from societies and organizations, and especially from church societies asking for some thing, like a handkerchief, an autographed picture or similar trifle, to be raffled. Answers to these will be dictated to or written by the secretary. Mrs. Taft has a large personal correspondence, including members of her family and intimate friends to all of whom she will write personally, as she has always done.

To Those Who Know.

I would have the mourners grieve all their sorrow out, and not stay from dwelling on their loss; without fully realizing this, they cannot begin to retrieve it. "Keep before you" I would conjure them, "the vision of the face, the form, you shall see no more on earth, and let it pass only of itself, hoping, longing for its return when it fades away. But do not frame this image from the memories of the dead in their hours of sickness, or even in the hours after pain when they take on the majesty and beauty of eternal peace. Those hours are but as instants in the long tale of the years that went before. Return in your tenderness, turn again in your despair, to the records of those happier years, and reconstruct from them the truer likeness of your beloved. See him gay and glad, full of life and purpose, of work and play, of jest and earnest, such as he veritably was, and do not wrong him by the presentment of his suffering or its mortal surcease. Make him your own again, by putting this out of your thoughts, and inviting into them the semblance of him when his life was the habit of your own, and he was most himself in some fortunate, some joyous moments."—William Dean Howells, in Harper's Bazar.

The Fear of Thirteen.

The fearful grip which this number 13 superstition continues to have upon the hearts of men and women in all walks of life is incomprehensible, says O. S. Marden, in Success Magazine. Yet every intelligent person knows that nothing in this world can possibly take place without a cause, and that the cause must be sufficent to produce an effect. The most ignorant person, it would seem, should know that the arbitrary number, 13, has no more power to produce any effect, to cause any calamity, than a drop of ink. The fact that the ink or paint, instead of being in the shape of a round drop, is put into the form of the numeral 13, does not add any force or power to it. A drop of ink or paint on the door of a hotel room would have just as much power to produce harm as it would if formed into the figure 13.

Now a Colonial Dame.

Mrs. William Howard Taft has been elected a member of a Connecticut society of the Colonial Dames of America, because of her descent from Gov. Welles, one of the early governors of the state. Her mother was Harriet Collins, whose maternal grandfather graduated from Yale in 1786. His wife was Charity Welles, descended from the governor.

"Little black swellings were scattered over my face and neck and they would leave little black scars that would itch so I couldn't keep from scratching them. Larger swellings would appear and my clothes would stick to the sores. I went to a doctor, but the trouble only got worse. By this time it was all over my arms and the upper part of my body in swellings as large as a dollar. It was so painful that I could not bear to lie on my back. The second doctor stopped the swellings, but when they broke the places would not heal. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and in less than a week some of the places were nearly well. A NEGRO WOMAN SCULPTOR.

Miss Edmonia Lewis, the colored sculptor, has lived for so many years abroad, says the Rosary Magazine, that many of her country people have well nigh forgotten her existence.

Miss Lewis is of mixed African and Indian blood, her father having been a negro and her mother an Indian of the Chippewa tribe in New York, in which state she was born, near Albany, some time about the year 1840.

Her parents died while she was still a child, and she lived and roamed with her mother's people until she was fifteen, when by the assistance of her brother sh ewent to Oberlin, Ohio, to college.

As she was a fervent Catholic she found the atmosphere of Oberlin somewhat uncongenial, but she studied there for two or three years, and there her Indian name of Wildfire was changed t othat of Edmonia Lewis. From childhood she had always had wonderful power with her hands in shaping anything she touched, and while studying she began her career as a sculptor.

She came into notice in 1865 through the exhibition of her first work ,a bust of Robert Gould Shaw of Boston. That same year she began work at Rome, where she has ever since resided.

Her works, with but few exceptions, are now the property of members of the British nobility. Her works include "The Freedwoman," "The Death of Clopatra" and portrait busts of Lincoln, Sumner and John Brown.

FOOD FACTS

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent Georgia physician went through a food experience which he makes public:

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful builder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public."

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts, when the regular food does not seem to sustain the body, will work miracles.

There can be no logical opposition to an income tax, provided people with incomes below $2,500 are exempted. The persons receiving large incomes can well afford to pay a small per cent. toward the expenses of government.

A 200 acre farm in the state of Washington was recently sold, to be paid for in wheat, at the rate of 100 bushels an acre, in two years. Farmers, thereabouts have often, according to the Tacoma Ledger, gathered crops from fifty to fifty-five bushels an acre and in this particular instance the purchaser seems to aim at making his crop pay for the land in two yeras. If it doesn't yield 10,000 bushels each year, he must buy whatever amount he is short in order to complete his payments on time.

President Taft went into office with the record of the world's greatest traveler. A tabulated statement of the distance he has traveled since 1900 fixes the total at more than 202,000 miles. These travels have not been for pleasure or curiosity. In every case they have been in the public interest, and they have also served to make Mr. Taft a familiar personality in foreign lands, and help to explain his popularity abroad and the strong confidence felt in his capacity to strengthen international amity.

Ex-Governor Folk: "The nearer to the people you can get the government the better and purer that government will be. I believe in the initiative and referendum, and if government by the people is right then these measures are right. The key to the solution of the problem of government is to make the patriotism of the people as aggressive as the rottenness of the few. Representatives of lawlessness and graft never sleep—they work, work, work all the time. The people occasionally wake up and fight for their rights, but after they have won a victory go to sleep again. The problem is to keep them awake and on the aggressive."

Mankato and the farmers of that territory have jointly set an excellent example in good road work, says the Glencoe Enterprise. During the winter months about 5,000 loads of gravel have been hauled onto the roads leading into that town by farmers, who, whenever it was possible, took out a load of gravel when in that city. Undoubtedly other cities and towns would be willing to furnish the gravel if similar co-operation on the part of the farmers could be obtained as at Mankato, and if this scheme was carried out extensively throughout the state a material improvement of highways would result.

The Glenwood Gopher Press voices the sentiment of the fair-minded element of the republican newspaper fraternity in saying:

"John A. Johnson declares he will not become a candidate for governor of Minnesota again. This voting for Johnson has become quite popular, and if he should be made the nominee again against his will the chances for his election are pretty good. He made an excellent official and all men without party prejudice will admit this. Republican voters have made him governor three times and unless the republican convention names a different brand of candidate the rank and file may prefer Johnson. However, there is little possibility of this. Shrewd politicians feel positive that Johnson will have the call from his party to a position higher up. The democratic party could go far and fare worse."

For a neat piece of irony, commend us to the following remarks from the Nation, a prominent New York weekly, anent the position of the republican majority on the protective tariff:

"When Senator Aldrich got Senator Bailey to admit, on Monday, that an income tax exempting all sums below $5,000 would be class legislation, he wore an air of triumph. Perish the thought that the republican party should ever commit itself to anything that could be called class legislation! A protective tariff, for example, is always drawn with an eye single to the general good. If anybody could point out in the Aldrich bill one instance of a special favor granted to a woolen or cotton manufacturer from his own state, the Rhode Island senator would move indiguantly to strike it out. For he believes, of course, that every schedule seeks to diffuse benefits equally to all the people. That is why the persons directly interested work so hard, and pay out so much money and bribe right and left, in order to get their particular tariff taxes inserted in the bill. They are dying to bestow the blessings of protection upon the common people, and know that the only way to begin is to secure first the privilege of robbing them.

THEN AND NOW

The Red Lake Falls Commercial club is circulating a card which speaks volumes for the material developement of Red Lake County, giving these significant items.:

1903—3 creameries, 3 cheese factoriies; paid to farmers, $44,327.00

1908—14 creameries, 7 cheese factories; paid to farmers, $439,7420.0.

Ten-fold growth in five years! It tells a magnificent story of prosperity.

Anoka County Union: Instead of clipping the wings of our third-term governor the recent legislature added to them, so he could fly a little bit higher, and he'll fly.

Willmar Journal: Senator Thorpe's bill "to make A. D. Stephens governor" was only a joke, and the biggest kind of a joke on the fellows who took it serious and solemn.

Aitkin Age: Some of the city editors are again ripping it into the country editors for not keeping their editorial columns filled. Country newspaper men don't have anything else to do but write editorials and they ought to be more careful about this matter.

Wheelock's Weekly: The 2-cent a mile law in Illinois does not appear to injure the railroads so much as Governor Hughes thought it would in New York. The annual report of the Illinois warehouse and railroad commission shows that the railroads increased their receipts from one passenger department over $2,000,000 in 1908 under the 2-cent a mile law.

Princeton Union: The Washington, Pa., M. E., church has advertised for the person who dropped a $10,000 bill into the contribution plate. The deacons think it was placed there by mistake, and will return it if this proves to be the case. It is our opinion that the man who contributed the $10,000 bill knew what he was doing, and will not be heard from, but there will in all probability be requests for its return from persons who donated buttons.

Warren Register: Japan has put an official ban on the writings of Count Tolstoi. While Tolstoi personally is not only a great man, but a good man, there is nothing in his writings that can elevate or benefit the human race. There is a morbidity about his books that tends to depress the reader and to destroy his belief in the existence of anything good in the world, of the possession of any virtue by the beings of his own kind. The Japanese will be better off deprived of Tolstoi literature, and so would every other people.

Ely Miner: The Northfield News published by Joel Heatwole, is a bitter opponent of the develonement of northern Minnesota. This sour feeling dates back to a certain state convention held in Duluth when Cole was nominated for governor. Heatwole was also on the receptive list at this time. From the Northfield News many of the penny-ante country newspapers of the southern part of the state take their cues and join in the anvil chorus, "Steel Trust, O Steel Trust." The 50,000 people of the iron ranges cut no figure.

Frazee Free Press: Such men as John Mitchell are the very best kind of leaders for the workingmen, and that this is realized by them is seen in the affectionate regard the miners have for the man who so wisely led them during the great strike seven years ago and who so constantly gave them good council. As an instance in which he truly said that "if the shorter day has given the miners more time for drink and depravity, it is a curse; but if it has given them more time for their families and for books it is a Godsend." Such words coming from him have great weight with the men, and it is cheering to know that to the great mass of them the shorter day is a benefit.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

H. J. Petterson, of Sanders, returned last week from an extended trip through the western states. Before he left he listed his farm in Sanders with K. O. It pays a man some times to take a trip and find out what property is selling in other localities. There is no doubt that land here is cheaper at present than in any other part of the county, but it will not continue that way much longer.

Quite a lot of sickness is reported in the neighborhood this week, and we imagine it is all caused by the recent cold snap. The weather has been most favorable for rheumatism and kindred afflictions.

So far there have been few signs of warmer weather, but it is an old saying that it never gets warm until the striped and gray gophers put in an appearance.

Seeding is well advanced, although the weather has not been favorable of late, but it seems to do little good to "cuss" at the weather or complain at the existing order of things.

WOMEN'S NOBLE WORK AMID HORRORS OF WAR

European Nations Show Gratitude by the Conferring of Many Orders.

Monarchical Europe, though denying in most countries the right of women to bear a share in the cares of government, is nevertheless liberal in the matter of giving rewards to those who render service to the country.

A host of orders which women may win and wear are in existence.

King Edward recently conferred the decoration of the Royal Red Cross on Queen Elena of Italy. This is only one of the many orders with which the sovereign of Britain might have honored the wife of the king of Italy had he so desired.

Many of these orders which are now worn proudly by the royal women of Europe go back centuries for their origin. The Order of the Axe is now close to nine hundred years old, having been established in the twelfth century by the last duke of Barcelona, Ramon Berengeur. It was the devoted courage of the daughters of Spain who went out on the field of battle and assisted in repelling the Moors, who at that time were in the midst of one of their many efforts to overwhelm the country, and make it a vassal that gave rise to it.

Catherine of Russia, one of the heroic figures of history, was responsible for the creating of the Order of Liberty.

Catherine's Great Work.

Peter, leading the Russians against the Turks, found his fortunes in most unpromising condition. The army had been decimated by the other battles fought under the great leader, despair had seized upon them, and Peter freely admitted that but for the presence of the iron-nerved Catherine, who went among the men, stirred their courage, dressed their wounds, and exhausted all of her great powers in rallying them to renewed courage, he would surely have been defeated.

So honest was he in giving credit to his wife that when the war was over he instituted the order.

It was the design of Peter that no one else but his wife should ever wear its insignia. She was to be the sole member, and during his lifetime no one else received the decoration.

But after the death of Peter, Paul I. somewhat modified its character so that it could be conferred on the higher nobility connected with the royal household. Each person getting the coveted decoration had impressed the obligation it carried of bringing the younger members of the royal family up in such a way as to do credit to the principles for which the order stood.

Out of compliment to Catherine, and perhaps in order to ease his conscience for having admitted others to an order designed for her exclusively, he renamed it the Order of Catherine.

But this is not the most highly prized order for women. Germany boasts that. It is known as Order of Louisa.

This order was founded in 1815 by Frederick William III., and commemorates the heroism of the daughters of the Fatherland during the Napoleonic wars.

In the series of battles that terminated in the defeat of the emperor at Waterloo, the women of Prussia most nobly supported their husbands, fathers, sons and brothers in the field. They sold their rings and jewelry in order to be near the scene of the battles and thus be able to give their all in caring for the wounded.

The noblest women of the country were proud to get the Order of Louisa, but it was by means confined to them, for the purpose of the king had been to make it absolutely a reward of merit, and many an humble woman received the order for services she had done her country in its hour of crisis.

Germany also boasts another order of a similar kind, the Service Cross for Women and Girls. This was the outcropping of the war with France, when the daughters of the land of the kaiser once more wrought mightily for the good of those who were bearing arms at the front.

France once had many orders, but the substitution of a republican for a monarchical form of government has had the effect of gradually removing them all excepting the Legion of Honor, which continues to be a decoration most eagerly sought by all Frenchmen.

The Legion of Honor was established by Napoleon in 1802, and was at first known as the Order of the Eagle. Like many others, it underwent a change, and finally came to be known by its present name.

The first woman to receive the Legion was Marie Jean Schelink. In 1792 she enlisted in the Second Belgian battalion, went through several campaigns, in the course of which she was wounded more than once. After the battle of Austerlitz she was made a lieutenant colonel, and was decorated with the order by Napoleon himself.

King John of Saxony founded in 1870 an order with a notably high appeal. It is the reward of work in the cause of humanity, and is known as the Order of Sidonia.

The Cross of Mary was founded to encourage service among the sick and wounded in time of war. The decoration was originally limited to members of the Catholic faith, but these barriers have now been removed.

Founded by Victoria.

Great Britain has four important orders that are within reach of women. In 1877, when Queen Victoria assumed the title empress of India, she founded the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, which may be conferred upon princesses of the royal house and wives and female relatives of Indian princes and holders of high office in India, such as the viceroy, commander-in-chief, etc.

King Edward founded the Order of Merit. This is actually intended for men, but the ice was broken when it was conferred on Miss Florence Nightingale, and it has usually been the experience that when precedent is broken and one woman gets a decoration, others will follow. The Royal Family Order of Victoria and Albert came into existence in the earlier stages of the married life of the loved queen, and the Royal Red Cross, which King Edward has just conferred on the queen of Italy, came into existence as a reward for those who ministered to the wounded and suffering on battlefields.

Elector Maximilian III, in 1783, founded the Ladies' Order of the Society of St. Anne at Munich, and it has survived to the present day. At first it had ten women who could prove sixteen generations of nobility; now there are three classes with twenty-five members in the first, forty-two in the second and a third class to which the daughters of military officers are eligible.

The Ladies of Noble Blood.

The religious element entered very strongly into the founding of the Order of the Starry Cross. After a great fire in the palace of the Empress Eleanor of Austria, it was found that all that survived was a little crucifix said to contain relics of the true cross. This had been worn by the Emperor Maximilian and had protected him in his campaigns. Out of gratitude that it survived the empress established the order for women.

Pope Clement took a deep interest in the new order and entrusted its management to the prince bishop of Vienna.

This order is very difficult to enter, for it is open only to ladies of noble royal blood who have done notable work for the relief of the suffering and poor in the hospitals.

Only women of the royal house and thirty women of noble lineage are eligible to membership in the order of Maria Louis of Spain which is hence credited with being one of the most exclusive orders in the world.

The Order of Isabella of Portugal is conferred on those who minister to the wants of the poor.

The Far East also boasts its decorations. Nishani Shefakat was organized to commemorate the work of distinguished English women during the Russo-Turkish war. Abdul Hamid founded the order in 1878 as a mark of gratitude, and at once conferred it upon Lady Burdett-Coutts and Lady Layard. The mysterious meaning of the order is pity, mercy, kindness.

Thus while women may not be able to get their suffrage as quickly as they might desire in all parts of the world, recognition is not lacking for what they do.

Maori Race Is Rapidly Passing Into Oblivion

Most Superb of Primitive Races a Victim of Vices Brought to Country by White Invaders

The pride of all the aboriginal races, the far-famed Maoris of New Zealand, are in their decline, and soon will be only a memory.

This superb savage race, whose proportions and handsome appearance once made them the wonder of the ethnologist, has lost its vitality, and is now only a shadow of what it once was.

When the first white men entered New Zealand, and encountered the Maori race, they were then a people several thousand strong; now the number has steadily shrunk till the last census shows that only a few more than forty-seven thousand are still living.

Not only in numbers has the decline been marked. It is also in the health and appearance that the sad story is told. Once the Maori was healthy, vigorous and prolific, powerful and well proportioned. Today it is a nation of lowered physique and declining birth rate.

Experts who have studied conditions in the country say that nothing can now save the race, and it is only a question of a very few generations before it is wiped out altogether.

Look to End With Stoicism.

The Maori chieftains themselves understand this to be a fact, and they look forward to the end of a great race with grim stoicism. They charge their fate to the coming of the European, and draw a comparison between the manner in which the Maori rat was destroyed by the rat that came over in the white man's ship. Similarly they expect to have their national life, in fact their physical life, finally crushed out of them by the conditions that arose when white men assumed control of their land.

It is the ways of civilization that have been the downfall of the unfortunate aborigines. Left to their own devices, living their own lives in their own manner they would have gone steadily onward, thriving and prospering. But when the white man came he gave them new ideas. One of these was the use of firearms, and to these can be charged a great deal of what has followed.

When the savages first saw guns, and saw warriors drop without apparent cause when the flash of flame was sent from the weapons of the invader, they got a new idea. If they had guns they, too, could become great warriors. Not only could they repel the invader, but they could also become conquerors, and take to themselves for their own land of other peoples.

Greatest of Native Fighters.

The leader in this idea was the native chief, Hongi, the greatest of the Maori fighters. He would be king if he could only get the firearms.

The English sought to placate Hongi. Recognizing his great influence with the people, they took him to England, taught him the ways of agriculture and sent him home with money enough to buy farming implements to make his people farmers. But Hongi thought only of warfare of conquest. The fighting spirit of a savage people cried out within him, and he had learned just enough of modern ideas by his residence among white men to seek to have at his disposal all the most modern agencies for killing. He sold the farming implements and he brought firearms to his people instead.

These formed the basis of an arsenal, with which for ten years he succeeded in keeping the state in a condition of bloodiest turmoil. Those who supported him were brave, but they were misguided. They followed him blindly, and it is estimated that in the internecine wars which followed while Hongi was striving to put himself in position of being ruler of the country, not less than one-fourth of the Maori population perished.

Wrecked by Vices of Whites.

Owing to the numbers killed in battle, the women far outnumbered the surviving male residents of the country when peace was finally restored, and the poor creatures, utterly demoralized by the vices of the whites, were so enfeebled in health and stamina that their descendants to this day are paying the price in wrecked constitutions and enfeebled minds.

The death rate now goes bounding ahead of the birth rate, and nothing can be done to alter the condition, for the whole tone and power of the race has been lowered to the point where recovery is a virtually impossibility.

Twice have the Maoris bravely battled with the British in the hope of wiping the invader off their national map. The first of these wars which began in 1860, and lasted for ten years cost the British crown $60,000,000. It was marked by greatest heroism on part of the natives, and many a gallant soldier in the service of the queen suffered a loss of reputation at the hands of the native fighters. All the vigorous and robust Maoris were drawn from their homes in attempt to drive the invader out of the land and into the sea, and noncombatants were overtaxed in their efforts to carry food and supplies to the fighters. The tribes paid a terrible price in lives for this conflict, perishing by the tens of thousands.

But it was not alone the sacrifice of life in warfare that brought down the Maori from his estate.

Strong Drink Has Share.

Strong drink also had its share. It is said that at first the natives did not take kindly to liquor, and had to be taught its uses. But once the thirst developed it became a passion far stronger than any other in their lives. Every festive occasion and even funerals were made the subject of the wildest revels in which there was absolutely no check on license.

For a long time the craze for liquor held the natives in bondage, then England took steps to deal with it. Liquor was forbidden to the natives and heavy penalties imposed for selling it to them, with the result that the craze gradually subsided, and today there is a comparatively little indulgence, a drunken Maori being seen only rarely.

But the effect of the evil was not to be undone with its stopping and, though there is little drinking now, the children born of the parents of that day show the ill effects.

Neither could the Maori adapt himself to the European ways of living. When they lived in the open they had health. Now since they have adopted the white man's style of clothes, and have modeled their little houses on the kind he uses, more of the hardihood has passed from them, and contributed to their decay.

Pushed Aside by Whites.

White man's enterprise and activity has also taken from them many of the means by which they earned livelihood. The great chieftains used to make the people work on the farms, and the fisheries supplied a never ending source of wealth. But the white man has monopolized these means of existence, and the Maori loses the wealth he might have made and also the blessings of health that come as the reward of toil.

His crops are put in too late, and he consistently neglects them, with the result that the whole people lead a hand-to-mouth existence, and there is a constant shortage of supplies. Sometimes this leads to conditions of absolute famine. Many of the white man's diseases unknown to the country before he came have now made their advent, and are reaping a big harvest of death among the unfortunate natives.

In fact, it is becoming rare to see a Maori who is past middle age.

Children are dying by the wholesale, and young men and young women apparently robust are cut down suddenly and terribly by fever and quick consumption.

Maoris Are Fatalists.

British authorities have recognized the condition, and have done all that was possible to effect a remedy. If the Maoris themselves were only differently constituted, it might be possible to do something, but they are fatalists, and they view the whole situation with resigned indifference.

They live in the past. Their few surviving poets tell of what was when all the country for hundreds of miles around dreaded the prowess of the mighty Maori, but his day is passed, and to bring him back again is wasted effort.

In only a few years photographs and books alone will tell to the world the story of what a race once ruled New Zealand.

$5,000 WORTH OF KNOWLEDGE

This Stamp Collector Recognized a Variety When He Say It.

Through his intimate knowledge of United States postage stamps a Philadelphia collector was enabled the other day to make a quick profit of over $5,000 on a small lot of envelopes bearing ordinary looking stamps to which the average person would have paid little attention.

The collector was passing the house of a man who handled curiosities of various kinds when the dealer called him in to take a look at nine stamped envelopes. The dealer said he knew nothing about stamps and would like to know what the collector would give for them.

"One hundred dollars apiece, or $900 for the lot of nine pieces," came the prompt reply of the collector.

"Oh, I don't want to stick you," said the dealer. "I offered the identical stamps to a well known stamp dealer in town for $35 each, and he replied he would give only $25 apiece."

"Never you mind," said the collector. "The nine hundred goes, and I'm glad to have the chance."

The envelopes or letters had been sent from Baltimore in the '40s. Five of them bore two stamps, while the four others had only a single stamp each. The letters were written before the United States adopted the adhesive postage stamp and at a time when the postmaster of each large city issued his own stamps. The postmaster of Baltimore at this time was James M. Buchanan.

Postmaster Buchanan issued five and ten cent stamped envelopes. The stamps on the envelopes showed a large figure "5" or "10," surrounded by a circle. Above was the word "Paid," and above that the name of the postmaster in full, "James M. Buchanan." This signature was placed upon each envelope with a hand stamp.

Two colors were used—red and blue—the stamps appearing on paper of different colors. Sometimes, probably on account of the scarcity of the regular 10 cent stamp, two of the fives were used on one envelope to make up the sum of 10 cents. These were called compounds, and the collector in question in his lot of nine envelopes obtained five of these compounds, all of which are very rare. Of the 10 cent red stamped envelopes of straight denomination only two specimens are known to exist.

The collector had no difficulty in disposing of his stamps for $5,000, and still has in his possession a specimen of the compound envelope which is easily worth $1,500.

From what can be learned these early envelopes with hand-stamped signatures were issued in 1845 for the last time. There is also on record a copy of the envelope with the autograph signature of Postmaster Buchanan. [illegible]

CURIOUS HEADACHE REMEDY.

Not Generally Available, However—A French Legend.

They have an odd way of curing headaches near Billiers in France. The sufferer pricks his or her forehead with a needle until blood flows, then with the same needle he or she pricks a certain cross that was erected in 1874 near the village. By this means it is believed that the headache is made to "enter the wood," where it will remain for at least a fortnight.

This cure, says the Wide World Magazine, is attributed to the intervention of the Virgin of Mary, who is said to have appeared in the above mentioned year where the cross is erected with a promise that she would perform miracles" to prove her descent at that spot."

Adjoining the cross for curing headaches is another that is reputed to be of great service in the cure of diseases of the scalp. All that the sufferers need do is to come and pray there, leaving their bonnets or caps behind them, attached to a forked branch stuck in the earth.

The inhabitants of Billiers have other superstitions. They put a large cross in whitewash over the doors of their cottages so as to protect them against lightning; they stretch cords over their huge iron stew pots and sit watching them for hours to see if they are vibrated by some unseen power, vibration being a sure sign that those who take part in the experiment are to be happy for the remainder of the year; and on the fishwomen receiving the first proceeds of a sale they fall down on their knees to make the sign of the cross, which will insure a profitable day's work.

A SUFFRAGE DANCE.

Frivolous Function Given in Aid of the Cause.

It is a mistake to think that the suffragists ignore totally the lighter side of life, says the Ladies' Pictorial of London. A very gay and successful private subscription ball in aid of woman suffrage took place at 92 Lancaster gate, by permission of Mrs. Hughes, on a recent evening.

There were an excellent band and floor and great numbers of dancing men. The rooms and staircases were appropriately adorned with purple, white and green and with banners and pictorial emblems of the suffrage. Lady Marjorie Binnie, Lady Harberton, Lady Constance Lytton and others contributed to the success of a every animated dance.

Among those present were Miss Christabel Pankhurst, who looked very charming in a soft white gown, and Miss Cobden Sanderson, while among the pretty young girls dancing were the Misses Beatrice and Nora Craik and Miss Little.

A Modification.

"I'm a terror, I be," announced the new arrival in Frozen Dog to one of the men behind the bar.

"Be ye?"

"Takes three men to handle me, once I get started," he went on.

"Oh, well," he remarked as he arose painfully and dusted off his clothes, "of course if ye're short handed, I suppose two kin do it on a pinch."

Slight Variation.

"De Ancient and Honorable Order of Hoboes is a sad order, mum," said Gritty George, as he demanded the mince pie.

"I suppose so," sneered the industrious housewife. "I suppose you have as your motto Dante's famous expression, 'He who enters here leaves hope behind.'"

"Oh, no, mum. Our motto is on dat order, but somewhat different."

"Indeed! And what is it?"

"Why, 'He who enters here leaves soap behind.'"

The Last Straw.

"Say, paw," queried small Tommy Toddles, "why do they always put in a scythe when they make a picture of Father Time?"

"It is intended to represent the shortness of life, my son," answered Toddles, Sr. "Time cuts people down, you know."

"But, paw," continued Tommy, "when Time shall be no mower, he'll drop his scythe, won't he?"

"Speaking of time, young man," said the father, "you go and tell your mother [illegible]

PURELY FEMININE

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

LARGELY DEPENDENT ON THE DAILY BATH.

Imperative That the Skin Be Frequently Cleansed of Impurities—Pain and Suffering Are Sure to Follow Neglect.

A daily bath should be part of the moral laws of every class of society. If it is an impossibility to plunge daily into a bathtub, or if the doctor forbids a plunge bath, the sponge bath will prove sufficient for all purposes of cleanliness or health.

The human skin is a complicated net, whose meshes must be kept open and unclogged, in order that through them the body may throw off its impure secretions, which must be gotten rid of under penalty of pain and suffering, and sometimes death.

The healthy action of the skin is stimulated by the opening of the pores in the bath, especially if it is followed by friction with a brush or rough towel, etc. (Massage can be dispensed with if the touch of a strange hand is objectionable.) Many fevers and contagious diseases might be avoided by these means.

In cases of internal inflammation, billous colic and congestion there is no surer remedy than the hot bath. This bath has also effected most astonishing cures of obstinate constipation. When a person has been exposed to a contagious disease he should immediately take a hot bath. There is always a possibility that the disease will pass out through the pores of the skin. It should be remembered that it is very important to cool off gradually. Cleanliness of the skin has a decided influence on the assimilation of food by the body. It is known that well-opened pores make a far finer skin than uncleanly people can boast.

Think of the unfortunates of the Middle Age ignorant of the blessings of the bath! "One thousand years without baths!" exclaims Michelet in one of his histories. Think of the pestilence, the hideous diseases which at that time scourged poor humanity! In the time of Henry IV. the habit of bathing was still rare, for it is recorded of one of the great men of the day that he asked why the hands should be washed and not the feet. How horrible!

If we knew the personal uncleanliness of the beautiful women of today at the court of King Sun we should involuntarily shudder with disgust.

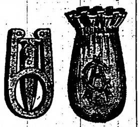
SUITABLE PRESENT FOR MAN

Case That Contains Folding Pocket Scissors Very Acceptable to the Bachelor.

As a small present for a man, a pair of folding pocket scissors, such as shown in our sketch, always makes an acceptable and useful gift, and scissors of this kind can nowadays be bought very cheaply. A little washleather case to contain the scissors can be easily made and renders a present of this description much more interesting, and always much more valued by the recipient.



The case should be cut in two pieces, sewn together at the edges and made to fit the scissors fairly closely. The edges of the upper part are bound with narrow ribbon, and inside the neck is sewn elastic, so that the case will automatically close over the scissors, and prevent them from falling out. On little articles of this kind that have two sides on which initials may be worked, it is always a nice idea to work those of the donor on one side, and those of the recipient on the other.

NOVELTY AS A REFRESHMENT.

Rissoles and Rissolettes Something New to Serve at Afternoon Tea or Card Party.

The hostess who wants novelties for her afternoon tea or card party can find them in rissoles and rissolettes, that can be made at home quite as deliciously as by the caterer. A rissole is nothing but a croquette wrapped in pastry and fried in boiling lard. Special irons come for frying these dainties, but they are not necessary. Roll out thin squares of puff paste, and on top place croquette mixture of chicken, stirred into a well-seasoned white sauce, and molded when cold into regular croquette shapes. Fold the pastry around the meat, seal the edges with white of egg, dip into egg and well seasoned bread crumbs and fry in boiling lard. Rissolettes are sheets of pastry rolled very thin and dotted with currant jelly, orange marmalade or any desired preserve. A large sheet of pastry is rolled thin, covered with dots of the preserve and topped with another sheet of pastry. To prevent the jam from spreading the pastry about the jelly is wet with ice water for about half an inch in. Cut in circles, diamonds or any desired shape, pinch the edges together, brush with white of egg and cinnamon. These rissolettes can either be fried in hot lard, or, what is easier, baked in a hot oven for about 15 minutes.

To Prevent Colors from Running.

Into a gallon of cold water put one tablespoonful of pulverized alum. Let the article soak in this for about twenty minutes before washing, then wash in the usual way.

YELLOW IN FASHION'S FAVOR.

Color Scheme That Just Now Is Immensely Popular Among Parisian Women of Fashion.

Paris turned emerald green a month ago and then after poking around among her metallic fabrics for another color scheme, she worked up a perfect craze for yellow. Her green satin empire evening gown slipped into the background when its place was usurped by corn color and canary in clinging fabrics. The topaz satins fairly melted into the golden gauzes so much affected as tunics and trimmings during the whole period of empire fashions. Chamois color has been popular and now among the more useful materials one finds the browns shading toward "chevelure"—hair brown—with always a touch of gold in it, "abeille," or bee, is the golden yellow its name implies. The "beige" color of the present season is a yellowish sand color. Costume linen is brought to us in burnt orange and in the light, creamy yellows, which are to be trimmed with black.

Gingham appears in a two-tone check in yellow, and this popular color is shown with a stripe of gray—but the gray is another story.

A Dressmaking Hint.

In making a blouse, too deep a round must not be cut for the neck at the outset. It is better to try on first and then outline a semi-circle in front with a row of pins, cutting it evenly on a flat surface.

STOCKINGS TO MATCH GOWN.

Failing That, They Must Be of the Same Shade as the Shoes, Is Fashion's Edict.

Black stockings are no longer in vogue for summer use, nor white all fashionable for evening wear. Stockings are designed to match the gown, and if they are not to be had in the shade of the dress then they must match the shoes. Stockings are offered in all the popular colors, such as brown, bronze, military, and copenhagen blues and grape, while for evening wear the new rose, raspberry, apricot, champagne, and delicate shades of pink are the rage.

Those in lisle thread are had in all these tones and are counted good for morning wear. They are offered at 50 cents and up. Some are so finely woven that they look like silk. The least expensive are plain, while the more costly are trimmed with hand embroidery worked in the selfsame color. Some of the delicate trellis patterns are elaborate.

With black and dark gowns the black stockings worked in the same color are preferred to the lighter shades. Bronze stockings are considered splendid for brown shoes and bronze slippers, both in lisle and in silk.

For dressy occasions silk stockings continue in vogue. The smoke, gray, military, and copenhagen blue are admired with walking suits. But for evening wear the amethyst, old rose, apricot, and bronze are preferred to all other shades. For evening wear it is desirable to have the slippers and hose the same color as the gown. When this is not possible the stockings should match the slippers.

Though plain silk stockings may be worn for evening wear, the open and the embroidered ones are counted best. Some of the French hand-embroidered stockings have elaborate wreaths, low knots, roses, or morning glories covering the front. Though hand-embroidered stockings may be had at five dollars a pair, the hand-woven hose trimmed with plenty of hand embroidery cost from $25 up.

Crochet Jacket for a Child.

COLORS TO CONTINUE BRIGHT.

French Milliners Decide to Repeat the Wonderful Dyes Used in the Winter.

The milliners, who, in Paris, dictate the range and choice of new colors followed by the dressmakers, have chosen to repeat the wonderful dyes of the winter.

All the old favorites of the last six months have found a new birth in straw.

In green there are found the tones known as lichen, jade, Azoff, fir, Gobelin and bottle.

In blue are again the shades of lapis lazuli, sapphire, canard and peacock.

The unripe plum color, mouse gray, prunelle, ash, banana, bronze and old gold are repeated in hats.

Any of these may be chosen for street wear, and black almost leads, it is so popular; the greens and blues are first in the field. Trimmed with cabochons of straw or Ottoman silk, then two long eagle quills, they are the accepted headgear by smart women in short walking suits for morning.

There is no tendency to keep the quills demure in coloring. They are painted, streaked, shaded. Colors are rampant in them and the most vivid and daring combinations are effected.

The result is not unpleasant. There is so little trimming on these stiff hats that the gayety of the quills gives merely a relieving touch of color.

If the outlines of these hats seem a trifle unbroken, stiff or ungraceful, much can be done by an enveloping veil. This is now such an important part of headgear that its role should never be minimized. It can be deftly rolled out or in wherever a softening touch is needed, and in its present form it is no less than a trimming in itself.

Fashions in Collars and Cuffs.

Ecru in French pique is new for the collar, cuffs and belt of children's blouse dresses made of bright-colored Scotch ginghams. Some of the very best-looking tub gowns for children are made of white, in firm linen or pique, with gay calico for the broad tailor collar and the cuffs.

Colored chambre models in the Russian styles for boys and in the shawl collar and surplice models for little girls have as a finish the rolling collar and cuffs of the material scalloped round in buttonhole stitch. A black and white pique is shown, with blue pique collar, cuffs and tie, all finished with tailor stitching in white.

A brown holland Russian blouse suit for a very small boy has yellow pique decorations and brass buttons.

WOULD LOOK WELL IN GREEN

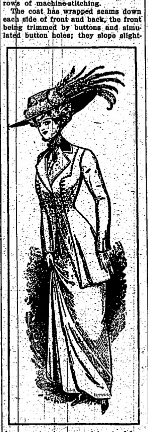
Design for Smart Costume Intended Exclusively for Wear on the Street.

Myrtle green serge or cloth is used for the smart costume illustrated here; the skirt is just a simple walking style, trimmed at the foot by rows of machine-stitching.

The coat has wrapped seams down each side of front and back, the front being trimmed by buttons and simulated button holes; they slope slightly away to show a waistcoat of brocade or chene silk. Velvet is used to face the collar, and it also trims the cuff.

Hat of myrtle green straw, trimmed with feathers.

Materials required: Seven yards 48 inches wide, 16 buttons, one-quarter yard velvet, one-eighth yard chene silk, four yards lining.



The Toilet Table

Should you be troubled with cold feet cut four thicknesses of newspaper the size of the foot and put two in each shoe, as you would use an inside sole. It is a great protection from dampness also.

In sleeping, keep the head as low as possible that the blood may circulate freely in the brain. The less pillows the better. Always stretch out your body fully. When the limbs are crossed or curled up in any way the rest is not so great.

An insect in the ear may be destroyed by pouring a teaspoonful of warm olive oil or camphorated oil into the ear and keeping it there for some time, holding the head in a position to retain the oil, which will afterward come away with the dead insect.

Nothing will better draw out inflammation caused by tears than to soak the eyes in hot water. To do this the cloth should be wet and laid over the lids, renewing as soon as the heat subsides. Ten minutes of this makes the whole face red, and as the blood recedes the lids bleach with the rest of the skin.

"HE'S GOT IT."

That's the Latest College Slang and Menas a Fellow's All Right.

The very newest slang expression among college undergraduates, where slangy and picturesque expressions always are up with and often ahead of the times, is "He's got it." If a man has "got it" he is distinctly all right; his fellow students have put on him the seal of their unqualified approval; they have bestowed on him the highest praise they can bestow. There is about him an indefinite something, morally and mentally, that makes him all right—a square, clean, capable, likable chap.

As is the case with most slang the genesis of "He's got it" is hard to trace. It will be seen, however, that its mysterious, intangible "it" is pregnant with meaning. The expression first came into note last fall when the papers told of the prayer made by Tad Jones, the Yale quarterback, on the morning of the Harvard-Yale football game. "Fellows," said Jones at the Yale dinner after the game, "when I got up this morning something was wrong. I didn't have it. So I went to my room and knelt down and prayed, and when I arose I knew that I had it." Yale won the game.

With Jones something was missing—confidence regarding the outcome of the game, clear judgment or some condition of mental preparedness—the missing "it." Since then the expression has come to be more general in meaning. A fellow may try hard and mean well, but if there is something lacking in his ability to accomplish things he "hasn't got it."

Most of a man's friends are his friends because of what they don't know about him.

WHAT COLORS SHALL I USE?

This Question is Important in Painting a House or Other Building.

A proper color scheme is extremely important in painting a house. It makes all the difference between a really attractive home and one at which you wouldn't take a second glance. And it makes a big difference in the price the property will bring on the market.

As to the exterior, a good deal depends upon the size and architecture of the house, and upon its surroundings. For a good interior effect you must consider the size of the rooms, the light, etc.

You can avoid disappointment by studying the books of color schemes for both exterior and interior painting, which can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit also includes specifications, and a simple instrument for testing the purity of paint materials. Pure White Lead which will stand the test in this outfit will stand the weather test. National Lead Company's famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark on the keg is a guarantee of that kind of white lead.

Signs of spring come in bunches. A flock of several hundred robins enjoying a hearty breakfast in the street in front of the J. W. Bourdon residence this morning was an interesting sight. There wasn't any early bird to catch the worm, so there was a good square meal for the entire army of them.

An exchange relates the following regarding an unmarried sheriff. He was recently called upon to serve an atttachment upon the personal property of a handsome young widow. He called and said: Madame, I have an attachment for you. She blushed and said the attachment was reciprocated. You understand, he said, you must proceed to court. She said it wasn't leap year and she had rather he'd do the courting. Madame, he continued, no time for trifling; justice is waiting. Oh, I prefer a minister, she said, a squire married me the first time and I had bad luck.

A number of other important social events are scheduled for these days. No more appropriate time or place for a reunion could be selected.

The Law Supplements.

In a twenty-four page supplement is published this week the laws passed by the legislature, recently adjourned. Ignorance of the law excuses no one, so you'd better take a day off and read this issue of the Gazette.

If your stomach, heart or kidneys are weak try at least a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't dose the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr, Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail the depending organs of necessity fail. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's R storative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all druggists.

Spring Pastimes.

When I peruse the seedman's book,
That handy guide,
And at the tempting pictures look,
Then I decide
To purchase hoe and spade and rake
And gleefully a garden make.

But when the poultry book I read,
See Wyandottes
And Plymouth Rocks of stately breed
In handsome lots,
I feel I really cannot sleep
Till I begin to chickens keep.

S.S.S. FOR BAD BLOOD

The most important part of the human system is the blood. Every muscle, nerve, tissue, bone and sinew is dependent on this vital fluid for nourishment and strength necessary to maintain them in health and enable each to perform the different duties nature requires. Even the heart, the very "engine" of life, receives its vigor and motive power from the blood. Since so much is dependent on this vital fluid it can very readily be seen how necessary it is to have it pure and uncontaminated if we would enjoy the blessing of good health. Bad blood is responsible for most of the ailments of mankind; when from any cause it becomes infected with impurities, humors or poisons, disease in some form is sure to follow. Muddy, sallow complexions, eruptions, pimples, etc., show that the blood is infected with unhealthy humors which have changed it from a pure, fresh stream to a sour, acrid fluid, which forces out its impurities through the pores and glands of the skin. A very common evidence of bad blood is sores or ulcers, which break out on the flesh, often from a very insignificant bruise or even scatch or abrasion. If the blood was pure and healthy the place would heal at once, but being loaded with impurities, which are discharged into the wound, irritation and inflammation are set up and the sore continues. Bad blood is also responsible for Anaemia, Boils, Malaria, etc.; the weak, polluted circulation cannot furnish the nourishment and strength required to sustain the body, and a general run-down condition of health results. S. S. S. is nature's blood purifier and tonic; made entirely of healing, cleansing roots and herbs. It goes down into the circulation and removes every particle of impurity, humor or poison that may be there, restores lost vitality, and steadily tones up the entire system. It adds to the blood the healthful properties it is in need of, and in every way assists in the cure of disease. S. S. S. neutralizes any excess of acid in the blood, making it fresh and pure, and permanently cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, and all other skin diseases and eruptions. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Malaria, and all other diseases or disorders arising from bad blood. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired free to all who write.

> Your S. S. S., in my opinion, is as good a medicine as can be had; it simply cannot be improved upon as a remedy to purify and enrich the blood and to invigorate and tone up the system. This spring my blood was bad and I was run down in health, and having seen your medicine highly advertised I commenced its use. Today my blood is in fine condition and my general health is of the best. Am filling position as fireman for a large concern here, and if I was not in good physical condition it would be impossible for me to fill the place. Your S. S. S. has been of great service to me and I do not hesitate to give it the credit it deserves.

FROM KALAMAZOO!

Red Lake Falls Boys on Lark In Alaska.

Last week Lee E. Healy and Paul T. Brunelle spent several days in Juneau gathering information to aid them in making a trip down the Yukon in a small sailing boat. They fell in with Agent Sowerby as an indulgent and most likely informant of the secrets of shooting the rapids and the dangers that beset such a trip, and tagged him about the town beseiging him with questions. It came near ruining Mr. Sowerby's placid disposition and he says himself that he smoked more those three days than he has ever before in that length of time; but never theless he gave them all the information he possessed and referred them to a ship builder at Whitehorse who will give them more.

The boys finished high school in Kalamazoo, Mich., last year and started out after graduation to tour the world. From Whitefish they will travel down the river in their boat until they come to St. Michaels.—Juneau (Alaska) Record.

The Fourth Door Got Away.

"I'll bet you" said Sheriff Nelson at Helmuth Zaiser's new theatre the other day "that this place has four doors."

Helmuth counted them but could make only three. "You'll have to show me" said he.

"There's the front door," said Low.

"Yes.," said Helmuth.

"And there's the back door."

"Yes."

"And there's the side door."

"Yes."

"And there's the cuspidor," said Lew, triumphantly. "That makes four."

Then next day Helmuth tried it on a traveling man. He showed the front door, the back door and the side door.

"And now the fourth door.?" inquire the traveling man.

"The spittoon," said Helmuth.

Not a soul smiled, and now Helmuth is still wondering how that fourth door got away from him.

AUDITOR O'BRIEN ILL.

Sudden Attack of Appendicitis Condition Quite Serious.

County Auditor J. B. O'Brien was taken seriously ill Sunday evening and when a physician was summoned it was found that he was suffering with a severe attack of appendicitis. He was taken to Crookston Monday evening and an operation was performed Tuesday forenoon. A most unsatisfactory condition was found and Mr. O'Brien is a very sick man. However, he is making a valiant fight and his condition is favorable considering the seriousness of the attack.

The attack came suddenly. Mr. O'Brien was not feeling well Friday and Saturday, but was able to be about the office a part of each day and it was not until Sunday evening that the seirousness of his condition was realized.

Mr. O'Brien's many friends here are very much concerned about his condition and many anxious inquiries are made, and hopes expressed that he may soon be able to return to Red Lake Falls.

Statesmen Warned.

Sunbeam: We are getting somewhat tired of this bridge discussion controversy, and are going to close the argument by saying that the Sunbeam represents the people, published on a farm by a farmer, that always wants the representatives of the people to represent them. Now, all we ask of representatives, is to represent the people. If Hon. H. Steenerson is under the impression that he is representing the people by moving this bridge site, he should move it. If our represenatives in the legislature are under the impresson that the state money should be put in at Highlanding, put it there. We only ask one kindness of you, and that is, don't ask The Sunbeam, in the next campaign to support you for office, unless you represent the people, because we intend to.

NEW SHOW HOUSE.

The Bijou Will Probably Open Saturday Night.

The first entertainment at the new electrical theatre, the Bijou, will probably be given Saturday night. The Zaiser building on the east side of Main street that is being converted into a show house is being fixed up very attracfively. The buildng has been repainted and the interior is being rearranged.

Mr. Barr, who opens the new show shop, says there'll be a show every evening. The entertainment will consist of moving pictures and illustrated songs.

Rev. Schwarz Installed.

Rev. Philip A. Schwarz, jr., was formally installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Eveleth Tuesday evening. The installation service was conducted by a committee representing the Presbytery of Duluth.

Rev. S. A. Jamieson, pastor at large of the Presbytery, presided, put the constitutional questions and delivered the charge to the people. Rev. J. F. McLeod peached the installation sermon and Rev. Henry Neff of Virginia, gave the charge to the pastor-elect. The election of Mr. Schwarz to the pastorate of the Eveleth church was by unanimous vote of the board of trustees and the call was signed by the members of the church as well, who urged his acceptance.

Governor Cancels Dates.

Governor John A. Johnson, it is said, may abandon the lecture platform for the present summer, and even for all of his remaining term as governor. The governor is still at Old Point Comfort, Va., and has already cancelled several dates for May. He has had several attacks of an old intestinal trouble and before leaving for the east said the wisest thing for him would be to take it easier this summer.

Governor Johnson commands $200 a lecture from the lyceum organization, and is able to make $1,000 a week more than his expenses while on a lecture tour. The strain of the last campaign, however, injured his health for the entire winter. It is likely that the entire tour planned for the coming summer will be abandoned.

Managing Candles.

When candes begin to flare high and flicker on the dinner table, the hostess, intent on preserving the life of her set of dainty candle shades, keeps an anxious eye on these frail bits of lace and paper. To instantly extinguish the blaze dip a piece of bread in water and apply it to the wick. When you are fatigued or run down try a glass of golden grain belt beer. If taken regularly at mealtime will build up and feed the nerves, enrich the blood and invigorate the muscles. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

Will Pay Bounty.

At the last meeting of the county commissioners it was decided to add a county bounty to the state bounty on wolves. To the state bounty of $7.50 for full grown wolves and $5 for cubs the county will add $5 and $2 respectively. A bounty of ten cents will be paid for crows killed between May 15 and June 15 and between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15.

SCHOOL OFFICERS TO MEET.

On Invitation of Superintendent Anderson Will Meet May 28.

County Superintendent H. F. Anderson has called a meeting of the school officers of the county to be held at Thief River Falls Friday, May 28. The expenses of the officers will be paid and no doubt many will avail themselves of the opportunities to acquire some valuable information relative to the needs of the country schools.

Prominent speakers have been secured to address the meeting and an instructive program will be given.

IRON ORE IN CLEARWATER.

Farmers Excited and Land Prices Begin to Jump.

There is excitement in the southern part of Clearwater county over the recent strikes of iron ore. Two borings were made near Mallard recently and it is said pay ore was found on a place belonging to Harry Sinker. Land owners have either taken their holdings from the market or will only sell on condition that the mineral rights are reserved.

If your stomach, heart or kidneys are weak try at least a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't dose the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail the depending organs of necessity fail. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all druggists.

STATEMENTS ARE MISLEADING

Thief River Papers Perform Remarkable Mathemtical Stunts.

Say Commissioners Are Going to Give Somebody $14000.

The Thief River Falls papers attempted to make a big noise about the action of the county commissioners in voting bonds for the erection of a new court house in Red Lake Falls.

They ask, and the question is printed in nice big type so everybody will read it, if three commissioners shall rule? Sure. You wouldnt expect a minority to rule, would you?

Our newspaper friends made some statements that are so misleading that we cannot believe that they intended to make them. No doubt some of the zealous members of the county seat committee worked them, imposed upon them. They said that the bonds are to bear 6 per cent interest and that the county is to lose $14,000 because 4 or 4½ per cent bonds could be sold.

The maximum rate of interest that the bonds may bear is 6 per cent. Maximum rate of interest—maximum! Do you know what that means?

It is suggested that our Thief River friends bring down some of their money and buy bonds bearing 4 per cent interest. You can get 'em unless somebody bids lower. That's what maximum means. And it would be a more profitable investment than to spend your money in a campaign for county divisions.

LIZOTTE-POULIOT.

Popular Young People Married Tuesday Morning.

Miss Vina Esther Lizotte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennie Lizotte of this city, and Mr. Pierre Fredrick Pouliot, son of Mrs. Nicholas Pouliot, were married at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, May 11. The wedding occurred at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating. It was a quiet wedding, only relatives of the bride and groom being present.

Mr. Pouliot is one of Red Lake Falls' enterprising young business men and his busness associates and the many friends of the young people are glad of the opportunity to offer congratulaions and best wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Pouliot left Tuesday evening for Minneapolis and they will go from that city to other palces on a wedding trip lasting two or three weeks. They will return to Red Lake Falls some time next month and after July 5th will be at home to their frends at the Lizotte cottage on south Main street.

WANT TWO COUNTIES; DESPERATE MOVE

Thief River Falls People Are Now Willing to Divide.

The Last Move in a Losing Fight—Have Filed Petition.

The latest move of the Thief River Falls county seat committee is to circulate a petition asking for a special election to vote on the proposition to divide Red Lake county. The petition, it is reported, has already been filed with the secretary of state and it is not improbable that a special election will be called. It is easy to get an election. But the votes of the people of the county—there's the rub.

Will a majority of the people of the county cast their votes for a proposition that would, if approved, mean that they are to bear the expense of maintaining two county organizations?

Do the people of the county want to pay for the erection of two court houses, two county jails? Do they want to pay salari es to two sets of county officals?

O, what's the use of asking any more questions? We'd like to ask something hard.

This looks like the last desperate move of the people up the line.

If the people of Thief River Falls could have their way they would divide the county on a line that would split up the territory of six townships. For the present county they would leave all of Polk Centre and the south two-thirds of Black River, River Falls, Wyandotte, Mayfield, Deer Park and Hickory and territory south of those towns. The smaller fractions of the townships named, including the village of St. Hilaire, and the territory north would go to the new county.

"CITY FATHER" TERM THAT IS TAKING ON NEW MEANING

Part of Duty of Aldermen and Councilmen to Provide Playgrounds for Children.

City Father is a term that is taking on a new meaning since the councilmen and aldermen of various cities are now charged with the responsibility of taking care of the pleasure of the children.

A progressing world, often called cruel, is in reality getting kinder.

The municipal body no longer contents itself with the dull routine that once marked its work. It is more with an eye to the humanitarian side that it looks to things now. The future of the city is in the hands of its children. To educate them is not enough. Healthy minds are only of value when housed in healthy bodies.

How to get these?

The answer is not far to seek. American municipalities are giving their answer:

Playgrounds.

Providing places for the youngsters to play and develop their young lungs by exercise is really becoming one of the big items in the budget of a city. Chicago, for instance, has spent $11,000,000 on a system of playgrounds and recreation centers, containing outdoor and indoor gymnasiums, swimming pools, wading pools, shower baths, swings, slides, ball fields and rooms for lectures and social meetings. New standards have been set up in neighborhoods that knew them not, and the benefit is accounted so great that the cost of $2 per $1,000 assessed valuation of the property benefited is regarded as an ideal investment of the city's income.

But Chicago has no monopoly of this worthy tendency.

Chicago the Foremost.

An examination of the records shows that 170 cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants have organized playgrounds and are expending every month on their acquirement the enormous sum of $1,000,000.

Boys Exercising on High Bar and Trapeze in a Public Playground in New York.

Last year Chicago, which deserves every credit for being one of the foremost in the national movement to conserve the life of the young, used $180,000 merely for the maintenance of her playgrounds and opened five new ones in addition.

On the very heels of her disaster, while the needs for economy was great, and while every dollar of expenditure was being carefully watched, San Francisco appropriated $1,000,000 for establishing playgrounds, determined that the rebuilt city should have proper facilities for the healthful life of childhood.

Cleveland had nine playgrounds last summer, and thinks so well of the results attained that next year it will have twenty-nine.

Detroit, always enterprising and quick to grasp the advantages of a modern movement, has fallen quickly into line. There were nine playgrounds there last summer, but this year's advent of warm weather will be marked by greater activity in the interest of the little ones, for the mayor has found between sixty and seventy real estate owners who are only too willing to turn over their vacant lots for the pleasure of the little ones.

Berkeley, Cal., has issued bonds for $450,000 for playgrounds, and Portland, Or., has employed one of the most celebrated landscape architects in the country to transform a great tract of land into the most wonderful of playgrounds and athletic fields.

Europe Also Takes It Up.

The same movement has already been marked in Europe, and it will in its final development have the effect of doing away with the wretched tenement life of the big cities that stifled the health, the youthfulness, them old before they reached their teens, cramped their lungs and killed their future hopes.

If Friedrich Wilhelm August Froebel could come back now, and see the new care that is given to children by men who are following the system that he first presented to the world, the great German would feel that he had not lived in vain.

Kids of All Ages at Play in a Chicago Playground.

Froebel, who was the first to see that the system of educating children was faulty in that it lacked proper consideration for the production of a healthy body, was a peasant, the humble pastor of a Thuringian church.

He wanted to be a teacher, but he was made an apprentice to a forester. He never made a sensation in his special line of work, but it gave him a chance to think, and he had still more opportunities for reflection when he enlisted and spent long hours doing sentry duty against Napoleon.

Then he reflected and worked out his plan of education. It was a theory that gained him little credit then, but this neglect has been undone by his followers, and the German who died in 1852 is now acclaimed as one of the great benefactors of all time for having given the world what is known as the kindergarten system of education.

Froebel's Idea Growing.

Full and harmonious training of children, taking them young, learning their native mental and physical strength and weakness, suporting them where needed, and through it all with gentleness and patience for those who developed slowly, this was the idea of the German, and it is a growing influence.

Cities have long provided the schools, now they are taking care of the playgrounds also, recognizing that the two elements, play and work, must be properly proportioned to get the right start for a child.

Until Froebel sounded his note the very life of children meant nothing to the authorities. Cities were congested, there was no place for play, no opportunity for child life to expand along happy lines.

But the lesson of Froebel has had its effect; and now the councilman has become a sort of fairy godfather to the young constituent, for he provides him the place to play.

Scotland has a right to be everlastingly proud of the fact that it was the first country of the world to take up the matter of free school and municipal playgrounds. Berlin and Hamburg were next on the proud roll of honor.

The United States was a little slow. In fact, the issue did not arise here as quickly for the congestion of cities in the new world is really only a comparatively late development.

But when the time came the action was prompt and impressive, and now the son of Uncle Sam has nothing to be ashamed of in the way the municipalities of his country have cared for him.

New York's Big Work.

New York went to the remarkable length of laying $1,800,000 for one park in its crowded East Side Ghetto, and has set aside $300,000 a year, not for maintenance, but to purchase new parks, in addition to those already owned, and said to have a value in excess of $16,000,000.

Philadelphia has an excellent system of public playgrounds, which is put into execution during the summer months.

The school yards of the city are thrown open to the youngsters of the neighborhoods, swings, slides, games and all sorts of entertainment is provided for the little ones, and there are teachers and caretakers on hand to see that the fun proceeds along proper lines.

There is even some slight attempt made at instruction, though nothing onerous is imposed upon the little brains. The teacher reads stories that divert and instruct at the same time. The system has been found to be of such benefit that it will be extended along large lines.

Wellington said of the great battle of Waterloo, which changed the map of Europe, and ended the domination of Napoleon that it was won on the cricket fields of Eton. The future propriety and progress of the great republic is now being assured on the municipal playgrounds of the country.

Kitchen Diplomacy.

Mistress—For heaven's sake, hurry up the dinner, Mary. Mr. Smith is so hungry he will get angry.

Cook—Well, that's just why I'm slow today. This chicken is so tough that if he isn't hungry and angry he won't eat it.

O'Flannigan's Sorrow.

O'Flannigan came home one night with a deep band of black crape around his hat.

"Why, Mike," exclaimed his wife, "what are you wearing that mournful thing for?"

"I'm wearing it for your first husband," replied Mike firmly; "I'm sorry he's dead."

If the man who has nothing to say would only say it he would soon acquire a reputation for wisdom.

Playfully Speaking.

Mrs. Wabash—She's had six weddings in her life.

Mrs. Dearborn — What! Been a bride six times?

"Yes; what do you think of that?"

"I think you might call her a well groomed woman."

A MAORI HUT

Only a short time separates the Maori race from oblivion. When the first white men went into New Zealand they found there one of the most superb of primitive races. Physically giants, blessed with limitless courage, craft and daring, good farmers, expert fishermen, and having naturally good brains. There were several hundred thousand of them, hardy and flourishing. Now only some 47,000 survive, and most of these are physical wrecks. The diseases of the white man, fever and quick consumption, have levied a terrible toll, wars which resulted from the white man's invasion wiped out a large proportion of the hardy, robust men of the country, and the children of today are descendants of the weaker kind who stayed at home.

Naming a Kansas River.

Practically all the streams in Kansas were named by Indians and carry those names to this day, though in an Anglicized form.

The Neosho, the largest stream in southeast Kansas, has its own little story. The Osage Indians at one time lived in Missouri, and when they began talking of trading their lands in that state and moving to southern Kansas a party was sent out to look the country over and make a report on it. It was in the summer time and very hot and dry. Coming over the prairie northeast of Humbolt they had a long way to travel without water.

"When they arrived at the river," says A. T. Dickerman of Oswego, "an Indian rode down to the sloping bank into the water. But to his surprise the horse stepped right off into deep water and the horse and Indian went in all over. As the aborigine clambered back on the bank he muttered, 'Wugh Neosho.' This in plain English means water pocket, or water hole, and the name clung to the stream afterward."

Nothing Extraordinary.

Johnnie Payne tells of an American tourist hailing from the West who was out sightseeing in London. They took him aboard the old battleship Victory, which was Lord Nelson's flagship in several of his most famous naval triumphs. An English sailor escorted the American over the vessel, and coming to a raised brass tablet on the deck he said as he reverently removed his hat:

"'Ere, sir, is the spot where Lord Nelson fell."

"Oh, is it?" replied the American blankly. "Well, that ain't nothin'. I nearly tripped on the blame thing myself."

The Well-groomed Chauffeur.

May not the day be at last in sight when all who have to take fares from the public should fearlessly take to uniforms of the chauffeuresque type, and so deliver us from that tyranny of seediness and dirt which has for long been considered a symbol of the proud Englishman's refusal to be marshalled, uniformed, clothes and kept clean by any one but himself.

Queen of Italy Upon Whom King Edward Recently Conferred Order of Royal Red Cross.

A School Boy on Domestic Economy.

My idea of a good income and how to spend it is to get forty-four shillings a week from every male in the house if he was working, and in spending it I should get a book and put all the provisions I had in the house in it and the cost of them. I should first see that I and our family would get their stomachs full every meal time, so I should buy meat that would last.

Every holiday time we should go for a day or two to a seaside resort. For a family of good eaters it takes a lot of bread, especially if you do not bake, and shop bread takes a lot of butter. But they should have it. I would also buy plenty of coal, with good shoes and stockings; also I would buy two beds to sleep on at night.

Widow Suicide in China.

Old customs die very hard in China, and in several parts of the Celestial Empire it is still considered a high act of virtue for a woman to publicly commit suicide after the death of her husband. According to the law the proceeding is actually legal in some provinces, and such is the state of public opinion that in districts where it is officially prohibited the authorities rarely interfere.

"Does this contributor write in lighter vein?"

"No," said the editor, "only in vain."

A Ready-Made Verdict.

Fargo, N. D., once boasted a composite postmaster and coroner. He was called one day to give his verdict upon the case of a stranger who had been the victim of a fit on the main street. As the man was known to nobody, he was hurried to the much-prized new "City hospital." There the case was diagnosed as appendicitis, but when the operation took place the attending surgeon discovered that the patient had been previously relieved of his appendix. The doctor endeavored to retract his steps, but the strange man died from the effects of the operation.

The postmaster-coroner, in rendering his verdict, filled in the space after "Cause of Death" with a rubber stamp which read, "Opened by Mistake."

"Doomed Hansoms."

Few things connected with the rise of automobilism have been more pleasing than the all-around smartening up of coachmen and cabmen, who formerly had no soul above a horse, by placing them in charge of mechanical vehicles, which call for the exercise of higher skill in management and driving alike.

Hardly.

"No doubt there will be strenuous times in the composing room when Roosevelt settles down to his editorial job."

"No doubt. Still, I hardly think he will be able to 'pie' type by merely looking at it."

Eternal Fitness.

"I think a man of war would have been more fitting."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

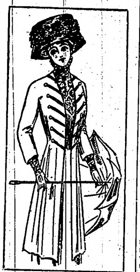
IN VOGUE

FOR SUMMER WEAR

SIMPLE LIGHT WEIGHT PRINCESS COSTUME.

In Linen, Pongee or Wool—Diagonal Straps the Chief Form of Linen—Sleeves of the Easy Fitting Kind.

For a linen, pongee or light weight woolen costume a charming model is shown. The gown is a princess with skirt of round length and perfectly plain save for the deep V-shaped guimp of sheer linen braided with soutache in an open scroll pattern. The sleeves are also of the sheer linen braided and are long, extending over the hand in a pointed mousquetaire effect.



Linen Coat Suit.

The coat of this costume is trimmed with diagonal straps of linen set on down the fronts so as to make a series of points where the coat fronts meet. These linen straps or bands are braided with soutache, which is set on diagonally. At the end of each strap there is a fairly large linen covered button.

The trimming does not extend below the waist line, although the coat is quite long. It will be noticed that in front this costume has the normal waist line, although at the sides it is short waisted. The line then slopes up until at the back the coat is quite short-waisted.

Perfectly flat at the top, the sleeves of this coat are of the easy fitting kind, but still adhere closely to the lines of the arm. They are quite short, showing a considerable portion of the sleeve of the gown extending beyond them.

SUN'S GOOD EFFECT ON HAIR

Points Worth Remembering for Those Desirous of Soft and Luxuriant Tresses.

Unless special precautions are taken hair is as apt to fall badly in spring as in autumn. The scalp feels the overheating of winter headgear and the general system being run down also affects it badly.

Try the effect of ventilation and sunning. If possible let the hair down and sit in a sunny window for half an hour, at least, each day. If the windows can be opened all the better. Frequently run the fingers through the hair and lift it out to its full length to let the air circulate freely through it.

If you have grown careless about massaging, begin systematic movements for a month or six weeks. One well-known hair specialist declares that better results are to be had by rubbing the head periodically for a month or six weeks at a time and then stopping for several weeks.

An excellent movement to loosen the scalp and make it flexible, also tone up the blood vessels, is to clasp the hands flatly on the top of the head and move them back and forth on the scalp in a line parallel with the shoulders.

BEAUTIFUL THINGS IN CHINA.

One of the Prettiest Is an Idea That Comes to Us Direct from Holland.

The woman does not exist who has not at one time or another been interested in beautiful or unique china.

The home-maker collects it until it amounts to a fad. The bachelor girl of to-day is never without her tea things. She either has them ready for use on a table or if she is more careful they are kept in a cabinet or closet with a near-by table ready to spread at a moment's notice. There is a dainty delft china service on the market, bringing with it a custom from Holland. It is a hot-milk set in blue and white, and the three pieces stand on a small delft waiter. There is a straight, tall pitcher, the shape of our chocolate pot, and two tall cups with handles much the shape of our glass tumblers for iced tea. The outfit seems to necessitate the little Dutch maid with her quaint white bonnet and clompen.

The invalid has not been forgotten—and let us hope she never may be; for her bedside table there is a china waiter made just large enough to hold the pitcher, the candlestick and the match box. They are all the same kind of dainty colored china, and so necessary, yet so easy to forget. They seem almost to have been suggested by one who had been frequently forgotten in these small essentials. This waiter and its contents would be a welcome addition to the ordinary guest room.

Imitation Linen.

One of the new pieces of dress goods is of cotton suiting that imitates linen so exactly that only by feeling it can the difference be told. It has the advantage of not creasing or wrinkling as linen does, and it washes well.

Cravenette Capes.

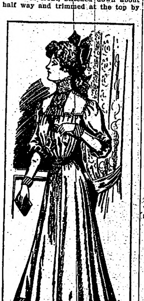
Cravenette capes are being shown for young girls. They are made very plain with four buttons down the front and a hood lined with a contrasting color.

Many of the new toques will be made of soft liberty satin to match shoes, parasol, etc. The satin will be shirred.

BEFITS THE GRACE OF YOUTH

Useful Dress Designed for Girl Between the Ages of Fourteen and Sixteen.

A useful dress like this might be made in cashmere, serge or fine cloth. The skirt has a wide box-plait down center of front, stitched down about half way and trimmed at the top by buttons. A strap of striped silk is sewn round the foot; it also forms the waistband, revers and cuffs; the material yoke is scalloped at the edge, with a button sewn in the middle. A plain silk scarf is loosely knotted below the revers. Piece lace is used for the little yoke and collar.



TO BEAUTIFY THE EYEBROWS.

Should Be Brushed Often, Though This Feature of the Toilet Is Too Often Neglected.

Though the average woman rarely brushes her eyebrows, or gives them any attention beyond washing and wiping, when cleansing the face, most of them expect the lines above the eyes to be as shapely and glossy in texture as if daily care was administered.

To beautify the eyebrows, brush them often, drawing the brush always in the direction in which the hair grows. This means a straight line just beyond the center of the eye, and then a downward droop, like a bird's wing. The perfectly-shaped brow is indeed quite like a swallow's wing, the line long and sweeping, the hair short and thick without being coarse.

Every night the eyebrows should be massaged, never drawing the fingers in a direction opposite to that in which the hair grows. Stroking them is done with the finger tips, the motion being strong, to induce quickened circulation, but not to wear off the hair. If a tonic is required a few drops of oil of cajeput may be rubbed in during the massage.

Red vaseline is another excellent tonic, and one ounce, combined with one-half a dram of tincture of cantharides and seven drops each of oils of lavender and rosewater, is one of the best that can be used. It should be put on at night, but a little may be rubbed over in the morning before going out. Any great quantity at that time, however, will give a greasy and unpleasant appearance.

When one remembers that the effect of excessive use of water on hair is drying, it will be readily understood that the brows are constantly being exhausted of their natural, nourishing oils, and it is for this reason that emollients must be applied. A mixture of ten grains of red vaseline to ten centigrams of boric acid is a simple tonic that can be put on at any time.

The brush required to bring about best results is shaped not unlike that for the teeth, but the bristles must be fine and soft.

TRIFLES OF THE WARDROBE

COLORS IN FAVOR

EUROPEAN IDEA FOR HANDKERCHIEFS ACCEPTED.

All Shades, Simple and Pronounced, Are in Vogue—Maderia Embroidery in White Admired Because of Its Simplicity.

There is a perfect craze for colored handkerchiefs in Paris, and America has accepted it. They are seen in myrtle green, in purples from catawba to a delicate violet, and in all shades of old rose.

The colors are used and blended in many ways, such as the plain handkerchiefs in blues, pink and green, finished with a white hem and ornamented with white embroidery. Then there are the white handkerchiefs ornamented with colored bars. Some have small colored hemstitching with small colored designs, others have wide colored borders and colored designs.

The handkerchiefs are smaller than they have been for several seasons. There are the small glove handkerchiefs designed for the glove or coat pocket, and the larger ones for dressier use. Offered in the two sizes are the white ones finished with a fine border in delicate pink, blue, green, etc., and the colored ones in the same shades, finished with a white border.

More elaborate are the colored ones trimmed with white hemstitched borders with a shamrock bow knot, fleur de lis, or butterfly appliqued in white. Though these are exquisitely dainty of design they are had as low as 50 cents.

Another pretty pattern is made of white linen finished in colored hemstitching, while others are hemstitched and hand embroidered in the same color.

Some have the wreath or spray of flowers only in one corner, while in others it is worked all around. The cost depends on the quantity of hand embroidery, ranging from $1.25 up.

Less expensive are the shamrock linen ones ornamented with colored bars and dots and small floral designs, offered in all the popular shades.

Although colors are all fashionable, white handkerchiefs still are used for most dressy occasions, and the assortment is large and attractive. Most fashionable are the white linen with the madeira embroidery, admired because of their simplicity. Some have the embroidery worked all around, while others have only the eyelet edge and the embroidery in one corner. These range from 75 cents to $2.50, according to the size and the amount of hand work used.

Less new but nevertheless popular are the white linen with swiss ones hand embroidered and hemstitched. Some of these patterns are small, such as a small wreath, while others are worked in a half dozen stitches in the finest of hand made linen.

Lace on handkerchiefs is far less popular than on many other things. An exception is the fine, simple American lace used to trim some of the finest ones.

DO WORK ON FINE MATERIAL

How Even Buttonholing May Be Achieved by the Amateur Dressmaker.

Buttonholes usually represent difficulties in amateur dressmaking, which are almost insurmountable where fine materials are concerned. If amateur talent is strained in securing even buttonholing in the case of heavy tweed or coarse flannel, the softness and transparency of fine lawn or chiffon renders the finishing of empiecements and vests, where buttons are used as a means of fastening, a matter requiring much more time and patience.

Should the material be apt to cockle and fray at the edges, the experiment should be tried of making a paste with a little flour and water and dabbing this on to the reverse side of the lawn or muslin. When the paste is dry, the surface will be found to be sufficiently firm to render both the cutting of the slit and the subsequent buttonholing a comparatively easy matter.

The Puritan Collar.

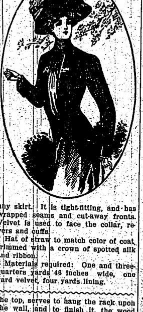
The Puritan collar, so much in evidence during the summer, is still holding its own. Perhaps no prettier form of it has been seen than the Irish lace ones.

There are also many who appear on the street with them on the coldest winter day. While their hands are in the depths of enormous muffs their throats are left entirely exposed. Putting aside the question of health, this habit is quite out of place, for no one can be comfortable under such conditions, and the old adage should be remembered, that anything that is not comfortable is not in good taste.

FOR WEAR WITH ANY SKIRT.

Smart Jacket That Can be Made Available in Many Kinds of Material.

This smart jacket might be made in material to match the skirt, or just as a useful slip-on jacket to wear with any skirt. It is tight-fitting, and has wrapped seams and cut-away fronts. Velvet is used to face the collar, revers and cuffs.



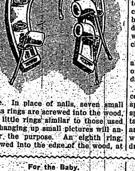
Hat of straw to match color of coat, trimmed with a crown of spotted silk and ribbon.

Materials required: One and three-quarters yards 46 inches wide, one yard velvet, four yards lining.

NOVEL IDEA FOR PIPE RACK

Cut in Shape of Horseshoe and Fashioned to Resemble the Real Article.

Our sketch represents a pipe rack in somewhat novel form, made in wood about half an inch in thickness, and cut out in the shape of a horseshoe. In place of nails, seven small brass rings are screwed into the wood, and little rings similar to those used for hanging up small pictures will answer the purpose. An eighth ring, screwed into the edge of the wood, at the top, serves to hang the rack upon the wall, and to finish it, the wood may be either painted or stained.



A rack on the same lines can be made by using a piece of very stout cardboard, cut out in the shape of a shoe, for the foundation, and then covered with art linen and edged all round with cord. Small key rings can be sewn on in the place of the brass rings, and will quite well serve to hold the pipes in their places, while the shoe can be suspended from the wall by a ring of the same kind sewn on at the top.

For Moist Hands.

A good cure for that trying ailment, hands that are clammy or perspire, is to keep on your dressing table a small cheesecloth bag filled with one part borax and three parts starch. This if dusted over the palms of the hands when they feel sticky will quickly check the moisture.

Another help is to keep a bottle of alcohol in a convenient place and wipe off the hands wiht it several times a day.

An excellent but somewhat more complicated lotion is to mix 12 tablespoonfuls of rose water, four tablespoonfuls of elderflower water, one tablespoonful of tincture of benzoin and ten grains of tannic acid. Rub well with this liquid, and later dust with a drying powder.

For the Baby.

Every baby arrives at the age when it can pull itself up in its crib, and then begins the mother's anxiety. Even provided the crib is of such a height at the ends and sides that the baby cannot fall out, there is the probability of its jumping up and down and bumping its little face against the side rod of the crib. There may be had a very attractive light blue or pink quilted satin to cut into four pieces for the sides and ends of the crib. They should be bound and tied to the crib with satin ribbons to match, two inches wide.

When cutting allow sufficient length to roll the quilted satin over the top rod, and when tying it on fasten it to the upright metal rods of the crib with the bows on the outside.

The binding will be a more perfect job if it is stitched on the one side by machine and hemmed over on to the other side by hand.

The New Sailor.

The new sailor has a low, broad crown with a wide brim a little wider at one side than the other, the sides curling up very slightly.

The Cotton Nets.

Coarse cotton nets that showed signs of popularity last season are largely in evidence again. They will be made up with silk and quite a new note is promised in odd, little coats, boleros or regulation wraps to be worn with them. As the nets come in all colors, and if not, are easily dyed any desired shade or tint, they bid fair to be interesting. Some of the nets have long-stitch embroidery designs, and others are printed in bold patterns, always in pastel shades. The silk wraps and coatees, it must not be inferred, will be confined to wear with these nets, for they are bound to play an important part with almost all of the better class of warm weather materials, and already are in the shops semi-made and ready-to-war.

A French Yoke.

A recent French yoke, planned to eliminate the lower collar line, was so cut that collar and yoke were one piece of firm tulle with tiny hand tucks set in perpendicularly around the collar and radiating from there down into the yoke, where they gradually slipped out into the plain material.

PAINT EVERY YEAR.

No One Wants to Do It, But Some Paint Will Wear No Longer.

When you have a job of painting done you don't expect to have it done over again very soon. But to make a lasting job, several things must be taken into consideration—the proper time to paint—the condition of the surface—the kind of materials to use, etc. All these matters are fully covered in the specifications which can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit also includes a book of color schemes for both interior and exterior painting, and a simple instrument for detecting adulteration in the paint materials. The outfit will solve many painting problems for every houseowner.

Meantime while buying paint see that every white lead keg bears the famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark, which is an absolute guarantee of purity and quality. If your paint dealer cannot supply you National Lead Company will see that some one else will.

A lot of people have discovered that it is easier to borrow money than to pay it back.

Senators can see no reason or need for an income tax when it is so much easier to tax the poor man's necessities.

The Browns Valley Tribune thinks that the only sure way to get a reputation as a "reform" newspaper is to adopt the double-column editorial.

In attempting to prevent the erection of a court house, the Thief River people may find it necessary to reconvene D. P. O'Niell and the state legislature.

The editor of Westbrook Sentinel is in trouble knee deep. A couple of young people, Newton Lord and Jennie Helper, got married, and the editor used the hyphenated heading, Lord-Helper, in his write-up of the event.

Editor E. E. McCrea of the Alexandria Post News is to be census supervisor of the sixth district at $1,500 per and then some. He is a popular newspaper man and a capable fellow. It is said, too, that he doesn't owe the appointment to the kindly offic of Senator Nelson.

The St. Paul Dispatch says: "Every thing points to the undeniable fact that A. O. Eberhart has the gubernatorial bee badly and no one would be surprised at the announcement of his candidacy almost any time. Close friends say his appeal to the voters is even now in the making.

A Cincinnati judge has denied a divorce to the wife of a truck gardener and held that her husband was within his rights and that a wife, where necessary, should aid in making a living. If the news reports correctly and fully state the facts in the matter, it is not difficult to guess what the reply of most women would be if this judge should "pop the question."

The record in the suit of the government against the Standdard Oil company is being printed at the government printing office in Washington. It will fill 21 volumes of 500 pages each and the cost of the printing will be about $25,000. If there is not enough evidence somewhere among those 10,050 pages to convict the Standard, it deserves to be left alone forever after the conclusion of this suit.

In commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers and the founding of New England, it is proposed that a world's exposition shall be held in Boston in 1920. Says the Boston Herald: "New England alone of all parts of the Union, has never had its world's fair." After 1920 Boston will know what a blessing New England has enjoyed unawares.

Richard Grant White once said that a radical reform in English spelling is, first, unnecessary; second, undesirable, and third, impossible, thus recalling the story of the old Scottish preacher, who, upon meeting one of his hearers after the services, inquired how he liked the sermon, "I dinna like it," he said, "for three rizzens—first, ye read it, second, ye dinna read weel, and, third, it wasna worth readin'."

The time is here when the knock of the assessor can be expected, says the Glencoe Enterprise. When making a statement of property let it be true. Do not shirk your duty with the willful intention of withholding a few cents from the legitimate tax that should be paid. Nothing is more unpatriotic than to enjoy the advantages and protection of civil government, yet to shrink from paying a just share for its maintenance.

Senator Nelson's bill prohibiting the printing by the government of the names of firms and individuals on stamped envelopes will have the approval of every printer in the country, says the Alexandria Post News. The passage of this bill will confine the printing on stamped envelopes to a mere return card, left blank as to name and address. Just why the government should have undertaken to do more than this the printer of today has been unable to determine. It has furnished unfair competition in a legitimate line of trade and has been conducted at a loss to the government. Should this measure fail of passage the government should then, in fairness to all, demand a fair return for its work. Those who prefer to do business with the government's print shop should be willing to bear the expense and not shift it upon the public.

Herbert J. Miller, for thirty years editor of the Luverne Herald, died last Saturday after a long illness from locomotor ataxia. Mr. Miller was one of the ablest editorial writers of the state, and his newspaper has long been considered an exemplar of country journalism. In a sense, he was an editor of the old schoool, but he kept in touch with the trend of events, and he spoke with the voice of an Oracle. He was prominent in politics, having been for eight years a member of the state senate. His ambition was to go to congress, but he "lost out" in the memorable primary campaign against McCleary in 1906.

The local banks usually reflect business conditons as faithfully as a barometer registers the condition of the weather, and Red Lake Falls may be justly proud of the showing made by the two banks of this city. The First State shows total resources of $250,000, the highest point ever reached in Red Lake county, while the Merchants State has a total of $204,000. Combined the banks exhibit almost a half million of banking resources, and almost $400,000 in deposits. This is nearly equal to the bank showing of Thief River Falls—professing to be more than double the population of this city. There are no indications of business depression hereabouts.

Referring to the deposed sultan the Hebrew Standard calls Abdul Hamid "one of the most clever and diplomatic of the crowned heads of Europe. Such a man as the ex-sultan has shown himself to be in the last situation must command our unbounded admiration, and we can never forget that when Christian rulers ruthlessly banished their Jewish citizens from the land of their birth the Ottoman government gave them shelter and protection. Commenting on this article a correspondent says: "And now, in his day of sorrow when there are none to do him homage, the monarch that was is sheltered at Saonika in a house owned by a Jew."

The repulican corporationist and the democratic corporationist are tarred with the same stick, and they vote together when the interests of the corporations are involved. The Nation shows this anamolous condition in the debates on the Aldrich bill, saying:

"Every time a democratic senator is caught with protectionist principles on his person, there is great hilarity in republican ranks. But the country at large fails to catch the full force of the joke. Senator Aldrich and his lieutenants take delight in 'smoking out' the democrats, as if the sole duty of a legislator were to show that his opponent is no less a fool or a rascal than himself. It is not democratic opposition that has forced tariff reform upon the republican party, but a popular upheaval that was strong enough to make the republicans write revision into their last national platform, and their presidential candidate pledge himself solemnly. From the democratic party the country has long ceased to expect either efficiency or common sense. If Senator Aldrich shows the democrats to be protectionists at heart, he merely proves that the republican party has infected its rival with a lust for tariff plunder equal to its own."

"THE DICKENS TO PAY."

The Pioneer Press is making strong opposition to the Aldrich plan of revising the tariff upwards. It reads the republican party a lecture on the futility of delaying the general desire for a thorough and proper revision. Here is a specimen utterance:

"It is time for congress to wake up to the facts. Either the consumers of this country are going to get what they demand, genuine revision downward, with raw materials on the free list, and without any administrative jokes, or any 20-per-cent-maximum trickery, or there is going to be the dickens to pay two years and four years hense in the republican party. Failure to comply with the demands of the rank and file will split the party wide open.

"These are not threats. They are a plain statement of popular feeling as expressed in this state by individuals and as revealed in the columns of the press of the country from one end to the other."

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Virginia Enterprise: "A mint," says the wise man, "can make money without advertising, but nobody else can."

Albert Lea Tribune: Everyone who would not have to pay an income tax wants it. Those who would have to pay are against it. The yeas seem to have it.

Walker Pilot: The democratic leaders are beginning to yawn every time the name of Bryan is sprung. But mention Johnson to them and they are wide awake.

Lake Crystal Union: Robert C. Dunn of the Princeton Union is loud in praise of Governor Johnson. This is certainly magnanimous on the part of Mr. Dunn. It takes courage for one to forgive his political enemy as well as for one to do some heroic act.

Breckenridge Telegram: Senator Nelson is doing valitant service in the United States senate in attacking the upward tariff revision as engineered by Aldrich and the other ulta protectionists. The senator has his ear to the ground and can hear the rumble of the approaching storm which others seem to ignore. They may wake up when it is too late.

Fairmont Sentinel: There is a high tariff on wheat which was put into the Dingley bill to make the farmers believe they were getting something out of the tariff graft but it has never been of any benefit to them, as the natural price of the grain is governed by prices in Liverpool, but has on many occasions been a great aid to the wheat gamblers in getting a corner on wheat at a time when there was practically none of the grain in the farmers' hands. They can force up the price and reap the gamblers' profit without fear of foreign wheat breaking their corner. There are comparatively few Minnesota farmers who have not paid out more by reason of the inflated price of flour exacted by the recent Patton wheat corner than they have ever received in benefits as a result of there being a tariff on wheat.

Hutchinson Leader: The Northfield News in a long and labored editorial maintains that Governor Johnson stultified himself and played politics in vetoing the tonnage tax bill. The governor during the campaign expressly stated he would not cripple the revenues of the towns on the ranges, which this bill promised to do. Then why was he not consistent when he vetoed the bill? As to playing politics, whatever his action there would have been some who would have laid the charge at his door. But among fair-minded men who were strongly in favor of the bill we judge from interviews in the state press there is almost universal agreement that the governor gave ample reasons for his veto and he is commended for it by leading members of all political parties. The governor has for a good many years been doing what he thought was right without regard to consequences and that kind of "playing politics" seems to suit the people of Minnesota very well.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with Cannot Doubt His Honesty.

Albert Lea Standard: Governor Johnson is absolutely indifferent as to the political effect of his vetoe of the tonnage bill and his action upon other legislative measures. He said to every friend who advised with him that he would do what he deemed to be right, what his conscience and judgment alone would approve, regardless of his past opinions or expressions on any measure, regardless of consequence to him or his party, and no argument or influence seemed to swerve or change him from his determination. It is evident to all that confer with him that he is utterly devoid of personal political ambition. He shrinks from the suggestion of further political preferment, from every urgent argument that he should again be a candidate for for any office, and that he is honest in this none that know him well and is fairminded can in the least doubt. The average politician or prejudiced partisan cannot understand and some discredit this, but it is nevertheless absolutely true.

The Local Creamery.

Dassel Anchor: The local creamery has been the means of building up this country faster than any other agency since the advent of railroads. It is therefore a wise plan for a creamery patron to make haste slowly when the other fellows come after their cream with alluring offers of higher prices, convenience etc. If the creamery is not paying the price it should, the remedy is not in forsaking the creamery, but every patron should seek to co-operate with the managers and buttermakers in finding the remedy and adjusting matters so all will be satisfied. By taking your cream elsewhere it cripples your local creamery just that much. After it has been put out of business, then is when the centralizers and other agencies have a laugh coming and down goes the price. The farmer will have to take what he can get for his product. With the creamery the farmer can run his own business. With the centralizers the other fellow is running the farmer. Take the milk to the local creamery is our advice.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

Every case of Rheumatism has its origin and its development in the blood. It is not a disease which is contracted like a cold, but it is in the blood and system before a pain is felt, and the changes in the weather or any physical irregularities, such as a spell of indigestion, bowel disturbance, etc., are merely the exciting causes producing the pains and aches, which are the natural symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid and other corrosive, irritating poisons in the blood, which are carried through the circulation to every part of the system. Every muscle, nerve, membrane, tissue and joint becomes saturated with these acrid, irritating impurities, or coated with fine, insoluble caustic matter, and the sharp, piercing pains or the dull, constant aches are felt with every physical movement. When the blood is filled with uric acid poison, permanent relief cannot be expected from liniments, plasters, or other external treatment. Such measures give temporary relief, but in order to conquer Rheumatism and bring about a complete cure, the uric acid and other inflammatory matter must be expelled, and this cannot be done with external treatment. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism because it is a perfect and entirely vegetable blood purifier. It goes down into the circulation, neutralizes the acids, and dissolves the irritating deposits which are pressing on the sensitive nerves and tissues and producing pain, enriches the weak, sour blood, and removes every atom of impurity from the circulation. So instead of being a weak, sour stream, distributing uric acid to the different parts of the system, the blood is strong and healthy and therefore able to supply every muscle, nerve, bone and tissue with nourishment and strength. Then the inflammation and swelling subside, the pains and aches cease, and not only is Rheumatism permanently cured, but under the fine tonic effects of S. S. S. the entire general health is benefitted and built up. In all forms of Rheumatism, whether acute or chronic, S. S. S. will be found a safe and reliable treatment. Special book on Rheumatism and any medical advice you desire will be furnished free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Sometime ago, I had Rheumatism and had to quit work. The pain in my back and between my shoulders was so intense I could not rest or sleep. I tried everything, but nothing did me any good till I heard of and took S. S. S. This medicine cured me sound and well. It purified my blood and made me feel like a new man.
CONRAD LOHR,

I was severely troubled with Rheumatism. I had it in my knees, legs and ankles, and any one who has ever had Rheumatism knows how excruciating the pain is and how it interferes with one at work. I was truly in bad shape—having been bothered with it for ten years, off and on. A local physician advised me to use S. S. S. I did so. After taking two bottles I noticed the soreness and pain were greatly reduced. I continued the medicine and was thoroughly cured; all pain, soreness and inflammation gone. I recommend S. S. S. to all Rheumatic sufferers.

PLUMMER

From the Pioneer.

Brede Bredeson went to Crookston Tuesday and on the following day made final proof on his fine farm. He was accompanied by Herman Jarr and Knudt Skalet, who acted as witnesses.

John Kotschevar, or as he is better known, "Sunnybrook John," came in Friday from his farm near Red Lake Falls and spent the day with old acquaintances. He has almost entirely recovered from the accident he sustained last winter.

Oscar Lillo, one of the posperous farmers of Lillo, was in Plummer on Monday, getting supplies for his new ditching machine. The Lillo brothers have taken a contract for construcing a four-mile ditch in the town of Equality emptying into the Clearwater river. The boys will use a machine of their own construction and will no doubt be successful with the work.

THIEF RIVER FALLS

From the News and Press.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff James Bulman and wife left yesterday for Prince Albert, Canada, where they will make their future home. Mr. Bulman has purchased a farm in the province and will devote his summers to running the farm while the winters will likely be spent in company with his brothers who are interested in a vast lumber concern.

Last Monday evening at 73:0 witnessed the departure of one of our oldest settlers, Gilbert Granum and family, who left for their future home at Flathead Lake, Mont. Last winter Mr. Granum took a trip out west and while there purchased a store and will now enter the general merchandise business for himself.

While at work in his place of business on Wednesday, I. L. Erickson climbed almost to the top of one of the movable ladders for the purpose of arranging some goods on the top shelf. In some way the ladder moved and Mr. Erickson lost his balance and fell to the floor, a distance of about eight feet. He sustained some very severe injuries, one hip being crushed to some extent. Mrs. Erickson was telephoned for and arrived in the city this morning and will remain with Mr. Erickson until he recovers. While he still has severe pains, it is not supposed that the injuries will prove serious.

LAMBERT

At a meeting at the Lambert cheese factory and creamery the following officers were elected: Colixte Robideaux, president; Homer Preanteau, secretary and salesman; Geo. Chaiset, treasurer; Joseph Bergeron, Francois Fournier, Louis Daucet, Joseph Lambert and Jos. Belland, directors.

Jos. Bergeron went to Red Lake Falls on a business trip last Sunday afternoon.

Calixte Robiaux and Jos. Lambert went to Broooks last Monday on business.

The farmers of this section were compelled to stop seeding on account of the snow storm last week and they are all wondering what the hay crop is going to be like if this weather is going to last all this month.

A jolly crowd of Bucktownes gathered at the home of Mrs. Booucher last Sunday night. The time was spent playing games and cards.

Ovilla Bearnier and Homer Parenteau made a swift trip to McIntosh last Friady.

Philip Gibeau was a business caller to McIntosh this week.

ST. HILAIRE.

From the Spectator.

Albert Hall received notice this week that he has been granted a license as an asistant pharmacist and expects to receive his credentials in a few days.

The Red Lake Falls people cheerfully announce that they are going to have a new $85,000 court house and the people up the creek at Thief River Falls intimate the end is not yet and that it will be for the courts to decide.

A. H. Pitkin has received word from the creditors that his offer on the stock of the Rapp & Post store was the highest and had been accepted. Mr. Patkin left for the ciies last evening to conclude the deal and if arrangements are satisfacory he will become the owner of the stock in a few days. Before leaving last evening Mr. Pitkin informed us that if he closed the deal, which he expects to do, he intends to put in a complete and up-to-date stock at once and run the store as a permanent investment.

The St. Hilaire creamery and the commercial club have received the gold seal stickers ordered some time ago to help advertise the fact that the creamery took the gold medal for butter at the State Dairymen's convention in January. The stickers are very tastily done and are being extensively used on stationery. They will also be used on all butter packages turned out by the creamery. They will certainly help to advertise the fact that the St. Hilaire crearmery makes "first prize" butter.

All Over the State

TELL HOW SALE IS MADE.

Rules for Commission Men Adopted by State Railroad Commission.

New rules for handling and reporting consignments of hay, poultry and like products, affecting commission merchants, were adopted recently by the state railroad and warehouse commission, causing a uniform system of handling assignments. The rule will meet with high favor with every farmer shipping his product on the commission basis, as it informs him of the exact manner in which his produce is sold.

The laws governing commission merchants engaged in handling grain, flaxseed, hay, poultry and other agricultural products, provide certain restrictions and rules with reference to the handling and selling of such consignments, as well as to the method of accounting to the shipper or consignor.

These provisions are specific as to detail, so far as they apply to shipments of grain and flaxseed, but not so in their application to shipments of hay, poultry and miscellaneous shipments, other than grain and flaxseed.

At the request of the members of the trade the railroad and warehouse commission has formulated a rule setting forth explicitly what requirements must be observed in handling, selling and reporting to consignors of shipments other than grain and flaxseed. The rule adopted follows:

"Whenever a licensed commission merchant receives and sells consignments of agricultural products, other than grain and flaxseed, on commission, he shall render a true statement in writing to the consignor of the amount and kind of commodity sold, the full price and amount received, name and address of purchaser and shall forward vouchers for each and all charges and expenses."

ORE MOVING FROM MINES.

Hundred Thousand Tons a Week Now Being Received at Two Harbors.

The mines now shipping ore through Two Harbors are the Pioneer, Savoy and Jura at E'y, the Fayal and Adams at Eveleth, the Gilbert at Pettit, all Steel corporation mines, and the Bessemer and Franklin mines from Virginia, the La Belle from McKinley, the Miller from Aurora and the Adriatic from Mesaba.

The combined shipments are at present about 100,000 tons a week, but as soon as the ice blockade at the Soon is raised and the boats begin to come other mines will begin shipments and the output will be increased to probably 250,000 to 400,000 tons a week, which is the maximum shipment.

Already several train and switching crews have been put to work at Two Harbors, and a force of nearly a hundred men are dumping the ore and loading boats. More will be added as the shipments increase. The business men look forward to a prosperous season.

The Tower Lumber company, at Tower, has commenced loading sixty carloads of lumber for shipment down the lakes from Two Harbors, which will be the first cargo of the season. The Colvin & Robb Lumber company have stored at Two Harbors 12,000 cords of pulpwood for shipment by boat to Erie, Pa., as soon as navigation is open. It will require about fifteen boats to carry the consignment.

MILLIONS OF FISH KILLED.

They Were Smothered to Death In Roberd's Lake During the Winter.

Millions of fish were smothered to death in Roberd's lake, near Faribault, during the winter, and the shores are covered with them so thick that the gravel cannot be seen except at close range. Most of the fish are of the coarse variety such as buffalo, carp, sheepheads, bullheads, sunfish, suckers and some pickerel and black bass. There are buffalo fish lying dead on the shore that weigh over twenty-five pounds. A great many large-sized pickerel are also found.

Town officers of Wells township, where the lake is situated, have had a crew of fifteen men gathering up the fish and burying them during the past week. Roberd's lake is quite shallow, and the heavy fall of snow on the thick ice during the long winter prevented a sufficient amount of oxygen to enter the water, causing the fish to suffocate.

REINFORCEMENT FOR OFFICERS.

Civic League Projected at Albert Lea to Boost Law Enforcement.

A movement is on foot at Albert Lea to organize a civic league to work in harmony with the officers as far as possible. One meeting has been held, but the organization was not perfected, and another is being planned. There is some complaint regarding the lax enforcement of certain laws, and it is to aid in correcting this condition, if it really exists, that the league has been suggested.

TEST PEDDLERS' LAW IN COURTS

Winona Firms Which Send Out Wagons Start Test Case.

The peddlers' license law, as passed by the recent legislature, will have to stand a test trial and be carried to the supreme court unless the district court declares it unconstitutional.

Webber & Lees, attorneys, Winona, notified Secretary of State Julius Schmahl that they were uncertain of the constitutionality of the law, and as they represented several concerns which send wagons and men into the country peddling their products, they had decided to make a test case.

A man driving a rig for McConnon & Co. of Winona, was arrested and a writ of habeas corpus returnable before Judge Snow of the Third judicial district on May 5 was issued. If Judge Snow sustains the law the supreme court will be appealed to immediately.

The attorneys request the state that during the litigation the peddlers representing their clients be allowed to go undisturbed. The state has not decided as to what action will be taken.

OFFERS PRISON NOTES.

State Board of Control Receives Bids on Batch of Certificates.

Proposals were received for the purchase of $560,000 worth of Minnesota prison certificates of indebtedness as authorized by the last legislature. They will draw 4 per cent interest. In the absence of the board, which is at Stillwater, only four bids were received up to noon and were not opened.

Bids were also asked for the remainder of the certificates, about $2,136,000 in all, but none were received. In the case of these the board did not give any intimation that it would enter into any contract for their sale, beyond receiving the proposals. The certificates are for the construction of the new prison at Stillwater.

GRAND JURY NOT NEEDED.

No Criminal Business in Sight for Albert Lea Term.

The district court will convene here Monday. There being no criminal business in sight, no grand jury was summoned.

Among the important civil cases is the suit of James A. Tawney, member of congress, against the Albert Lea Tribune company. This involves a cool $10,000. The defendants seem to be as anxious for a trial as the plaintiff. The action is based on an article published in the Daily Tribune of Albert Lea concerning the controversy between Roosevelt and congress over the secret service appropriation.

BOND ISSUE WILL BE FOUGHT.

Red Lake County Seat Fight Will Not Down.

The board of county commissioners of Red Lake county will endeavor to issue bonds to the amount of $35,000 for the construction of a new court house, to replace the old structure which burned recently. There is a contest in the courts, and has been for five years, between the present county seat town, Red Lake Falls, and Thief River Falls, the latter trying to get a vote of the people on the removal of the county seat to Thief River Falls. It is probable steps will be taken to prevent the board from issuing bonds for the purpose stated.

State Gets Money.

Unexpected revenue for the state may develop under a new law, chapter 420, which provides for payment into the state treasury of all sums held by clerks of courts for parties to any court transaction, which have not been claimed for five years or more.

The first payment under this law was made recently by John Raetz, clerk of courts of Dakota county, who turned over $479.27. The sum consisted of numerous items, and nearly every county has such deposits. Under the law, if claim is not established within twenty years after the money is paid into the state treasury it escheats to the state. Even if it is finally claimed, the state will have the use of the money for years, as it goes directly into the revenue fund.

A. H. Wallin, agent in Albert Lea fo rthe Waverly Brewing company of Waverly, Iowa, was arrested for selling liquor without a license, and when arraigned before Justice Stacy pleaded guilty and was fined $100 or ninety days in the county jail. Lo, the noble red man, went on a strike at Aitkin, and for two hours the main street of the city was crowded with Chippewas. Seventy or eighty of them had gathered at Aitkin to go on the log drive, with a promise of $2.25 a day. When informed that $2 was all the lumbermen were paying the Indians struck. Matters were finally settled by the old chief, Little-boy-afraid-of-lags, arranging for a satisfactory wage scale.

Leubell Sheldon, the ten-year-old daughter of Harlow M. Sheldon of Sauk Rapids, was badly bitten by a dog. The dog was immediately killed and its head sent to the laboratory for examination. It is not known whether or not the dog was mad.

The Uppsala musical committee has been investigating music conditions in the country districts, and from a parish in Uppland has received the following report: "There is no one in this parish who plays the violin. Accordions to the number of six are in the parish, but there is no one who can play them. But what we do have is grammofones. I have counted eleven, but there may be more. Those who own these are looked up to as of a superior class, and are much sought after at social doings. Those who do not own grammofones scratch with wooden pins on the window panes, and the sound is much like the screech of the machine." The Uppsala committee is of opinion that a great music critic has been lost to the world when the writer made rural Uppland his home.

DOLLAR WHEAT HAS COME TO STAY

IN LESS THAN FIVE YEARS CENTRAL CANADA WILL BE CALLED UPON TO SUPPLY THE UNITED STATES.

A couple of years ago, when the announcement was made in these columns that "dollar wheat" had come to stay, and that the time was not far distant when the central provinces of Canada—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—would be called upon to supply a large part of the wheat consumption in the United States, there were many who laughed at the predictions and ridiculed the idea of wheat reaching the dollar point and staying there. Both of these predictions have come to pass. Dollar wheat is here—and it is not only here, but is here to stay; and at the same time, whatever unpleasant sensations it may arouse in the super-sensitive American, Central Canada is already being called upon to help keep up the bread supply, and within the next five years will, as James J. Hill says, literally "become the bread-basket of our increasing millions."

There are few men in the United States better acquainted with the wheat situation than Mr. Hill, and there are few men, if any, who are inclined to be more conservative in their expressed views. Yet it was this greatest of the world's railroad men who said a few days ago that "the price of wheat will never be substantially lower than it is today"—and when it is taken into consideration that at that time wheat had soared to $1.20, well above the dollar mark, the statement is peculiarly significant, and doubly significant is the fact that in this country the population is increased at the ratio of 65 per cent., while the yield of wheat and other products is increasing at the rate of only 25 per cent. For several years past the cost of living has been steadily increasing in the United States, and this wide difference in production and consumption is the reason.

This difference must be supplied by the vast and fertile grain regions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. There is now absolutely no doubt of this. Even the press of the country concedes the fact. Results have shown that no other country in the world can ever hope to equal those provinces as wheat producers, and that no other country can produce as hard or as good wheat. Said a great grain man recently, "If United States wheat maintains the dollar mark, Canada wheat will be well above a dollar a bushel, for in every way it is superior to our home-grown grain."

With these facts steadily impinging their truth upon our rapidly growing population, it is interesting to note just what possibilities as a "wheat grower" our Northern neighbor possesses. While the United States will never surrender her prestige in any manufacturing or commercial line, she must very soon acknowledge, and with as much grace as she can, that she is bound to be beaten as a grain-producer. It must be conceded that a great deal of the actual truth about the richness of Canada's grain producing area has been "kept out of sight," as Mr. Hill says, by the strenuous efforts of our newspapers and magazines to stem the exodus of our best American farmers into those regions. It is a fact that up to the present time, although Canada has already achieved the front rank in the world's grain producers, the fertile prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have as yet scarcely been scratched. Millions of acres, free for the taking, still await our American farmers; and when these millions are gone there are other millions in regions not yet opened up to immigration. A few years ago the writer, who has been through those wheat provinces several times, laughed with others of our people at the broad statement that Canada was bound to become "John Bull's Bread Basket." Now, after a last trip (and though he is a stanch American) he frankly believes that not only will Canada become John Bull's bread-basket, but it will within the next decade at least BECOME THE BREAD-BASKET OF THE UNITED STATES. Perhaps this may be a hard truth for Aemricans to swallow, but it is a truth, nevertheless. And it is at least a partial compensation to know that hundreds of thousands of our farmers are profiting by the fact by becoming producers in this new country.

The papers of this country have naturally made the most of the brief period of depression which swept over Canada, but now there is not a sign of it left from Winnipeg to the coast. Never have the three great wheat raising provinces been more prosperous. Capital is coming into the country from all quarters, taking the form of cash for investment, industrial concerns seeking locations, and, best of all, substantial and sturdy immigrants come to help populate the prairies. Towns are booming; scores of new elevators are springing up; railroads are sending out their branch lines in all directions; thousands of prosperous farmers are leaving their prairie shelters for new and modern homes—"built by wheat:" everywhere is a growing happiness and contentment—happiness and contentment built by wheat—the "dollar wheat," which has come to stay. Notwithstanding this, the Canadian Government is still giving away its homesteads and selling pre-emptions at $3.00 an acre, and the Railway and Land Companies are disposing of their lands at what may be considered nominal figures.

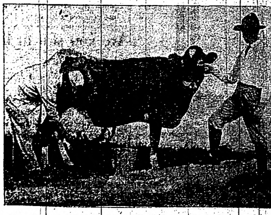
HIGHER EDUCATION FOR THE MILKMAID

Pennsylvania to Spend Ten Thousand Dollars Yearly to Teach Scientific Milking.

The pretty little milkmaid of fact and fiction, of painting and romance, is going to be made a scientist.

No longer will she be the rural, artless, innocent and naive creature of early days. The State of Pennsylvania is going to spend $10,000 yearly to teach her to milk the cows and make butter on the improved modern lines.

The purpose of this legislation introduced by Representative E. E. Jones of Susquehanna is two-fold. First, it is felt that the quality of dairy products can be much improved by an understanding of the scientific way to do things and the health of the state safeguarded by the introduction of new methods of sanitation. Next, the application of these methods should also add to the profit of dairy products, for ignorance now results in much waste and curtailment of profits.



The Udder Is Washed Before Each Milking in the Sanitary Dairy.

The training is to be done by a corps of experts, who will go over the state, visiting the various farms, creameries and cheese factories and giving instruction.

In the last few years the subject of a purification of the milk supply has become a national issue, and in no state has there been greater activity in the direction of obtaining improved methods than in Pennsylvania.

Teach Pedriatis' Principles.

All the data collected in the course of several years of research will be turned over to the dairy instructors, and they will go over farms and dairies and suggest improvements.

Many of the principles of Dr. Pedriatis, which have been accepted all over the world as standard, ever since the Danish expert first promulgated them, will be taught to the dairy maids.

For one thing there must be a monthly examination of every cow, by an expert veterinarian, whose duty it shall be to see that the cow is in healthy condition, and free from every taint of disease.

Moreover, in addition to this examination, the milkmaid will be told that each day she must submit a sample of each cow's milk for examination, and that the instant it falls off in quality, that particular cow must be put out of commission, until it gets in good shape again.

The fair milkmaid will also be told that the beneficent theory of "one cow's milk" is not necessarily correct in all instances, and that in some cases and some sections of the state it is really better to mix the milk of several kinds of cows in order to get the ideal healthy beverage. For instance, the milk of a Jersey cow might be too rich in butter fat, but when mixed with that of a Holstein cow the combination would be found to be ideal.

Guernsey milk is known to be very high in butter fat. The milk has a natural rich color, very pleasing to the eye, the taste, too, is all that can be desired, but there is one objection—the globules of butter fat, unusually large, are not easily digested. When mixed with Shorthorns or Holsteins or Ayreshires, the milk of the Guernseys is just neutralized enough to make a perfect and healthful drink.

Sanitation in Stable.

Fully as important as the breed and physical condition of the cow is the question of the stable, and all those pupils who profit by the enterprise of the state in supplying instructors will especially have impressed on them the importance of having sanitary homes for the producers of one of the most vital of human food products.

The ideal stable should be built on lines as minute as those of any city mansion.

The ideal home for the cow would contain no hayloft. The ceiling should be lathed and plastered or the rafters should be few and cleaned frequently.

The walls ought to be of cement and glass—plenty of light being important, and the floor of cement.

Modern Milker Wears White Suit, Which Is Washed Before Being Used Again.

This kind of construction makes it possible to turn the hose on the walls and floor daily, thus washing away every particle of dirt into a drain which carries it into a distant part of the premises.

Neither is there a manger, an accumulation of hay dust laden with bacilli would endanger the cows' health, and contaminate the milk. Back of the long line of cows as they stand in the neat, metal wided stalls ought to be a groove into which dirt is continually swept and taken away. In front of the stall is another groove in the cement floor, through which at regular intervals runs a stream of pure well water, till each cow has had enough, and then it is shut off.

The food ought to be weighed out to each cow, and not one ounce more given than the attendant decides is needful, for a cow needs only to be fat and contented looking, and this is not likely to be the case if overfeeding is permitted.

Care in Feeding.

The right kind of material for food will also be explained in detail by this itinerant course of lectures on cow knowledge. Grains, corn sileage, clover and alfalfa hay are the stuffs that insure a good flavor to the milk. The proper portions will be explained in detail.

Sometimes it may become necessary to decrease a cow's allowance of one of the ingredients a few ounces to reduce the production of butter fat or to add something to increase the supply of milk.

In such manner as this virtually everything connected with the cow and its production of milk can be regulated along the lines which the instructors will lay down.

Of course, the cow has to be allowed a certain amount of exercise in the open fields, perhaps on average of three or four hours a day, but here again the instructor will be to the fore again with good advice, for he will tell the dairymaid how to be sure there is no deleterious substance growing there, such as garlic.

Only one cow needs to eat garlic to affect the entire milking, and they are so partial to it, that only eternal vigilance can prevent the indulgence.

In the ideal dairy shavings will be used as bedding. They do not fill the air with germ-laden dust. For the same reason all hay before being fed to the cow is wet down with a hose, thus preventing the dissemination of the hay bacilli, which in dry hay fills the atmosphere and is either inhaled by the cow or flies directly into the the milk.

Grains are kept in a compartment separate from the barn, thus preventing the dangers of their flavors from getting into the milk, and all crevices which might become lurking places for dust, thus aiding in the infection of the herd from a tuberculosis cow are eliminated.

Must Be Scrupulously Clean.

The milker, man or woman, wears a jumper, and is scrupulously clean, moreover each cow is rubbed down and curried as carefully as a horse on exhibition at a show in competition for a blue ribbon, for such grooming keeps the cow's hide free from loose hairs and foreign matter.

In fact, the hide of the cow is even kept clipped toward the side of the milker so as to be absolutely certain that nothing can fall into the milk.

Twice a day the cow is also sponged, especial attention being given to the udder.

The fair milkmaid will be taught that her hands can never be kept too clean while taking the milk from its cow giver. She must wash them in warm water before beginning, and repeat the operation after emptying each bucket of milk.

These are some of the high spots in the remarkable program by which an effort is being made to educate the farmer as to his vital duty to safeguard his milk supply.

Of course, a large part of the result will depend on the amount of moral suasion that can be brought to bear, for many of the suggestions made are expensive and can hardly be put into execution without a loss by those who depend on the popular priced market for the returns.

But one of the points adopted is sure to result in a gain.

Ten thousand dollars yearly to be invested by the state in guarding the milk supply ought to yield its profits in an improved public health.

CIGARS WEST OF WINNIPEG

Crying Need Out There of Men Who Can Make Good Smokes.

"I want to place myself on record as saying that a good cigar cannot be purchased west of Winnipeg for less than fifteen cents," says a writer in the Bookkeeper, "and then to be entirely candid in the matter, they're so rank that our ordinary five cent brands smoke like choice Havanas in comparison.

"There is room for 500 good cigarmakers in the three provinces, and there is room for as many more in other parts of the Dominion; but I recommend only the West, where any man who can make a good cigar to sell for ten cents will be independent within a few years.

"Medicine Hat was the only Western town in which I found first-class cigars. An American from Chicago made [illegible] five cents each and thousands were smoked every week. The man was making a fortune.

"Cigars are a good illustration of ordinary business methods now in vogue. You pay five cents for a certain cigar in Toronto. At Moose Jaw you pay ten cents for the same cigar, and at Calgary it costs fifteen. If you object the prairie business man grins and says: 'Well, this isn't Toronto.' One of them said candidly to me, 'Why, sure, we make eleven cents profit on that cigar. They get a quarter for it in Alaska.'

"Western Canada isn't Alaska. It is a network of railroads. Its freight rates, while high, are getting steadily cheaper. The business methods in the majority of towns might well be representative of those 1,000 miles [illegible] If an army of 10,000 American business men, manufacturers and promotors should invade the Dominion West tomorrow they would do more toward its development than 1,000,000 immigrants. No three regions in the world are more prosperous than Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba. Banner crops have made the farmers independent, and each succeeding crop adds to the honey which the American business bee has not seen fit to touch."

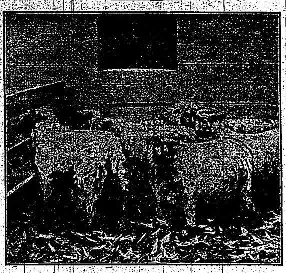
"And about how much bread will you want each day?"

"Well, I don't know exactly. You see, there are only two of us." "Then [illegible] be enough, you think?"—Judge.

CHICAGO AND OMAHA SHEEP TRADE CENTERS

Shipping Facilities Make These Two Cities Principal Markets for Sheep Trade; Show Rapid Growth—By W. C. Coffey.



A Bunch of Prime Wethers.

If close proximity to the regions where most of the sheep are produced were the only factor in determining the best location for a market, the largest markets would be still farther west than they are, because nearly 75 per cent. of the sheep in the United States are west of the Mississippi river, and 57 per cent. are in the Rocky Mountain region and west of the Pacific coast.

Shipping facilities for getting the output of the packing houses to the consumer have an important bearing. Still another factor which has a great deal of influence is the fact that many sheep from the west are fattened in the Mississippi and Missouri valleys. Many of these are handled twice by the markets, first as feeders, and again as sheep intended for slaughter. When sold as feeders, they go only a comparatively short distance from the market and this is a factor that equalizes the seeming disparity of the markets being too far removed from the regions of heaviest production, and really makes such places as Chicago and Omaha the actual centers of the sheep trade.

The great central sheep markets of to-day have enjoyed a very large growth during the last 20 years. The total number of sheep received at Chicago in 1887 was 1,360,862; in 1907, 4,218,115. This growth is largely traceable to the turning of the sheep husbandry interests in the west from wool production, as a primary object, to the production of both mutton and wool, and to the rise of the sheep feeding industry. By liberal infusions of mutton blood into their flocks, and by marketing their sheep at a younger age than formerly, western flockmasters supplanted a dry, ill-flavored mutton with a wholesome product that met with ready demand. Almost at the same time sheep feeding became popular, and these better bred sheep of the range were also better fed. A further impetus was thus given to mutton consumption which has now reached the point, in many of our cities, at least, where the only check to liberal consumption is the lack of the ability to buy.

With this increased activity in the production of better mutton in the west and in feed lot operations, the large markets have not only increased in volume of business but they have also improved in their organization, as may be seen in the review of conditions past and present at the Chicago market. Formerly sheep on this market were not classed and graded, but they were sold in mixed bands just as they were unloaded from the cars. Often these mixed shipments were made up of all ages and sexes, in every degree of quality and condition. The volume of business was small; mutton was not much sought after, and hence the need of careful discrimination was not felt. To the commission man or the buyer this system perhaps did not offer great inconvenience. Perhaps the buyer even counted it to his advantage as he is inclined to measure the value of the whole offering by the inferior individuals in it. But to the shipper who occasionally visited the market, little opportunity was presented by such a system to determine the preference of buyers. This system gave way to one that is more orderly and definite. The day of the buyer taking "pot luck" on shipments as a whole is over. Now they are sorted into the different classes and grades and thus presented for the inspection of the buyer. The result is an orderly and definite market by which the man who follows his shipments to sale may be enlightened, and from which market quotations may be made that will be of aid to those that have sheep to sell.

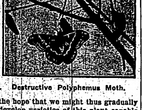
With respect to control of receipts so that violent fluctuations in prices do not occur within a very short space of time, the Chicago market has greatly improved during the last 20 years. Until the sheepmen of the west became fully recognized as specialists in mutton production, treacherous and violent fluctuations were matters of almost daily occurrence. There are records of declines of 50 cents per hundredweight in prices within an hour. The large western shipper was obliged to forestall such ruinous conditions. This was done by establishing feeding stations on the railway lines tributary to Chicago from the west. Most of these are owned and controlled by the railroad companies, although a few are owned by private parties. The large shipper consigns his sheep to some one of these feeding stations, and then awaits the advice of his commission firm as to the number of sheep and the time he shall send them to market. A shipment of say 20,000 sheep is thus distributed over a period of a week or ten days, instead of all being dumped on the market on the same day. Since from 65 to 75 per cent. of the sheep reaching the Chicago market are consigned first to the feeding stations, it can readily be seen how much they aid in preventing market glutting. The record run of sheep on the Chicago market for one day is little less than 60,000, and a run of 40,000 is considered very heavy, but were it not for the feeding stations it is claimed that there would frequently be days when the run would be from 60,000 to 100,000 head.

BREEDING INSECT RESISTING PLANTS

How One Can Select Those That Will Withstand Attacks of Insects.

From time to time various authorities have called attention to the possibilities of selecting seed from plants that have successfully withstood adverse conditions, such as drought, poor soil, fungi, etc. It is left to Dr. S. A. Forbes, Illinois state entomologist, to suggest the plan of selecting plants that have successfully withstood the attack of insects with the hope of building up a plant which would be practically immune from such attacks. In a recent address before an association of entomologists at Madison, Wis., Dr. Forbes said:

"I would like to see the experiment made of growing corn from seed taken from the few best stalks of a field which has been overrun by insects, in the hope that we might thus gradually develop varieties of this plant capable of withstanding insect attack, or of selecting our seed from the best grown and most fruitful plants in a field which has suffered heavily from drought—of applying, in short, the method by which rust-resistant varieties of wheat and the like are now being formed."



Destructive Polyphemus Moth.

If Doctor Forbes' idea of breeding a stalk of corn immune from attacks of insects is unique, it is certainly not beyond the range of possibility. We hope that sooner or later this suggestion will be acted upon with the hope of developing a plant of superior quality to others of the same kind.

Use of Nitrate of Soda.—For soils that are deficient in nitrogen, nitrate of soda would be very valuable on account of its quick action. Use it as a top dressing at the rate of 100 pounds to 200 pounds per acre, and make three or four such applications during the season. The first rain will wash it into the soil and it will be immediately available. But for the general gardener the nitrogen can be secured much more cheaply and in more permanent form by the plowing under of cow peas, clover and well rotted barnyard manure.

Another illusion dispelled. Mistletoe, it seems, is not a Christmas decoration. "Holly, the box and the bay," should deck forth our houses and churches at Yuletide, but mistletoe should not make its appearance till the New Year. It may help to restore the practice of making the hanging of the mistletoe a separate New Year's ceremony, to state that its efficacy is entirely lost if it is hung and used for the encouragement of osculation before the first day of the year.

INDIAN GIRL AND HER TRAVELS.

As a Government Ward She Is Protected on Long Journey.

Under the watchful paternal eye of the United States government Miss Matilda Hancorne, a shapely and beautiful Indian girl whose home is at Orick, Humboldt county, completed a wearisome journey across the continent Sunday.

Miss Hancorne has been a student at the United States Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., and when she decided to return to her California mountains Supt. M. Friedman at once began to pave the way for a safe and pleasant journey for his charge. Elizabeth Howell, another student, was coming West as far as Elko, Nev., and Friedman put the two girls on the train armed with all manner of letters and credentials. In the meantime he had sent letters ahead of the girls to assure their accommodations on the way.

Aside from her inexperience in traveling there was little need of the federal government taking such precautions regarding Miss Hancorne's journey, for she is a bright, wideawake girl, who speaks English perfectly and bears herself with an independent carriage. If there is anything about her to attract attention in a crowd it is her striking beauty and the perfect taste with which she dresses.

The girl sailed for Eureka on Tuesday. She will have to stage it thirty-five miles over rough roads.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not that has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years was troubled with stomach trouble.

"I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to perfect a cure. I was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured my stomach.

"I finally concluded coffee was the cause of my troubles and stopped using it. I tried tea and milk in its place, but neither agreed with me, then I commenced using Postum. I had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia.

"I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it I appreciate Postum."

Are you ambitious? Here's an offer as liberal if not as alluring as those made by the correspondence law schools. It's a chance to study law at home, anyhow. There are a few of the law supplements at this office and for the asking they will be given away.

While an awning was being put up in front of The Big Store last Thursday one of the supports holding the frame for the awning fell and the rods swung down and poked a hole in the big plate glass window. The glass was shattered and it will require quite an expenditure of money to replace it.

Sam Swanson, who resides near Lost postoffice was attending to business matters in this city Monday and Tuesday. Those who heard Rev. Calloway at the Presbyterian church last summer will surely want to hear him next Sunday. Morning subject: "The Last Christ." Evening subject: "Promoted to Sit With Princes," or the famous world Evangelist, Gipsy Rodney Smith. All friends of the church are most cordially invited to attend these services.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Dan Welsch last Saturday and Dan was so enthusiastic over the event that he tried to make his friends believe that the stork had left twins at his house. There are five children in the Welch family and the new arrival is the first boy and there is as much rejoicing as there would be in a royal family over such an event.

The fifteen year old son of Peter Mathews, who resides five miles northeast of Red Lake Falls, was kicked by a horse last week and suffered the dislocation of an elbow joint. The seriousness of the injury was not understood until some time after it was inflicted, making it more difficult to set the joint. However, the boy is getting along nicely and will suffer no ill effects from the injury.

Walter Quesnel, while employed at some task at the farm of E. A. Columbus, three miles west of town, last Friday, cut a slight gash in his left hand severing an artery. An attempt to stop the flow of blood failing, Mr. Quesnel was brought to town in a hurry, but none too quickly. When he arrived here he was weak from the loss of blood. A physician dressed the wound and Mr. Quesnel is feeling as well as ever. The wound was a slight one.

A happy event of this week was the celebration at their home in Wylie of the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Eckstein Tuesday, May 11. A number of relatives and friends from away were present to join in the festivities of the occasion. It was a most enjoyable occasion and Mr. and Mrs. Eckstein's many friends expressed the hope that they may live to celebrate with equal pleasure and satisfaction a similar event twenty-five years hence.

Allus Patteway, a negro trusty convict who was coachman for Warden Wolfer, escaped from the state penitentiary at Stillwater Tuesday evening about 8 o'clock. This is good weather for growing things and the base ball germs is getting in its work and is being carefully nursed by the fans who see visions of scrappy games and howling mobs as they sit and whittle and talk and talk. And they are finding some base ball material that no one dreamed was here so there sure will be some good games just as soon as the sun gets hotter and the bug commences to wiggle a little more persistently. No team has been organized but there is a lot of talk and those who have been talking will have an opportunity to demonstrate whether or not they had license to talk. Base ball game propositions have been received from neighboring towns so it will soon be up to the boys to ginger up or—well, they can't be bluffed so there'll be some games pretty soon.

A Big Improvement.

The county commissioners decided to build a thirty five thousand dollar court house, to take the place of the old one destroyed by fire. While this will not be the finest county court house in the northern part of the state, it will be better than some of them, and a big improvement over the old one.—Sunbeam.

Resolutions.

Whereas, The great and supreme Ruler of the universe has in His infinite wisdom removed from among us, one of our worthy and esteemed brothers, John B. O'Brien; and whereas, the long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties as an Odd Fellow, and as a citizen of our great state makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him; therefore:

Be it resolved, That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the aid of Odd Fellowship by service, contributions and counsel; and the honest, honorable and up-right life he led as an American citizen not only in private life, but also as a public official, will be held in grateful remembrance:

Be it resolved: that the sudden removal of such a life and character from among our midst leaves a vacancy and sorrow that will be deeply realized by all good Odd Fellows, and all good citizens in Red Lake County, Minnesota, and will prove a serious loss to our beloved Order and to the public.

Be it resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of Clearwater Lodge No. 133, I. O. O. F., Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to St. Hilaire Lodge No. 147, I. O. O. F., of which said deceased was a member, and a copy of said resolutions be sent to the widow of our beloved brother and a copy of said resolutions be printed in the Red Lake Falls Gazette.

THE NEW COUNTY OF PENNINGTON

Thief River People Say That It Is All Fixed—Will Have New County.

Won't Play in Our Yard Any More—It is to Laugh.

It is to laugh.

The Thief River Falls people pretend to be in earnest in their move to secede.

They say that they are going to prevent the erection of a court house in Red Lake Falls until after the next general election when the proposition to divide the county may be voted upon or that after that the people of all that is left of Red Lake county may build all the court houses they want.

It is to laugh.

The question is, can they prevent the erection of a court house? But there is a bigger question. Will the farmers of the county, the people of Red Lake Falls and the villages of the county let them get out?

Well,—

It is to laugh some more.

The Thief River people are trying to tell the farmers that the filing of the petition will prevent the authorities from collecting any taxes for county purposes in the territory proposed to be set off from Red Lake county.

Not pay taxes! Whoop! But it's a shame to laugh at such stupidity.

Did you read what the people of St. Hilare, Wylie and a number of farmers had to say in interviews published in the St. Hilaire Spectator. Just two farmers, and nobody else, favored division, and one of those was Commissioner Aubol.

What was it that a great American naval officer said when his sailors commenced to cheer when the enemy's ship was sinking? Let's not laugh any more.

For the new county the people of Thief River Falls want the north two-thirds of the towns of Polk Centre, Black River, River Falls, Wyandotte, Mayfield, Deer Park and all of Hickory and all the territory north of those towns.

GOVERNOR LAUDS PATRIOTIC DEAD

Issues Proclamation Designating Monday, May 31, as Memorial Day.

The annual Memorial day proclamation was issued from the governor's office Monday morning, this being one of the first acts of Governor Johnnson after his return from the east. He says:

"Though nearly three score years have come and gone since the sound of Sumpter's guns the recurrence of each Memorial day brings to us again the debt of love and duty it is our privilege and pleasure to pay to the memory of the nation's defenders.

"This is not a new bereavement but one which time the healer of even the most pignant grief has softened. These are not new-made graves we garland for over them all nature has already spread the memorials of her love. They have received the benediction of her sunshine and her tears and above them her vines and grasses have spread the mantle of immortality.

"The Civil war ended long ago and but a remnant of the grand army of veterans remains. Those spared to life's activities are worn by the ravages of time and weakened by wound and disease. Soon will the lone survivor be gathered to the silent portals and the annual march of the boys in blue become but a memory. Other lips and hands will perfom the service of love and decoration that belongs to the heritage of the soldier. But the army of the soldier dead will be with us as long as patriotism swells the earth, its camp fires burn as long as liberty lives. Time enrices their memories and to the farthest day the heroes who gave their lives for their country will be honored by a grateful posterity.

"It is fitting that we should on one day of each year lay aside our duties and join witn our fellow citizens in appropriate memorial to the patriot dead. Therefore I, John A. Johnson, governor of Minnesota, hereby designate Monday, May 31, 1909, to be a pubilc holiday, and ask that the significance of the day be commemorated."

JOHN B. O'BRIEN DEAD

Popular Official Died Following An Operation for Appendicitis.

At 12:10 o'clock Saturday morning County Auditor John B. O'Brien, who was receiving treatment at St. Vincent hospital, Crookston, following an operation for appendicitis, breathed his last.

Mr. O'Brien's condition was critical from the start, but he rallied after the operation, which was performed on Tuesday of last week, and hopes were entertained for his recovery.

The illness of Mr. O'Brien was of recent origin. The Friday and Saturday before being taken to Crookston he was not feeling well, but was able to spend a part of each day at the office and it was not until Sunday night that the seriousness of his condition was realized

John B. O Brien was born in Lyon county, Minnesota, and was forty-four years old the first of May. He had been a resident of Red Lake county for the past sixteen years. For two years, following a course at the Mankato Normal, he taught in the public schools of this city and for twelve years following he was principal of the St. Hilaire graded school. Two years ago last fall he was elected county auditor and he was re-elected last fall. He was a capable and conscientious official, one who performed the duties of office faithfully. Because of this fair stand on all questions of public concern coming before him he had friends in all quarters in spite of the many contentions that arose during his incumbency of the office. Under all the conditions, the esteem in which he was held by all is a tribute to the intergrity of Mr. O'Brien.

Deceased is survived by his widow and one daughter, Helen, eight years of age, and to them the sympathy of many friends is extended.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in St. Paul, from St. Joseph's church, and interment made at Calvary cemetery. The obsequies were private, only a few close friends, besides the relatives, being present.

The pallbearers were Leonard Holmes, H. E. Ives, W. B. Fuller, O. F. Post, James E. Ford and John E. King.

It is expected that Mrs. O'Brien and her little daughter will remain in St. Paul, where Mrs. O'Brien's mother lives, for several weeks. She expects to return to Red Lake Falls late in June to settle the estate and dispose of her household goods.

WILL ASK FOR AN EXTRA SESSION

Northern Counties Plan Petition Urging the Need of Reapportionment.

According to Harry E. Ives of St. Hilaire a monster petition is to be sent from northern Minnesota to Governor John A. Johnson, asking him to call a special session to pass a legislative reapportionment bill. Mr Ives was at the capitol Monday and said the movement was already under way.

"We think the only chance for northern Minnesota to get justice in legislative representation is a special session called for the purpose," said Mr. Ives. "There will be a federal census next year, but the result will not be out in time for the legislature of 1911 to use it for basis of apportionment. Southern Minnesota will put us off again on the pretext that we must wait for the federal census. So it will go on year after year, unless the legislature's duty is brought up to it by a call for a special session. Our district has six times the population of some in southern Minnesota, even going by the 1905 census. A petition will soon be circulated and will be signed by thousands of voters in northern Minnesota. Governor Johnson has called attention to the unjust condition of affairs, and I think if the public demand for apportionment is made strong enough, he will make the call for an exta session."

WILL GAUGE WATER POWERS OF STATE

Government Will Make Survey and Pay Half of the Cost.

Drainage Board Appropriates $25,000 to Forward This Laudable Work.

The state drainage board met Friday afternoon and gave its approval to the agreement, which Secretary of State Julius Schmahl and State Engineer George A. Ralph entered into at Washington, from where they returned yesterday morning. They were successful in securing the co-operation of the federal government to such an extent that it will pay half of the cost of the survey of the water power of the state.

The legislature directed the drainage commission to make an inquiry into the value of the water power of the state.

Under the agreement, all the work will be done by the hydrographic department of the interior and the state will pay half the cost. The state drainage commission has appropriated $25,000 for the work.

The department of the interior will send ten expert engineers within ten days to start surveying the water powers.

The government will also establish fifty stations at which will be maintained stream gauges for a number of years to determine the volume and power of the water in the different streams.

IN NEED OF HELP.

Widow and Children are in Poor Circumstances.

The following communication was received from Andrew Anderson, a neighbor of those in whose behalf it is written:

Mr. Gunsten Jorgenson, who met such a sudden death on the road between Plummer and Garnes, February 4, 1909 leaves a widow and eight children, the oldest being thirteen years and the youngest six months old.

The bereaved widow is left in very poor circumstances and if merciful people and friends do not have pity on her and lend her a helping hand, she will become homeless with her flock of unprotected little ones.

It is therefore hoped that each one who reads this will send his gift, large or small, to gladden the heart of this mourning widow.

Let us help her to a peaceful possession of her homestead that she may be unmolested there and have the consolation of keeping her children with her.

All gifts may be sent to Rev. O. Kolstoe, Plummer, Minn., who will account for the receipt of same and forward the gifts to those for whom intended.

A Notable Clock.

The most trustworthy clock in the world is said to be that in the basement of the observatory at Berlin, installed in 1865. This timekeeper is enclosed in an air tight glass cylinder and has run for two or three months with an average deviation of only fifteen one thousandths of a second. It is said too that for a pure wholesome table beverage golden grain belt beer has no equal. Keen appetite comes with its use and it removes indigestion. IT WAS A BIG HAUL

St. Hilaire Man Captured Fifteen Wolves—Got $82.50 Bounty.

Ed. Whaley of St. Hilaire brought the carcasses of fifteen wolves to town Tuesday to exhibit them to Auditor Lattendresse and get the reward for their capture. There were fourteen young cubs and one old wolf.

Mr. Whaley killed the wolves in the town of River Falls last Friday. He tracked the old wolf to a hole. He blocked the opening and when she attempted to get out he shot her. In that hole he found eleven cubs and in another three. The cubs were so young that it was no effort to capture them. Mr. Whaley received from the county auditor a warrant for $82.50, bounty for killing the wolves.

CHANGE OF TIME NEXT MONDAY

Service on Great Northern About the Same as Before the Change.

Northbound Train Will Arrive at 10:30 a. m., Southbound at 5 p. m.

The change of passenger service on the Great Northern, about which there has been much speculation, goes into effect next Monday, May 24.

The southbound train, leaving Warroad at 12:05, will arive at Red Lake Falls at 5 o'clock p. m. The train will reach Crookston at 6:15. It will connect with the train leaving Crookston at 6:35 which arrives at Grand Forks in time to connect with the Oriental Limited, leaving at 8:50. There will also be convenient connection with other trains going west and trains to the twin cities.

The northbound train will leave Crookston at 9:15 and arrive at Red Lake Falls at 10:30 a. m.

The change will not result in any improvement of passenger and mail service to the twin cities, which under the old schedule was very satisfactory, but there will now be good connection to all points and no doubt local people will consider the change an improvement.

WILL STOCK CLEARWATER.

State Game and Fish Commission Will Send Fry.

The Clearwater river is to be stocked with brook trout and black bass. The state game and fish commission will send fry here to be placed in that stream. The Clearwater is fed by springs and it is quite probable that it can be made a good trout stream if people interested will see to it that the fish are protected.

If your stomach, heart or kidneys are weak try at least a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't dose the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail the depending organs of necessity fail. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all druggists.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN EPITOME

Digest of the News Worth Telling Condensed for the Busy Reader.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

It was unofficially learned that Vice Governor Cameron Forbes probably would be appointed governor of the Philippines, to succeed Governor General Smith.

The postoffice department has asked Representative Davis of the Third district of Minnesota to recommend a postmaster to take the place of Postmaster John S. Nelson at Carver. Mr. Davis has the matter under advisement. The official complaint against Nelson is that he fails to answer official correspondence. It is alleged that he did not reply to official requests for statements as to rural mail service out of his office.

At a state dinner at the White House last week President and Mrs. Taft had as their guests Senators Frye, Gallinger, Perkins, Johnson, Smoot and Shively, Senator and Mrs. Nelson, Senator and Mrs. McCumber, Senator and Mrs. Owen, Representatives E. C. Loudenschlager, E. J. Hill, E. L. Hamilton, F. C. Stevens, F. D. Currier, J. Hampton Moore, Paul Howland and their wives, Representatives J. H. Davidson and W. H. Wiley and Miss Maury.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT.

Col. Manchester, a veteran of the MacKenzie rebellion of 1837, died at Winnipeg, aged ninety-two.

Andrew Devine, former official reporter of the house of representatives, died at his home in Brooklyn. He was sixty-seven years old.

Hammond La Mont, editor of The Nation, is dead in New York, following an operation. He was at one time managing editor of the New York Evening Post.

Peter Wells, who was the first undertaker at Elwood, Ind., and who made by hand, by actual account, 2,374 coffins, from measurements furnished him by families of the district, is dead.

Levi T. Pennington, a student at Earlham college of Indiana, won the third interstate intercollegiate oratorical contest at the university of Chicago. Earl P. Flint of Illinois Wesleyan university was second.

The countess of Orford, who was Miss Louise Malissa Corbin, daughter of D. C. Corbin of New York, died suddenly in London. She was married to the eighth earl of Orford in 1888

More than $300,000 is given to charity in the will of Thomas A. Sprague, late president of Sprague, Warner & Co., of Chicago, who died at Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 10. Under certain conditions this sum will be increased to $1,000,000.

The sudden departure of Count Szechenyi for Hungary from New York, after the count and the countess had but hardly arrived to visit Mrs. Vanderbilt, was due to cable instructions to return home to accept a portfolio in the new Hungarian cabinet.

Mrs. Margaret L. Young, widow of Caesar Young, the bookmaker for whose death Nan Patterson was tried for murder, was married at New York to George W. Langdon of Sheepshead Bay. Mr. Langdon has managed the Young racing stable for Mrs. Young since her husband's death.

George J. Owens is dead at the city hospital in St. Louis of a malady diagnosed by physicians as the sleeping sickness. Owens has been in the tropics and physicians can account for the disease only on the theory that he was bitten by some insect and so inoculated with the germ.

ACCIDENTAL HAPPENINGS.

Two men died in a fire that destroyed an apartment house in Syracuse, N. Y.

Paul M. Friedinger, a government clerk drowned when his canoe capsized near the highway bridge on the Potomac river, in Washington.

Fire practically wiped out the historic village of Benedict, on the Patuxent river, in Maryland. Every building except four houses were burned.

Prince Karl von Wrede was unhorsed while riding in the Badenia steeplechase at Mannheim, Baden. The prince sustained a severe concussion of the brain. His horse was killed.

Two men were killed, one boy was seriously injured and three persons were hurt when a Pennsylvania flyer collided with a carriage at Bedford, twelve miles south of Cleveland, Ohio.

Fred Graves, prosecuting attorney of Boone county, Indiana, was drowned in Sugar creek. Ivan C. Tolle, coroner of the county, was rescued in an unconscious condition. His condition is critical.

Owing to the premature releasing of the air brakes of several dump cars, an accident was caused in the Gold Hill section in Panama. The cars started down the incline and fell into the Culebra cut below, killing eleven men and seriously injuring nine more.

Six persons were injured at Romney, W. Va., when a train on the Romney branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad hit a herd of cattle and two coaches were thrown over a bank.

Fifty professional and business men, as a result of a revival campaign being conducted at Elkhart, Ind., by Ora S. Gray, a Massachusetts evangelist, began to build a rough structure to shelter 3,500 persons. Late in the afternoon a portion of the roof fell, injuring Orlando J. Hall, one of the workers.

NEW GRANDSTAND FOR STATE FAIR

The final preliminary detail for the building of the new fireproof grandstand at the state fair grounds was completed in Secretary C. N. Cosgrove's office, when a contract was signed by George J. Grant, the St. Paul contractor, by the terms of which he is to have the new grandstand finished by Aug. 15.

According to the revised plans of Reed & Stem the new grandstand is to be built entirely of steel and concrete, 378 feet long, 171 feet deep, 10 feet high at the race track side and 70 feet high at the rear. It is to seat 11,000 people.

A steel roof is to cover the upper half of the grandstand, and the plans are so drawn as to permit the extending of a movable section of this roof out over the lower half of the building when the necessary money is available. New avenues with broad approaches to the entrances are to be built from the street railway terminal. The new building is to be erected with seven "bays," each fifty-four feet wide, each bay window thirty-five feet high and twenty-five feet wide.

There will be more floor space beneath the new grandstand, available for exhibition or administrative purposes, than is found in the present main building, agricultural building and machinery hall combined. The ground floor and first floor to be entered from the terminal station side and third floors, to be finished later, will be 100x378 feet. The second and thir floors, to be finished later, will be 30 feet wide and 378 feet long.

Mr. Grant is to receive $198,507 for the completed grandstand and $3,000 additional for steel casings for the big windows. The board has already started the excavating, which is outside the contract. The building completed will represent an investment of about $215,000.

The board has worked all week on getting the bids within the limits of their resources. The first bids ran as high as $475,000. A revision of the plans was necessary and the sliding roof, the sub-basement and the so-called triangle were eliminated, and the grandstand materially reduced in depth.

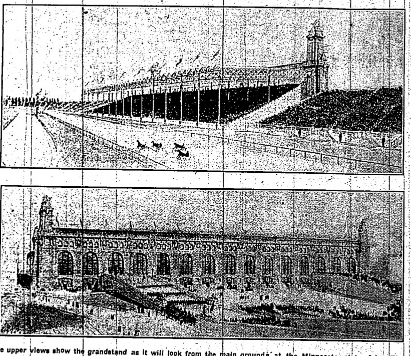
The old grandstand, which has been torn down, was built of wood with steel uprights, was 300x60 feet, and seated 6,500 people. The old west bleacher which seated 2,000 people has also been torn down to make room for the new structure.

Plans for a new machinery building to be situated near the northeast corner of the grounds, were so far adopted as to instruct Architect Chamberlain to receive bids for a new steel building, 100x500, with a separate bid for a glass enclosure 70x200. This new building, which will be entirely of steel and glass, with concrete floor and casing, will be the principal show place for carriages and the highest grade of machinery, and will cost about $25,000. A portion of the building will be erected by Lindsay Bros. of Minneapolis.

The board adopted the suggestion made by B. E. Gregory, superintendent of amusements, to have the military spectacle. "Minnesota at Gettysburg" produced during the fair.

The old lumber and iron from the old grandstand will be used for the new hog barn at a cost of not exceeding $1,500.

The board engaged five bands for the fiar, two more than have heretofore appeared in one year.



The upper views show the grandstand as it will look from the main grounds at the Minnesota state fair. The lower one shows the appearance from within the track.

FARMS GO BEGGING.

Northern Minnesota Land Given High Praise.

"I know of no region awaiting settlement in this country which will compare with the northern part of Wisconsin and Minnesota for safety and assurance of advancement in price of lands while one is making a good living and something more," is the statement of Prof. W. A. Henry, former dean of the agricultural college of the University of Wisconsin, in a letter received by George A. Welsh, state immigration commissioner. Prof. Henry, who is recognized as one of the best authorities in the country on agricultural land, says he is familiar with the timbered region running through Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota.

"Over much of this vast district there is a great deal of excellent farming land still more or less unoccupied," wrote Mr. Henry. "Farmers, in their eagerness to secure prairie land, have passed beyond good land, now more or less covered with trees and stumps. Some of those who are still eager for prairie lands would far better take the kind of wooded lands that both Wisconsin and Minnesota have yet to offer, for many are pushing into districts where the rainfall is too uncertain to warrant the kind of agriculture that must be adopted by landholders of limited means.

"In the wooded districts all the crops never fail, and one is always certain of enough for himself and for his cattle. Because of its pure waters and splendid summer climate and the wealth of grasses and clovers, the region is particularly suited to dairying and sheep husbandry, two of the most stable of agricultural industries, which pay the faithful farmer from the very start."

Prof. Henry's sentiments are heartily seconded in a letter by D. A. Wallace, a St. Paul member of the commission appointed by former President Roosevelt to investigate the conditions of rural life in the United States. He says that this is not a country for the speculator in lands, hence lands have not been unduly boomed, but it is rather a country for the homemaker.

URGE GOOD ROADS.

Two hundred and fifty farmers, officials and business men met at the court house at Waseca in a good roads convention, which is the first positive move for a better understanding among the varied interests working for good roads in this community.

It has been the experience of cities taking the initiative in road building that the impulse prompting their endeavors has been misunderstood, and they have met as much hindrance as help from the farmers.

A Common Sentiment.

The news agent was dilating on the wickedness of paper boys. "Just look at this postcard I've had from a customer," he said. It ran:

Dear Sir: When your boy was (as usual) drinking the milk that is left on our doorstep he dropped the can and spilt a quart of milk on the path. In his hurry to leave the premises he omitted to leave the paper. Yours truly.

P. S. Please send paper.

P. P. S. Also kill boy.

SURVEY MINNESOTA STREAMS.

Will Aid Drainage Scheme of Low Lands.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last session of the legislature Secretary of State Julius Schmahl and State Drainage Engineer George A. Ralph have gone to Washington, D. C., where they will confer with the government topographical survey department with reference to measuring the depth of all streams in the state.

The project will involve a great deal of work, much of which will be done on government ground for the good of government lands. The government is expected to pay half of the cost of the survey.

With the survey at hand, the drainage of the state may be more readily and accurately accomplished. The government has signified its agreement with the work. Engineer M. O. Leighton of the topographical department will be the government representative in the conference with the Minnesota state officials. Mr. Ralph has had charge of a great deal of government work in the state before and will have entire control of the survey, if it is made.

STATE NORMAL SUMMER SCHOOL.

Primary Work and Manual Training to Be Features at Mankato.

The state normal summer school at Mankato will open June 8 and continue until Aug. 27. The teachers will be largely from the regular school faculty, and, in addition to the city superintendents who have taught in the school the past few years, Superintendents Franklin of Austin, McConnell of Mankato, Phillips of Albert Lea, Fobes of Marshall and Childs of Medelia. Miss Anna McDougall, the supervisor of drawing in the Dubuque schools, will teach drawing, and a competent teacher of manual training will be secured. A primary school containing the first three grades will be in operation for four weeks, beginning June 14, and will be in charge of Miss Margaret L. Howard of Minneapolis, who has already done this work very successfully. The prospects indicate a large attendance.

YOUNG VETERANS ORGANIZE.

Post of Spanish-American War Soldiers Started at Waseca.

Veterans of the Spanish-American war organized as the Schaumkerrel post of Waseca. Officers were elected, and it was decided to make immediate application to national headquarters for a charter. The new new post will have about twenty-five members. Albert Bartelt was electeed commander, A. J. Kurkowiski vice commander and H A. Parzram secretary and treasurer.

Fall of a Meteor in Missouri.

The New Truxton people received quite a scare about midnight Friday by a falling meteor. The stone was picked up next morning and weighed five and one-half pounds. It fell with such force that it sank into the ground about seventeen inches.

The ground was badly burned around the stone for some distance indicating that it was very hot. There are no other records of meteors falling in this country for several years.

PREDICTS GREAT FUTURE.

J. F. Jacobson Praises Agricultural High Schools—Grain Tax Popular.

J. F. Jacobson of Madison, late Republican candidate for governor, was at the state capitol last week to urge the merits of his home town as a location of one of the agricultural high schools under the Putnam bill. The competition for these schools moved him to remark:

"I knew when I was advocating these schools in the legislature that they were popular, and there would be a big demand for them. There ought to be one of these agricultural departments in every high school in the state, and there will be one or more in every county in the next few years. Nobody ought to complain of the state supporting these schools. Why shouldn't the farmers get $500,000 a year for educating their children, when the cities get $1,000,000 for the university?"

AUGUST 12 "MINNESOTA DAY."

Gov. Johnson Will Be Principal Speaker at Seattle Exposition.

Aug. 12 will be featured at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition as Minnesota and Twin City day. A special train bearing a large party will go to Seattle from Minneapolis and St. Paul. Gov. Johnson will be there, and the largest delegation of middle western people to visit the coast this summer is expected to be in Seattle during the days when special attractions will be offered.

Minnesota's governor wanted to be in Seattle for the celebration of Swedish day, and it may be that the date for the Swedish celebration will be changed. It is now fixed for July 31, with Aug. 13 as Norwegian day.

If Swedish day is not changed Gov. Johnson will be one of the speakers on Norwegian day, and will be the principal orator for Minnesota day.

PAYMENT MADE 800 INDIANS.

A government payment has just been made at Red Lake agency to 800 Indians, on account of the sale of eleven townships near Thief River Falls, formerly included in the reservation. It is a nannuity of $26.50, pending the completion of the sale of the lands and final settlement. The payment was made to every Indian eighteen years old and over, similar amounts for every one under that age being added to a fund paid each after his or her eighteenth birthray.

Uncle Jerry Thinks It's So.

"I shouldn't wonder," said Uncle Jerry Peebles, "if there was something in this idea that the condition of a man's teeth has a whole lot to do with his moral character. The biggest liar I ever knew in my life wore a full set of false teeth."

The Hand Behind the Fashions.

IN THE SCANDINAVIAN NORTH

Gleanings of Important News of Norway, Sweden and Denmark, with Occasional Comments.

By MARTIN W. ODLAND.

NORWAY.

I have mentioned the fact that a monument will be erected to the memory of Marcus Moeller Thrane at Christiania. This brings into notice again one of the most interesting characters of modern Norway—a man who, however, is less known among the younger Norwegians on both sides of the Atlantic than among the older ones. As it seems certain that Marcus Thrane will live in Norwegian history and that his life will be studied with increasing interest, I therefore believe that the following sketch of Marcus Thrane, written by an Eau Claire, Wis., correspondent, is both timely and interesting:

A monument is soon to be erected in Christiania, Norway, in honor of a man whose name is a household word in every laborer's and peasant's home in that country, whose picture hangs in almost every home, whose body lies in an obscure grave in Lakeview cemetery in Eau Claire, and whose life history is hardly known among the Norwegians in this land, or even in this city, where he made his home for many years. The man to whom this memorila is to be erected was the late Marcus Moeller Thrane, the first to organize workingmen's associations in Norway, and who died in Eau Claire in 1890 at the home of his son, Dr. A. D. H. Thrane, who is still practicing medicine here.

Several movements have been started in Norway to erect a monument to the memory of Marcus Thrane, but in each instance they were halted by the extraordinary provision in the old Viking patriot's will prohibiting any such tribute. Even his grave in Lakeview cemetery in this city bears no tombstone, simply a big flat iron slab lying over the grave. News from Christiania indicates that the Norwegian people are going to set up a memorial in spite of the mandate in the will.

Marcus Moeller Thrane was born in 1817 in Christiania, Norway. His father encountered reverses, and Marcus was thrown upon his resources. At the age of twenty he visited Germany, France and Switzerland, supporting himself by playing the violin. In his travels he learned German and French. Returning to Norway he entered the University of Christiania, from which he was graduated in 1841, marrying soon after his graduation. He then became a school teacher and taught in several cities and towns in Norway.

In 1848, the era of great revolutionary movements in Europe, Thrane became an editor, and made it the most radical publication in Norway in the advocacy of the principles of government by the people, including universal suffrage. His advanced ideas, however, lost him his position, and from that moment he gave up his life to the organization of the workingmen of Norway. This was the first movement of its kind in Norway. Before the end of 1848 he had established the first workingmen's organizations in Norway. He traveled through the country, gave lectures and rallied the workingmen to the standards of the association. At Christiania he established a workingmen's newspaper, which gained a wide circulation.

Thrane thus wove together over 20,000 workingmen. He caused delegates to be chosen for national meetings where political platforms were enunciated. Among the planks proposed by the workingmen's party were:

Opposition to a protective tariff.

Universal suffrage.

Regulation of the country's labor conditions.

Betterment of public schools.

The foregoing planks, not considered radical in these days, were so considered then. All have since been adopted in Norway, although there has been a return to the old tariff system.

In the discussion of the demands of the platform many of the laborers were taken with the idea of threatening revolution, but Thrane opposed this, and consistently spoke against the use of force. But early one summer morning he and some hundred of the leaders under him were arrested by order of the government, a commission to investigate being created. Thrane was thrown into prison for four years. At the end of that time he was sentenced to four more years, notwithstanding the fact that he was not and could not be convicted of any crime. The words of the judgment were simply that he was the originator of the movement. The arrest and imprisonment of Thrane and the other leaders was a crushing blow to the movement, and when he emerged from prison there had been a reaction, and his cause seemed lost.

Thrane and his family came to this country in 1864 and settled in Eau Claire. His work in this country was chiefly devoted to journalism. He was a familiar figure in this city, and could be seen any day walking about the town with his cane and his two big hounds, inseparable companions. The two dogs were buried with him.

In 1883, nineteen years after he came to this country, Thrane returned to Norway to deliver lectures there on conditions in America, but the reactionary influences were so strong even then that the Workingmen's association at Christiania refused him the use of its hall. Of late years justice has been done this great Norwegian patriot, and today an ever-growing party in Norway maintains the principles for which he worked.

The labor movement of 1848 will be known in history as the "Thrane movement." Organized labor in Norway today celebrates his memory, his picture—like Lincoln's in this country—graces every home, and he is honored and revered as a hero and a patriot.

SWEDEN.

The suburbs of Stockholm now have a tax valuation of about 70,000,000 crowns. Owing to high rents in the city the population has been driven to the suburbs, and this in turn has raised real estate values in the suburbs.

The population of Christiania was 235,721 Feb. 1, 1909, according to a census taken. On Feb. 1, 1908, the population of the city was 231,687, so that the growth during the year was 4,034. This would not be regarded as a rapid growth in America, but, considering the age of Christiania, is a satisfactory increase.

A very daring book theft recently occurred at the Stockholm royal library. Some thirty volumes of the most valuable books were secured, and no trace can be found to indicate the guilty parties. Indications point to the fact that the present commercial treaty between Sweden and Germany will be considerably revised before it is renewed. The following utterance comes from the National Zeitung, one of the leading papers of Germany: "Judging from authentic reports the present commercial treaty between Sweden and Germany will not be in force after July 1, 1910. Already this year, and surely not later than next fall, negotiations will be under way for drawing up a new treaty. While at present a committee is engaged in Sweden in revising the customs tax, the details of which are kept secret, it is firmly believed in Germany that the customs taxes will be materially increased. Germany believes that Sweden is in this respect discriminating against her, and a protest from the German government is likely to be forthcoming in the near future."

The funeral of J. A. W. Lindmansson, the master bookbinder of Stockholm, took place from the Klara church a few days ago. The event was a most impressive one, as deceased was a prominent citizen of the city, and was well known for his many philantropics. His will makes, among others, the following donations: To the home for widows, 400,000 crowns; to the home for men, 400,000 crowns; to the civic aid society, 50,000 crowns; to the industrial society, 50,000 crowns; to the Stockholm hospital, 30,000 crowns; book sellers' help association, 20,000 crowns; to the Masonic orphans' home, 20,000 crowns; to the Masonic hospital, 20,000 crowns; to the mission orphanage, 10,000 crowns; society for prevention of cruelty to animals, 5,000 crowns; to Klara congregation poor fund, 5,000 crowns. His will also provided for pensions for a great many of his employes with large cash donations for others. His donations during his lifetime were many, as he desired to keep his fortune down to the million mark. His memory will long live in the hearts of a grateful people.

Owing to difficulties with Director Ranft of the Ropal opera house of Stockholm over a score of the company have thrown up their positions. The result is that the theater-going public have missed some of their favorites, and the latter part of the season has been rather unsatisfactory.

Anton Nilsson, the Malmo dynamiter, whose crime caused one death, has now commenced serving his sentence in the prison at Langholmen. At the station a big party of his socialist friends were on hand to give him a greeting. Cries of "Long live Anton Nilsson! Down with class distinctions!" were heard on every hand. So dense did the throng become that the officers in charge of the man locked him up in the station until the way could be cleared.

The Snowy Day.

I like to watch the children play, upon a wintry, snowy day; like little elves they run about, and leap and slide, and laugh and shout. This side of heaven can there be such pure and unmixed ecstasy? I lean upon ye rustic stile, and watch the children with a smile, and think upon a vanished day, when I, as joyous, used to play, when all the world seemed young and bright, and every hour had its delight; and, as I brush away a tear, a snowball hits me in the ear.—Walt Mason in the Emporia Gazette.

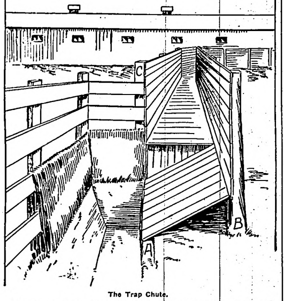
What Government Experts and Other Prominent Writers Say on Agriculture and Allied Topics.

WITHOUT DIPPING PLANT BREEDER FACES FAILURE

One of Essentials of Sheep Raising Is to Keep Sheep Free from All Kinds of Vermin to Secure Immunity from Scab.

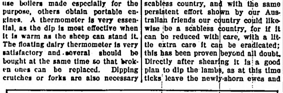


The Trap Chute.

Plan showing chute approach and receiving end of dipping tank. The trap is a continuation of the floor of the chute, but slants into the tank. It should be about five or six feet long and may be exposed as shown in the drawing or may be inclosed by erecting an upright at A, slanting the end between A and B and hanging a curtain between A and C. A splash curtain made of ducking should be provided in order to prevent waste of dip when the sheep falls into the tank.

Dipping plants vary greatly in size and style according to the conditions they have to satisfy; however, we present herewith illustrations embodying ideas now commonly found in the most approved plants. The farmer who has but a small number of sheep to dip can use a portable vat for dipping, turning a part of the shed into a catching pen and holding the sheep after dipping for a moment at the top of the incline to allow draining, thus doing away with the necessity of a draining pen, says the Homestead. The dip in the tank may be kept warm by dipping out as it cools and replenishing with hot dip from a large kettle or caldron. Where a large flock is to be dipped it is economical in the long run to build a permanent plant. Such a plant consists of collecting pens and draining yards. Heating tanks and boilers will have to be provided, and for this purpose some use boilers made especially for the purpose, others obtain portable engines. A thermometer is very essential, as the dip is most effective when it is warm as the sheep can stand it. The floating dairy thermometer is very satisfactory and several should be bought at the same time so that broken ones can be replaced. Dipping crutches or forks are also necessary in order to guide the sheep through the tank and help others which may be overcome. Two types of these forks are illustrated. The handles should be long and as strong as an ordinary fork handle.

"Modern Sheep" has this to say on the subject of dipping: "The sheep breeder that expects to run his flock successfully without the somewhat boresome work of dipping is doomed to failure. It is profitable to dip once a year, and in most cases twice; even if there is no sign of vermin in the flock it should be dipped as a matter of prevention. Remember that prevention is better than cure, in this case as well as in any other. The loss of mutton and wool through the inroads of vermin and parasites, such as ticks, lice, scab, etc., it may safely be said, is a hundredfold greater than the cost of dipping. Just as long as sheep breeders look upon dipping as an unnecessary trouble, just so long will our flocks be infested with such troubles as are mentioned above. Although our laws are somewhat stringent on the dipping question, the disappearance of parasitic troubles from our flock is not yet in sight. If every sheepman in the United States would dip his sheep thoroughly at proper intervals in some good proprietary dip we should be soon free from such terrible scourges as scab, ticks, etc. Australia, whose flocks are the largest in the world and which at one time were so badly affected with scab, is now a scabless country, and with the same persistent effort shown by our Australian friends our country could likewise be a scabless country, for if it can be reduced with care, with a little extra care it can be eradicated; this has been proven beyond all doubt. Directly after shearing it is a good plan to dip the lambs, as at this time ticks leave the newly-shorn ewes and make their home on them. While no doubt a great deal of good has been accomplished by the enforcement by the department of agriculture of the use of lime and sulphur as a dip, there is no doubt at all but what a great deal more good could be accomplished by the use of first-class proprietary dips in lieu of the lime and sulphur concoction. About six weeks or two months after shearing the whole flock, both ewes and lambs should be dipped, as such a course will insure immunity from scab and other parasitic troubles for a considerable time.



Ground Plan of Dipping Plant.

CP, CP are collecting pens closed or opened to the chute by a gate. C is chute which leads to T, the trap, where the sheep are plunged into the dipping tank. Sometimes a pen, D, is used where several sheep are kept as a decoy to those in the chute. On the chute side of this pen wire netting should be used. DP, DP are dripping pens. When one is full the gate is used to close it, opening at the same time the other pen.

Pruning Trees and Shrubs.—Pruning of shrubs and trees is a thinning out process which is invigorating unless carried to an extreme. It allows the remainder of the plant to receive the nourishment which is saved by cutting unsightly or unsymmetrical branches. A stronger growth is made possible in the rest of the plant. To get the best results pruning should be done annually, thus removing all superfluous wood and better preserving the health and shape of the plant.

All woody plants should be pruned when transplanted. The roots are necessarily reduced and active growth retarded by the transplanting process, so the top of the plant should be reduced correspondingly to lessen the amount of evaporation. In most cases the top should be cut back at least one-half, while in fruit trees all side branches are removed entirely, leaving nothing but the stem. This leaves the tree to form new branches in accordance with its new surroundings. In trees three or four years old several of the main branches are left, but they are cut back one-half, so as [illegible] new top.

Spring is undoubtedly the best time for pruning in most cases. The wounds will heal quickly. The colder the climate the later pruning should be deferred. Severe pruning such as is sometimes necessary with laurels, box and yew, should be done about April, as the shrubs will then soon recover.

Experimenting with Yaks in Canada.—A small herd of yaks has been presented by the duke of Bedford to the Canadian government and will be placed on the central experiment farm under the charge of the department of agriculture. There are six individuals in the herd, and it is sought to ascertain their suitability for domestication in the northern parts of the Dominion. They constitute the most important form of animal life to be found in Tibet, being used for all purposes except tillage and draught, and conceivably may become a valuable economic factor in those chill and lofty regions of the far northwest, where conditions [illegible]

MODERN HEN HOUSES AND COLONY SYSTEM BEST

Practical Poultry Raisers Have Made Many Changes and Improvements in Order to Secure the Best Results from Large Flocks.

Since the first open-front poultry house was brought to the notice of breeders a great many changes and improvements have been made, says a writer in the Country Gentleman. Too much and too little ventilation has been tried; too much is as bad as too little. The one necessary feature is to provide the proper supply of fresh air.

The small building is 20 feet long and 12 feet wide. This has two glass windows in the front, each window containing 18 panes of 8x10-inch glass. In the center, there is a large open space ten feet long and four feet wide; inside of this is a roll curtain made of cotton duck, which is left open during all kinds of weather, excepting wet and below zero. The nests are in the rear; one is open and the other closed. The eggs are gathered from the front through the nest door. The hens fly up from the floor on to a board or platform, called the alighting board, and enter the nests from the rear.

We do not wish to criticise this house; we simply call attention to the fact that with so large an opening, the hens on the roosts at night are almost as much exposed as they would be out in the open. The curtain is rolled down and fastened with hooks and eyelets about the inside of the frame. The question to be settled satisfactorily is whether the hens in a house like this, with the window open night and day in all kinds of weather excepting rain, snow or below zero weather, will be sufficiently comfortable to produce eggs in winter. The second question is, if exposed to the open-air conditions during the greater part of the time, will not the atmosphere inside the house be too warm in contrast when the curtain is closed? Little, if any, air passes through duck.

We know that if hens spend the night on a roosting place that is comfortably warm, and early in the morning go from there out into the cold air, they are apt to take cold, which frequently develops into roup. The question to be settled is, will not the inside of this building become so warm when the curtain is down as to create a condition that will produce ailments among the fowls?

Poultrymen all over the world have reached the conclusion that the colony system is the best for poultry. Fowls kept confined in small houses and yards lose their vigor and vitality; those grown on the range are much more vigorous and show greater vitality than yarded fowls.

In order to be successful with the colony system, large flocks are kept, because it is more economical and they are more easily handled. The average farmer keeps from 300 to 500 hens; if a house can be built in which this number can be kept all the year round, a great advantage will be secured. It is easier to feed and water a flock of 500 than to feed and water four flocks of 50; it is easier to clean and care for one house, even though it be large, than for four small houses. If 500 hens can be kept in one house and produce a yield of eggs during the entire winter, a great advantage is gained.

Locality is an important factor. Poultry can be more closely housed in California, Maryland and the Carolinas than in New York and states farther north. The house we will describe is located on the Rancocas poultry farm, in the pine district of New Jersey. Last winter there were 21 days in which the hens were confined to the building; this winter there has been more snow, and the hens have been more confined than before. In the building to be described, 500 laying hens and the proper number of males with each flock have been housed all winter. The house is placed in the center of a three-acre field; about the house there is a sufficient growth of scrub oak and pine trees to furnish shelter and shade for all kinds of weather.

The house is 16 feet wide and 100 feet long; there are eight glass windows in front, each one of which contains 18 panes of 8x10-inch glass. Between these windows are frames 2½ feet wide by four feet long, closed with muslin. At each end of the house toward the front are doors through which the attendants pass in caring for the fowls; this is shown by the floor plan. The roosts are in the rear of the building; in placing the roosts, nine inches of space is provided for each fowl. The dropping-board is about three feet from the floor and open beneath. Self-feeding hoppers, which are kept filled with beef scrap, grit, charcoal and shell, are placed at each end of the building. In the center is a large feed hopper, which is kept filled with dry mash. Four round earthen crocks are used for water. The nest boxes are in the front between the glass windows and below the curtain windows, and are arranged so as to be out of the way, and the shape of the top prevents the hens roosting on them. The floors of the house are cement and are covered over with cut straw as a litter.

BARK BEETLES DO MUCH DAMAGE

Two Species Injure Peach and Cherry Trees—How to Eradicate Them.

Last year two species of bark beetles caused great damage to peach and cherry trees in various quarters of the state, especially in northern Ohio on the Marblehead peninsula. One species, Scolytus rugulosus, commonly known as the shot hole borer, is an old offender and attacks nearly all varieties of fruit trees and some forest trees. The second species, Phloeotribus liminaris, which has been called the peach bark beetle is a comparatively new pest and largely confines its injuries to cherry and peach. The work of the two species is very similar. The adult beetles bore through places in the bark of living or dead trees, into dead peach or cherry wood piled up for stovewood, into the twigs of brush heaps or into any suitable wood upon which they can feed and in which make brood chambers.

When they enter the living sapwood of peach and cherry and make galleries through the same, their presence is nearly always indicated by excessive exudations of gum from the infested trunks and limbs. Weakened trees are preferred by the beetles but those in perfect health may be so repeatedly attacked that they finally offer the right conditions for breeding, and the insects then mass their attack on the exhausted trees, making short work of their final destruction. Trees are often practically destroyed before their owners become aware there is anything wrong.

The following remedy is recommended:

For trees seriously injured: Cut the trees back to stubs of the main limbs and apply barnyard manure or commercial fertilizer, seven to eight pounds per tree, in spring. The following formula is suggested for commercial fertilizer: Phosphoric acid, eight per cent.; nitrogen, five per cent.; potash, two per cent. Give a second application of three or four pounds per tree about the first of June. Apply in a circle equal to the spread of the limbs and rake, hoe, or disk into the soil. Apply a thick coat of whitewash by means of a broom, the last week in March or during the first two weeks in April. Give a second application the second week in July; and a third about the first of October. Add one-fourth pound of table salt to each pail of whitewash to make is stick longer.

For trees seemingly healthy and slightly attacked or liable to attack: Fertilize, cultivate and whitewash.

In all cases carefully burn all trimmings and dead wood and grub out dead trees and burn so as to limit breeding grounds.

Handling the Young Pigs.—When the weaning of young pigs begins in earnest, they are separated all day, but allowed to sleep with their dams at night. Finally, they are let in once in 24 hours to draw out the milk for two or three days, and then separated entirely, the sows being taken away out of sight and hearing.

Of course, all this is impossible without good feeding platforms, light handy hurdles and gates that open and close at a touch. The man who would try to do this separating and turning together with only fences, bars or clumsy gates would find a big contract on his hands.

The Restoration

By Melville F. Ferguson

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

"You want a piece for the paper?"

The Chronicle reporter, poring over the long list of trivial accident cases on the hospital blotter, turned and found a solemn-visaged orderly at his elbow.

"What's doing, Buckley?" he asked, eagerly. "Murder? Suicide?"

"Murder!" sniffed Buckley. "I got a piece for your paper that would make a murder look like a lacerated thumb. 'Member the man we put a new ear on?"

The Chronicle man remembered. Columns had been written about Dr. Hoffman's achievement.

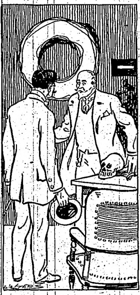
"Well," the orderly continued, "we been turnin' out new ears on the average of one a month ever since. Never dreamed there was such a mob o' people without ears. It's as bad as when new noses was the fad. Yes, sir, ears is in great demand, and the price is risin' every day."

"What's this leading up to—an ear trust?" the reporter incautiously inquired.

Buckley transfixed him with a stony glare.

"Feller came in here one day with both ears shy," he resumed, ignoring the interruption; "both, mind you. We never put but one on a man before. Doc Hoffman was kind o' scared o' the job. 'Sir,' says he, 'this is like to cost you $20,000 for the goods alone.' 'Very well,' says the man; 'fill out this signed check to suit yourself,' says he. 'An' you'll be three months in bed,' says the Doc. 'Hang it, man!' says the feller with the check, 'can you do this job or can't you?'

"So the Doc put an ad. in the 'Personal' columns, like this: 'Sound, healthy, cleanly men in reduced circumstances, willin' to undergo a sacrifice in return for a comfortable fortune, may hear of something to their advantage by callin' at room 408-9 Brown building, Friday afternoon, between one and three.' Say! I wish you could have seen the push! Looked like the whole town was in reduced circumstances an' hankerin' to undergo a sacrifice.



"Back Comes the Man with the New Ears, Kickin' an' Growlin'."

"Yet of all that mob there wasn't 30 that was both clean an' healthy lookin', an' when ears was mentioned the whole bunch was scared to death. But there was two—a German an' a Eyetalian—that was willin' to talk business for $10,000 per ear. The Doc talks Dutch, an' come to terms with the German in ten minutes; but he couldn't buy but one ear off of him. So I got an interpreter, an' him an' the Doc an' the Eyetalian jabbered all afternoon. It was five o'clock before the deal was finished. 'Buckley,' says the Doc, 'we've got 'em. One off the German an' one off the Eyetalian—first-class stock.'

"Well, the next day we took an ear off the Eyetalian an' put it on the patient. Six weeks later we fitted our feller with the German's ear, an' in another six weeks we discharged him as good as new, only that he was a little lumpy where the ears growed onto his head, an' one stuck out a trifle more than the other.

"The Doc was so cocky you couldn't get within a mile o' him. But in about a week, back comes the man with the new ears, kickin' an' growlin'. Said he was stone deaf. Knowed when you was talkin', because he could hear a sort o' jumble o' words, but could only understand what was wrote out a bit o' paper.

"Me an' the Doc was simply knocked silly. Every other man we put a new ear on could hear better than ever, an' we never had no call to exchange the goods. Day after day that feller kept comin' in, an' the Doc pryin' into his ears, but no use.

"By an' by he began to get melancholy, an' we shipped him off. 'If it don't do him any good,' says the Doc, 'at least it'll be good for us. We'll get a rest.' Oh, he was sore!

"First thing when he reached Southampton the man cabled Doc that he wasn't no better. An' every day after that he'd cable twice, askin' what to do, an' threatenin' to come home. Doc used to tear them cablegrams up in little pieces an' jump on 'em. Fourth day he cabled back: 'Travel. Keep on the move. Make the grand tour—an' go to Jericho,' he says to me. 'If we keep him busy, maybe he'll have no time to pester us with these fool cables.'

"It was a month ago the Doc sent that cable, an' from that time to this mornin' we never heard a word from his nibs. [illegible] seemed bright an' cheerful, an' stepped like a two-year-old.

"'Bless you, doctor,' says he, shakin' the Doc by the hand like as if he would wring his arm off. 'Bless you! How are you? Is there anybody here that speaks German?'

"'Why, yes, I can make a stab at it,' says the Doc.

"'Hey?' says the patient. 'Don't sit there an' mumble. Get somebody that speaks German or Eyetalian.'

"Doc pulls out a pad an' writes: 'I can talk German. What do you want?'

"'Talk it, then,' says the man with the new ears, 'an' we'll get along all right.'

"'Yes?' says the Doc, in Dutch. 'Do you mean to say that you can hear an' understand all right when I talk German?'

"'That's what I mean, exactly,' says he.

"An' then the whole thing come out. My boy, that feller had a German's ear an' an Eyetalian's ear. He couldn't make out a word o' English. When he was travelin' in Europe, the minute he sets foot in Germany he finds he can understand the lingo of the natives with one ear as if he was born an' bred in the country. It takes him a week to tumble to the truth, an' then he makes a bee-line for Italy an' tries the other ear. It works like a charm—he's as good as a native-born Eyetalian. Now he's come back to settle up his affairs on this side, an' then he's goin' over to live in Germany or Italy—he hasn't made up his mind which. Soon as he learns to speak the jargon he can hear he'll be all right."

The Chronicle man, forgetful of the press hour of his paper, heedless of the importance of the story, conscious only of the marvelous genius of Dr. Hoffman—and of Buckley—had long since ceased to take notes, and sat there stupefied. The orderly shook him gently by the shoulder and pointed to the clock.

"My boy," said he, "it's gettin' late—better run along. When you put this piece in the paper, keep me out of it—I might lose my job. Just say you got it from the family of the patient, an' that as they don't like publicity, they asked you not to print his name."

COCOANUT AS STAFF OF LIFE.

In Many Forms It Is the Mainstay of Inhabitants of the Tropical Islands.

It is more than a coincidence that the tree which furnishes a greater amount of available material to man than any other in the vast kingdom of vegetables is the first to spring up on the bare rocks of the newly arisen coral reef. The cocoanut, so formed that it may have floated half way across the Pacific, is thus universally distributed throughout tropical islands.

It thrives best near the sea, seldom penetrating far into the interior. Its hard shell is a coat of mail for the embryo plant, says the New Age, enabling it to stand hard usage for a protracted period and locking up securely the precious life in miniature.

The fibrous husk which envelops it, and is seldom seen in the market on account of the greatly increased bulk, breaks the jar which would be inevitable should the hard nut fall unprotected from the tall tree to the ground 60 or 90 feet below.

Such a blow would scarcely fail to break the shell, occasioning the loss of the nourishing milk so necessary to the germ. The outer husk not only breaks the jar of a fall, but buoys it up on the water, while the tough outer cuticle is waterproof.

Thus is the tree which offers to man almost in the raw state all his necessities freely scattered where the warm seas and their borders offer a footing; and from it the humble native secures sugar milk, butter, wine, vinegar, oil, candles, soap, cups, ladles, cordage, matting, thatch for roof and material for raiment—combining food, clothing and shelter in a single gift, continually making waste places habitable.

Secret of Horse Whispering.

"The most famous horse whisperer," said a Harvard psychologist at a tea, "was Con of Cork. Con would retire alone with some vicious, man-killing brute, and from the moment of his reappearance the nag would be as mild as milk. They said he whispered to it.

"Con's best-authenticated case was Rainbow, a horse belonging to Col. Westavance. Rainbow had kicked a groom to death, bitten a soldier's thumb off, rolled on a woman. They wanted to tie Rainbow's head in a blanket before Con entered the stall, but the whisperer shook his head and smiled.

"Sending everybody away, he entered. He remained in the stall half an hour. Then he whistled, and the grooms and the colonel came to him.

"Con sat on the stable floor and that holy terror of a horse lay on its back beside him, playful as a kitten.

"Mankind thought in those days that horse whispering was magic. We know better now. We know it was hypnotism exercised on animals, a lost art that offers the psychologist a fruitful field of research."

Weather in the Arctic Region.

The idea prevails that the Arctic regions are always in the grip of King Frost. A careful log kept for the Meteorological society for six months, with temperature observations taken at eight a. m., 12 noon, four p. m. and eight p. m. shows during that period that as far north as 77 degrees north latitude, or about 2,000 miles to the north of Ottawa, the average temperature at noon worked out at 33.85 degrees Fahrenheit. The greatest cold noted was on October 28 at eight a. m., in the seventieth degree of north latitude, 18 degrees Fahrenheit. The warmest occurred on September 2 at noon in the same latitude, and was 52 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature observations were kept from May 1 to October 31.

PUBLIC STATEMENT

By a Public Official—County Treasurer of Granbury, Texas.

A. A. Perkins, County Treasurer of Granbury, Hood Co., Texas, says: "Years ago a severe fall injured my kidneys. From that time I was bothered with a chronic lame back and disordered action of the kidneys helped to make life miserable for me. A friend suggested my using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, with the most gratifying results. I made a public statement at the time, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, and am glad to confirm that statement now."

More Puzzled Than Ever.

"Pardon my ignorance," said the lady passenger to the captain of the big ship, "but how do you manage to find your way across the trackless ocean?"

"By means of the compass, madam," answered the captain. "The needle invariable points to the north."

"But," queried the l. a., "suppose you wish to go south?"

Itching Torture Was Beyond Words—Slept Only from Sheer Exhaustion—Relieved in 24 Hours and Cured by Cuticura in a Month.

"I am seventy-seven years old, and some years ago I was taken with eczema from head to foot. I was sick for six months and what I suffered tongue could not tell. I could not sleep day or night because of that dreadful itching; when I did sleep it was from sheer exhaustion. I was one mass of irritation; it was even in my scalp. The doctor's medicine seemed to make me worse and I was almost out of my mind. I got a set of the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. I used them persistently for twenty-four hours. That night I slept like an infant, the first solid night's sleep I had had for six months. In a month I was cured. W. Harrison Smith, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1908."

CROWS ON GOLF LINKS.

One Fastidious Bird That Would Steal Only New Balls.

The crow seems to be attracted to golf balls in a way peculiar from the rest of the bird species. In parks where the rook and the crow abound one can notice them sitting in the trees or hopping about the putting greens in the distance watching the roll of the ball with a direct or sidelong glance expressive of the keenest interest and curiosity, which is soon translated into a desire to carry it off to the roost in the neighboring wood.

The Kew gardens adjoin the Mid-Surrey course, and in the royal preserve there used to be a fairly large colony of crows nesting among the trees. Of this convoy there was one particular crow who found his greatest amusement in mingling among the golfers and in disconcerting their play by indulging in repeated predatory campaigns against their golf-balls.

His policy was to hover in attendance on those players who used new white balls only. Those on which the paint had been chipped or which had been used in play for several rounds by an economical player were always rejected by this particular bird as being beneath his fastidious attention.

NOT DRUGS
Food Did It.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic and apparently incurable constipation yielded to the scientific food, Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were partially paralyzed and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times about every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the predigested food, Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to my great surprise Grape-Nuts digested immediately from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be unlimited." "There's a Reason."

At Waseca the city council has voted to close the saloons at 10 p. m. in summer and 9 p. m. in winter.

Down East they seem to take it for granted that Governor Johnson is as good as nominated for president in 1912.

The Winona Independent thinks the manufacturers of breakfast foods are more interesed in tariff on lumber than the price of wheat.

Great Britain wants now to build six big battleships a year. Peace hath its burdens as well as its victories, and as far as their expense is concerned can compete creditably with those of war.

Dan O'Neil's modesty is his besetting handicap. Now if the kingmaker of Thief River Falls wanted to get lots of votes for his county division proposition he would have called the new child Danoniell. The next best suggestion would have been Jeastman.

C. G. Schulz state superintendent of schools, yesterday decided that Monday, May 31, shall be observed as a school holiday, as Decoration day falls on Sunday this year. If the day were celebrated on Sunday or Saturday the teachers and children would lose their extra holiday.

"There are pillows wet with sobs; there are gentle, sensitive natures seared and warped; there are old time friends separated and walking their lonely ways with hope dead and memory but a pang; there are cruel misunderstandings that make life bare; these are but a few of the sorrows that come by the crimes of the tongue," says one who for some eighty odd years has been a listener in this harsh old world and an observer of the ways of its inhabitants.

A recent census made by the government of the undeveloped water powers in the United States—outside of Niagara—shows that 50,000,000 horse power is now going to waste, says the Little Falls Herald. What wonders will be worked when this vast power is transferred to electricity is beyond comprehension.

The Northwest must be getting rich. The bank deposits in Minnesota, North and South Dakota now reach $310,000,000, a gain of $35,000,000 in the past year Approximately there are 3f000,000 people in the three states, and if this money was divided pro rata, every man woman and child would have $10.30 in the bank. Where is your share?

Andrew French, state dairy commissioner, says: "Our report shows a considerable increase in creamery output over a year ago. This is without regard to new creameries that have been built. We have no exact figures, but our inspectors' reports show nearly all of the creameries turning out more butter than last year, and the increase will run from 10 to 15 per cent. I believe this is due to increase in the number of cows and improvement in the quality of dairy herds. It is certainly not to be attributed to better feed, as conditions in that respect have been far from good this spring."

The list of ten schools to receive state aid under the Putnam bill for special training in agriculture was made up Wednesday by the state high school board, after hearing delegations and considering the claims of forty towns applying. The schools chosen are as follows: High schools: Albert Lea, Alexandria, Hinckley, Red Wng, Canby, Glencoe and Wells: graded schools, Lewiston, Winona county; consolidated rural schools, McIntosh and Cokato. Each school is entitled to $2,500 a year of state aid toward equipping and maintaining an agricultural department, but the district must provide buildings and five acres of land. The board has allowed one school to the second, seventh, eight and ninth congressional districts, and two each to the first, third and sixth.

"WANTS THE TRUTH."

The weekly tariff editorial in the Nation contains some hot shot for the interests as represented by Senator Aldrich, the Standard Oil agent. The Nation says:

"Senator Dolliver has been most usefully applying a little western bluntness and honesty to the tariff debate. His exposure of the way in which the cotton and wool schedules have been dictated by the very men who hope to make money out of them, and of the tricks and devices and robberies with which they are stuffed, has been most effective. And the ridicule which he poured upon Senator Aldrich was refreshing. The nettled Rhode Island senator retorted, of course, that Senator Dolliver was only a democrat in disguise, had private grievances to avenge, and had got his information from wicked importers; but that is only the usual abuse visited upon a republican who dares to tell the truth about the tariff. What the country wants to know is, not what Mr. Dolliver's motives may be, but whether the facts are as he states them. Is it true, as he says, that the manufacturers who disgusted the ways and means committee with their hogish demands, went to Aldrich and got permission from him to write their own clauses in the tariff Is it the fact that the effect of the Aldrich bill would be to condemn the masses of the people to pay more for poorer clothing? If tariff rapacity is proposing to palm off shoddy and cotton as all wool, it is well that the nation should know it. For Aldrich to insinuate personal grudges and party disloyalty is of no use either to him or his clients. What has to be done is squarely to meet Senator Dolliver's charges.

THEY LAUGH TOO SOON.

The Thief River papers are just now boasting of what the promoters of the county of Pennington propose doing to the farmers after their new plan is legalized,

As usual the Thief River people reckon without their host. If county division is going to involve heavier taxation to the farmers of the smaller Red Lake county, the same holds true in the new county. In fact, the people of Pennington county will find that the greater burden will fall on them. They will find that the expenses of establishing a new county government, transcribing records and buying supplies will be a considerable item. Of course the Thief River promoters are just now assuring their farmer friends that there will be no expense for a court house, but these promises can be taken with a grain of salt. When they once get the power, it is only reasonable to expect they will use it for the benefit of their town. Granting that the new county will have an assessed valuation of $2,000,000, it will require at least $100,000 to provide buildings and pay the expenses of establishing a new county. This means five per cent bonded indebtedness to start with. The running expenses will equal the present expense of the Red Lake county government, and it means that the taxes of the new county will be double the present rate.

No wonder the farmers will hesitate to pull the Thief River chestnuts out of the fire. No wonder the people outside of Thief River protest against the ill-advised scheme. Again, we say, the Thief River promoters are laughing too early. They have not yet established the new county, and the prospects are so remote that these early laughs will two years from now seem like the vainglorious assumptions of braggarts who misjudged the temper of the people they attemped to crucify on the altar of an overweening ambition.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Wabasha Herald: The assessors have begun their work, and for the next thirty days, at least, Johnnie owns the best team, Mary Ann is undisputed owner of the piano, grandma owns the bed and table, the clock wont run at all—and poor old dad, if all he owns is listed, he still will be eligible to enter the poorhouse.

Aitkin Republican: The republican party in the last campaign promised tariff revision downward, and if the country does not get it, the party will be held responsible. The people have not very much technical or hair-splitting knowledge about the tariff, but they can tell next year whether a given protected article costs as much as it does this year.

Hutchinson Leader: Good lawyers claim that the legislature had no constitutional right to appropriate money out of the general revenue fund for roads and bridges and city streets, and the matter will be taken to the supreme court. Whether that august body will have sufficient nerve to kick to pieces that wonderfully constructed "pork barrel" is a question that interests us all.

Redwood Reveille: As almost all of our exchanges are in the southern half of the state, we looked for an almost unanimous censure of Governor Johnson for his veto of the tonnage tax. To our surprise, half of the comments are laudatory, most of the remainder ascribe to him only right motives, and only a handful burst forth in the old-fashioned withering diatrides with which the ancient partisan was wont to squelch his opponent.

Roseau Times: The friends of Governor Johnson claim that his veto of the tonnage tax will recommend him to the business world as a safe and sane possibility. From now on Governor Johnson's press agents will endeavor to keep him in the limelight, and launch his name at the next democratic national convention as the man who can lead his party to victory. As it now stands, Governor Johnson could carry Minnesota by a handsome majority, and if congress makes a muss of the tariff bill, he would carry the state by a whooping majority as a candidate for president on any old ticket.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Tariff On Hides No Benefit.

Todd County Argus: A correspondent in the Pioneer Press of April 30th criticizes Senator Nelson for saying he would vote for a tariff on hides for the benefit of the farmer. The correspondent takes the ground that a tariff on hides does not benefit the farmer, but is really a detriment to him. We are with this correspondent, that such a tariff does no help to the farmer. It operates to increase the price of harness and shoes, and on the average, farmers buy more than twenty-five dollars worth of these for every dollar's worth of hides they sell. The large packing houses buy the cattle of the farmers, and it is not likely the price paid for them will be affected by the tariff on the hides. At best the difference if any would be more than overcome by the reduction in price of leather goods providing the tariff on shoes harness, etc. is reduced at the same times hides are put on the free list. The packing houses are the ones who are deeply interested in a tariff on hides and not the farmer. The tariff on hides protects no industry as cattle are not raised for hides.

The Bread Problem.

Northfield News: The "bread problem," which Mr. J. J. Hill thinks the next generation will have to solve, would be much more puzzilng if its solution were not indicated by practical results elsewhere. It would be no problem at all if the wheat fields of the western prairies were as productive as in the days of the pioneers. It would be no problem, when farmers have learned that the productivity of the farms may be restored. It must be a matter of better methods of cultivation and a more general use of those fertilizers which make for the growth of the wheat plant. No one would be willing to admit that the soil of the west is any less fertile than the soil of Great Britain or other European countries When from an English or Scotch wheat field the crop will run anywhere from thirty to seventy bushels to the acre American farmers cannot be doing their best when they get only from eight to fifteen.

LAWS AFFECTING DAIRY INDUSTRY

Information of Value to Owners of Dairy Herds in Minnesota

The following synopsis of the provisions of the several laws enacted by the legislature, the sesson of which recently closed, is given for the benefit of the producers of and dealers in dairy and creamery products:

The pasteurization of whey delivered from cheese factories is compulsory, the same as has been the pasteuriaztion of skim milk from creameries for some time, by heating the whey to at least 180 degrees.

All who make sales of milk or cream in or to be used in municipalities, unless to be manufactured into butter or cheese, are now required to take out the usual license.

All milk or cream received or purchased for the purpose of manufacturing into butter or cheese, shall be received or purchased by weight, and paid for on the basis of the butter fat contained therein. The law provides for taking the test samples of cream by weight, and the use of no other appliance than the Babcock test for testing milk or cream; and the falsification, manipulation, overreading or underreading of such test, or the use of false reading is made a misdeameanor.

The law as amended, now not only requires the delivery of milk, cream or ice cream to persons, factories or common carriers in cans or other vessles free from filth or rust and in a wholesome condition, but requires, in addition, a thorough cleansing of such cans before returning same to shipper.

Creameries are now authorized to label butter packages as containing butter made from pasteurized milk or cream, in the event that certain provisions of the law, as to the use of effective pasteurizing apparatus, shall have been complied with.

Discrimination in prices paid for milk, cream or butter fat in different localities is a misdemeanor, and the law provides heavy penalties in the event of violations.

On and after January 1st, 1910, all operators of the Babcock testing apparatus will be required to secure license from the Dairy and Food Commissioner, after having passed a satisfatory examination.

Humor from a Duluth Viewpoint

[From the Duluth Herald.]

He had a richly upholstered eye, colored like a Carot landscape. That eye was the work of art. No common man could have done the job. It was a masterpiece, and looked as if some person had struck the victim with a pile driver. From dark blue, almost black, near the center, it gradually faded into light blue, grey, and then there came a tinge of orange and brown around the outer edges. It was beautiful.

"What's the charge?" asked the judge. "Fighting," said the officer "That wasn't a fight. It was murder," said the court. "Where's the other fellow?" A decendant of the Irish kings stood up. "Did you do that?" asked the court pointing to the smoked lamp that decorated the other prisoner's face.

"I did sor," said the son of Erin, with a decided brogue. "We were drinking together on St. Patrick's day and he said the Germans always lick the Irish."

"And then you hit him?"

"No sor, I didn't hit him then. But he said that St. Parick must have been as drunk as I was to have seen so many snakes in Ireland."

"And you hit him then?"

"No sor, I didn't hit him then. But he said he was Orangeman, and that he never saw a good Orangeman who couldn't whip seven Irishmen."

"And that's when you hit him?"

No sor. I'm a peaceable man, and I wasn't looking for trouble. I let that pass. But then he started talking about me ancestors. He went away back to me great grandfather and came right down to me, telling me what he thought of each. And some of his remarks weren't complimentray. Finally, he came to me, and he called me an Irish gorilla."

"And there's where the trouble began"

"No sor, I didn't hit him then. I didn't care, so let it pass."

"But what started the trouble?"

"Well, he got to discussing birthplaces. He said he came from Becker county and his name was Bjorge. Then I hit him."

"Case dismissed," said the court.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.
Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

S.S.S. HEALS OLD SORES

No old sore exists merely because the flesh is diseased at that particular spot; if this were true simple cleanliness and local applications would heal them. Whenever a sore or ulcer refuses to heal readily, the blood is at fault; this vital fluid is filled with impurities and poisons which are being constantly discharged into the place, feeding it with noxious matter and irritating and inflaming the nerves and tissues so the sore cannot heal. These impurities in the blood may be the remains of some constitutional trouble, the effect of a debilitating spell of sickness, leaving disease germs in the system, or the absorption by the blood of the fermented refuse matter which the bodily channels of waste have failed to remove. Again the cause may be hereditary, the diseased blood of ancestry being handed down to posterity; but whatever the cause, the fact that the sore will not heal shows the necessity for the very best constitutional treatment. There is nothing that causes more worry and anxiety than an old sore which resists treatment. Every symptom suggests pollution and disease—the discharge, the red, angry looking flesh, the pain and inflammation, and the discoloration of surrounding parts, all show that deep down in the blood there are morbid and dangerous forces at work, constantly creating poisons which may in the end lead to Cancer. Local applications are valuable only for their cleansing and antiseptic effects; they do not reach the blood, where the real cause is located, and can therefore have no real curative worth. S. S. S. heals old sores by going down to the fountain-head of the trouble and driving out the poison-producing germs and morbid matters which are keeping the ulcer open. It removes every particle of impurity from the circulation and makes this life-stream pure, fresh and health-sustaining. Then as new, rich blood is carried to the place the healing begins, all discharge ceases, the inflammation leaves, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the sore or ulcer is well. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers and finest of tonics, just what is needed in the treatment, and in addition to curing the sore will build up and strengthen every part of the system. Special book on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice desired furnished free to all who write. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

I want to recommend S. S. S. to any who are in need of a blood purifier, and especially as a remedy for sores and obstinate ulcers. In 1877 I had my leg badly cut on the sharp edge of a barrel, and having on a blue woolen stocking the place was badly poisoned from the dye. A great sore formed and for years no one knows what I suffered with the place. I tried, it seemed to me, everything I had ever heard of, but I got no relief and I thought I would have to go through life with an angry, discharging sore on my leg. At last I began the use of S. S. S., and it was but a short time until I saw that the place was improving. I continued it until it removed all the poison from my blood and made a complete and permanent cure of the sore. JNO. ELLIS.

PLUMMER

The long looked for log drive of the S. P. K. Lumber company arrived here this week and the mill will be started as soon as a crew can be secured and necessary repairs made, probably next week. Manager Parker came down from Bemidji Friday and has spent the past week here making all the arrangements contingent to starting the plant. Most of his time has been spent along the river, watching the logs and hurrying them along at every opportunity. The drivers got into town Wednesday and proceeded to increase the liquor sales of Plummer for the month of May as much as possible.

Carl Bourman, one of the pioneer settlers in the vicinity of Lillo, died Wednesday morning from Bright's disease. He had been ailing for the past two years, but it was just within the past few days that his sickness took on a serious form. Besides his wife, Mr. Bourman left two sons and two daughters to mourn his death. Mr. Bourman was a native of Norway, and came to Lillo thirteen years ago taking a homestead when the land was opened for settlement in 1899. His thrifty nature aided much in providing a good home for himself and family, and his genial disposition drew around him a large circle of friends, who extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.—Pioneer.

T. H. Jackson, of Greenbush, arrived Thursday evening and has rented the building and fixtures formerly occupied by Nap Miller and has opened a barber shop. Mr. Jackson is reputed to be a good workman and will, without doubt, do a good business.

Farmers who are interested in the plan to start a co-operative elevator here are reminded that the next meeting will be held at the village hall on Monday, May 24th, and that all who are interested are expected to be there. Subscription lists are being circulated and and it is thought that enough will have been subscribed before that time to insure the completion of the plans. It is also understood that plans will be discussed at this meeting with a view to starting a monthly market day.

A deal was concluded this week by B. E. Burkee whereby J. K. Hannay sold the Hotel Markham to F. H. Busse of Odin, Minn., who takes not only the hotel but all of the furniture and fixtures. Mr. Busse is an experienced hotel man and it is his intention to spend a considerable sum of money to put the building in good repair and refurnish it from top to bottom. He is to move here with his family before June 1st and will open the hotel just as soon as the repairs can be made.

"CAMERA OUTLINE" FAD AMONG SOCIAL ELECT

Revised Form of the Silhouette Produced by Means of Photography.

Society is captive to a new style of photography, the "camera outline."

Some people speak of the newest form of reproducing the features as a silhouette, but the designation is hardly accurate.

In the real silhouette the profiles were made by tracing the shadow made on a sheet of white paper by the light of a candle.

This style was primitive, and would be laughed at today. But it answered the purpose in that period. In fact the modern world owes its sole knowledge of the features of many noted men and women to the vogue of the silhouette a couple of centuries ago.

But the up-to-date silhouette is a very different affair. It is made by the use of the camera. Naturally the photographer's modern machine can be relied upon to obtain a far more accurate reproduction of the outline of one's features than could result from the drawing of a shadow projected on a sheet of paper. Therefore the outline of the camera yields may be said to be absolutely correct.

To complete the silhouette it is only necessary to fill in the rest of the picture in black.

Naturally the eyes with all their expression are lost, a lot of other important detail is swallowed up in the wave of black paint, but so lifelike are the outlines that it is really possible to recognize the subject of the photographer's art.

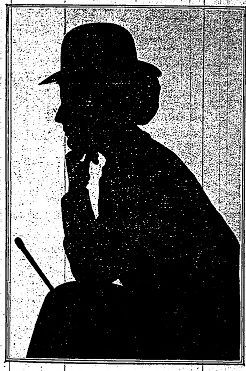
Produces Lifelike Result.

Haeseler of Philadelphia is one of those who has been especially successful in producing a lifelike result.

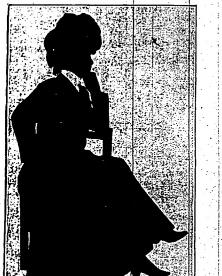
Falling into the fad, many of his wealthiest and most important subjects, socially, have sat to him for pictures in the newest mode, and it is his habit to let those who visit him go over a bunch of the "camera outlines," as they should technically be called, and strive to identify their subjects.

This is done with surprising success. One hostess even went further, by giving a dinner, and having her guests compete in a game of seeing who could identify most of a collection of silhouettes, borrowed from the increasing collection of Mr. Haeseler. Most of the subjects were well known to the guests, but it was remarkable to what an extent he oulines proved to be recognizable.

Among striking examples of this kind of work may be mentioned the well-known face of Mr. William M. Chase, the artist, a prominent administrator of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Mr. Chase is never seen without a silk hat, a pair of eyeglasses on his straight nose, and from them hanging a cord. His beard goes to a point.



"Study of a Huntress."

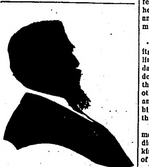


Miss Clarke, Whose Slender Lines Show Up Well in Silhouette.

Nobody who knows Mr. Chase could fail to identify this silhouette likeness of the artist, and he himself says it looks lots more like than pictures his artist friends have painted.

Are Quickly Recognized.

The strong, but somewhat rotund features of Dr. S. Wier Mitchell also quickly betray his identity as shown in the camera outline. Neither could Admiral Longnecker, a well-known naval man, deny his identity.



Dr. S. Wier Mitchell.

The musicianship of Wassili Leps, the violinist, is made very clear in the high forehead, the hair brushed back, the straight nose, sensitive chin and eyeglasses.

But Mr. Haeseler has not confined himself to reproducing faces. He has also turned his art to doing full length figures, and here he gains still more notable triumphs. Miss Bertha Clarke, a society leader, noted for her slender lines, could never deny herself as she shows in this outline. The silhouette of the child painting a picture book is also very clever and novel, combining the silhouette with the modern photograph most interestingly. Perhaps one of Mr. Haeseler's best and most artistic poses is that entitled "Study of a Huntress." It is a picture of a well known New York society girl and is said to be a most faithful image of the young lady.

No photograph so fully did justice of this classical outline as does the silhouette made by Mr. Haeseler.

Apparently the beautiful effect is accomplished by reason of the concentration on the outline alone, and the elimination of everything else. The perfect lines with the strong nose, high forehead, small mouth and perfect chin recalls some of the classic heads made by the sculptors of antiquity to picture the beautiful women of their period.

Goes Far Back for Origin.

The silhouette art goes far back for its origin. The profile or shadow outline of the human figure, filled in of a dark color, the shadows and extreme depths being sometimes indicated by the heightening effort of gum or some other materials, was known among the ancients, and by them carried to a high degree of perfection, as instance the monochromes on Etruscan vases.

But the term silhouette is of very modern origin comparatively, for it did not come to be applied to this kind of work until after the middle of the eighteenth century.

Many persons entertain the fallacious idea that Etienne de Silhouette, from whom the art takes its name, was the inventor of this kind of picture, or at least had something to do with perfecting it.

As a matter of fact Silhouette had not a thing to do with reproducing the human features. In fact it is only as a memory of political derision that his name is remembered in that connection today.

Silhouette was the French minister of finance in 1759, and he patriotically set for himself the difficult task of replenishing the national treasury, which had become sadly depleted during the source of long wars with the Britains and Prussia.

Silhouette attacked the wealthy nobles for their prodigality, and earned their dislike. He instituted sweeping economies on every hand.

Soon he came to be ridiculed by the very country he was so honestly serving and his parsimony made him the most admirable possible subject for caricature.

Knocked Out by Daguerre.

Thus every fashion that was plain or cheap was styled by the wits as "a la Silhouette," and as the profiles made by shadwos thrown on paper were then very much in vogue among the poor, the rich preferring to give commissions to painters to hand their lineaments down to posterity, the word "Silhouette" attached itself firmly to the black profile.

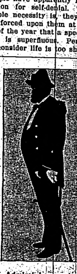
For many years the silhouette had to make its fight against the work of the artist, with brush, pen or pencil. But then came Daguerre, and in his train, followed the camera, with the whole host of improvements and inventions, until the marvellous photography of the twentieth century had become an accomplished fact.

But society, ever prone to be fickle, and dissatisfied with that which it has had for any length of time, has declared that the pendulum has swung back again, and that the silhouette is once more the vogue.

Therefore the rush to have every member of the family taken in the "new-old" way, with camera lending its help to make the illusion more realistic.

Passing of Lent.

People have apparently lost the inclination for self-denial. That disagreeable necessity is, they think, so often forced upon them at other seasons of the year that a special season for it is superfluous. Perhaps, too, they consider life is too short.



Admiral Longnecker.

DIGGING OUT THE SNAPPER

Turtles Find Ready Market in Philadelphia.

"Philadelphia has not its annual gaze of eager expectancy fixed on Hunterdon and Mercer counties, New Jersey," said a man who lives very near to those divisions of the Mosquito State, "and the local catchers are getting ready to haul out eels and skin 'em. Snapper bait is what those eels are handed out and skinned for. No other morsel tempts the snapper like skinned eels, and no morsel seems to carry to the Philadelphia gastronome such satisfying quality of epicurean delight as snapper.

"Snapper? He is the big and ugly saurian armored like a crocodile that rises on his four stout legs when he is mad, throws out from its hiding place in his corrugated shell a trip hammer head at the end of a thick wrinkled neck and lays hold with a pair of viselike horny jaws onto anything he has reached for. He is known to science as Chalydra serpentina and to the sententious but apt popular vocabulary of west Jersey as snappin' torkle. He is the big and ugly turtle it would surprise the New Yorker to see in his home market.

"But Philadelphia dotes on the snapper, and spring delights have not all returned until the snapper comes up out of the mud. Philadelphia depends largely on Hunterdon and Mercer counties for snappers. It isn't because the snappers of those counties are any better than those that the subaqueous mud of other district yields, but the industry of snapper fishing and mining seems to have been systematized and carried on in Hunterdon and Mercer counties as it has nowhere else, and thus the snapper supply is ever dependable.

"Fishing for snapping turtles in the sluggish and muddy bottomed creeks of west Jersey, connected as it is somewhat with mining, isn't something you might put on the list of high class sport, but yet there are times when you may have quite a lot of excitement along with it when you get a forty-pound snapper in the boat with you, for instance, and snappers of that bulk are by no means uncommon. A snapper such as that isn't as quick as a bulldog, but he can fight like it, and if you are inclined to leave him unhampered he will give you as lively a time as you care to seek.

"The water in which this turtle fishing is done is about three feet deep. The depth of the mud where the mining for 'em takes place nobody knows exactly, but the snapper goes down into it anywhere from a foot and a half to two feet. Stout lines are fastened to stakes driven into the muddy bottom of the creeks 200 feet or so apart. Each line is tied to the ring in a very strong but not large fish hook. The hooks are baited with chunks of skinned eel.

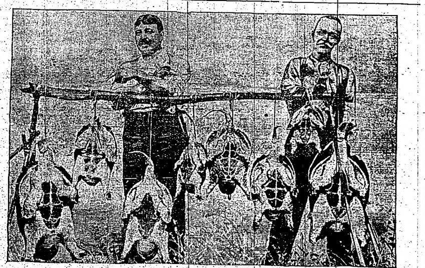
"The snapper lines are left to themselves from an hour and a half to two hours. Then the fisherman rows out in his flat bottom boat to inspect them.

"The Jersey fisherman then knows whether a snapper is on his line or not the instant he pulls a stake out of the mud, for if there is, the line won't come along up with the stake. The moment one of those snappers feels the hook in his jaw he burrows down in the mud on the creek bottom, buries himself and stays there. If he only knew it he could have walked away with hook, line, stake and all. Then it is up to the fisherman to turn miner. He is equipped with a long and strong stake fashioned for the purpose, and with it he digs down, gets the end of it under the snapper and pries him out of the mud. Then he pulls him up to the top of the water by the line.

"Watching his chance now, the fisherman gets the snapper by the tail and lifts him into the boat. Once in the boat, the snapper is in for fight, and the only way his captor can handle him is to take him in hand after a custom peculiar to these Jersey snapper fisheries and put the bridle on him. A stout stick, an inch wide and four inches long, with a long string tied to one end of it, is held out.

"The instant the turtle sees it he shoots out his head and snaps his jaws on the stick. The string is then passed along one side of him, under his shell at the tail, back along the other side, and then tied to the end of the stick at the side of his jaws. Then he is bitted and bridled. He is unable to close his jaws on the fisherman's fingers, the hook is removed from his mouth and the snapper is ready to be forwarded to Philadelphia and a market. Of course the snapper could be knocked in the head with an axe when landed in the boat and the fight ended then and there; but then he would be dead meat and might just as well have been left unmoved in the mud, for Philadelphia takes only snappers on the hoof, so to speak.

"Thousands of snapping turtles are fished for and mined in Hunterdon and Mercer counties during the season, and most of them are shipped to Philadelphia. The snapper harvesters don't care to catch the very large snappers, for turtles weighing from ten to twenty pounds are the best. There is a tradition in Hunterdon county that once a seventy-five pound snapper was taken from one of her creeks, but Hunterdon county tradition is proverbially something of a whopper itself. Philadelphia pays sometimes as much as $1.50 a head for Jersey snappers, but the average price is 75 cents."



DAY'S CATCH OF SNAPPERS.

MR. PENGUIN AND HIS WATCH.

He Finally Makes Up His Mind as to the Best Time to Wind It.

"Probably most people," said Mr. Penguin, "wind their watches at night just before they go to bed, but jewelers tell us that this is not a good thing to do, for the reason that the time of our going to bed may vary. We may be up later some nights than others, and it is best for a watch to wind it at regular intervals at the same hour daily. So they tell us that a better time to wind your watch is in the morning.

"To both these plans I find objections in my case. I don't like to wind my watch in the morning because in winter I find it cold when I get up, and I don't like to wind her then for fear that the mainspring will be a little more brittle then with the cold and I'll break it. So, as I don't consider that this plan would be good for the year around I don't follow it. I wind, or always have wound, my watch at night.

"That plan never worked well with me because I am always forgetting it. Common thing for me to find when I look at my watch in the morning that I had forgotten to wind it the night before. Now I have hit upon a plan which seems to work nicely.

"I wind the clocks in our house and I have long been accustomed to wind them at a certain fixed hour daily, namely, when I came home at the end of the day and before we eat dinner. Dinner we always have at a regular hour, and always every day just before dinner I wind the clocks—a long settled habit.

"Then it struck me one day: Why not wind my watch at the same time? You see? Association of ideas—clocks, watch, wind all the timepieces at the same time. If I could remember one I ought to be able to remember all; and that's what I am doing now. When I have wound the clocks I wind my watch, and so far under this arrangement I haven't forgotten it once."

"By the way, what did you give your wife for Christmas?"

"A receipted bill for the bedroom set she got me on the installment plan the Christmas before."

Mrs. Malone's patience was much tried by a servant who had a habit of standing around with her mouth open. One day, as the maid waited upon the table, her mouth was open, as usual, and her mistress, giving her a severe look, said:

ADRIFT IN SOUTH SEAS.

Sailor's Trying Experience With Shipwreck and Hunger.

A walk of 230 miles, the weathering of a cyclone on a bamboo raft and an existence of three weeks on turtle eggs and iguanas are some of the experiences which recently befell Capt. Williams, in charge of the lugger Nebraska, which was lost on Green Hill Island, 100 miles or thereabouts from Port Darwin, in the northern territory of Australia.

When the lugger broke up Capt. Williams swam to Green Hill Island and then tried to make the mainland in a dingy which he was able to make seaworthy. He was caught in a squall and after drifting for three days was carried into the gulf and eventually landed on Field Island, off the mouth of the Alligator river.

This island is destitute of water, but some rain fell, and he eked out an existence for twelve days on the small supplies thus obtained and turtle eggs. Both turtles and alligators were numerous. He then re-embarked in the dingy and made his way into the mouth of the West Alligator river, but could find no fresh water. He obtained from the bark of trees sufficient liquid to sustain life until rain fell.

Abandoning the dingy he made his way up the east bank of the Wildman river, living on sweet potatoes and iguanas. His matches having been exhausted, he carried fire sticks with him. He eventually crossed Wildman river and came out on what he thinks was Lake Finnis, where he found plenty of swamp berries, iguanas and other native food.

On striking the Adelaide river jungle Williams saw plenty of buffalo, but his only weapon being a revolver he did not shoot any. He got down to the Adelaide river near what is known as Lawrie's landing, where he built himself a raft of bamboo and crossed. He had not long gone south when a cyclonic squall came on and blew the timber down all round him. He narrowly escaped death, but pluckily resumed his 230 mile walk till he reached Port Darwin.

WOMEN'S HATS SAVE LEVEES.

A Style That Has the Approval of Lower Mississippi Planters.

"Women's hats are doing much to save the levees along the Mississippi river in Louisiana," said Henry R. Lewis. This statement sounds fantastic, but of the fashionable fur hats it is certainly true.

"Muskrats, which for years have cost the state no end of trouble and thousands of dollars by their depredations in the levees, are now most eagerly sought by the millinery trade throughout the county, and hunters in Louisiana are hunting them in lieu of other game.

"For years the muskrats have burrowed in the levees, and in nearly every case where there has been a crevasse along the river front the cause was traced to a muskrat hole. The state has tried several means to get rid of the pests, but without success.

"During the last winter the millinery stores in New Orleans bought several hundred muskrat furs from hunters in the different parishes and placed them on turbans, which now so resemble a cat curled up on milady's coiffure. Ever since then rats have been popular upon as well as in the the pompadour or 'psyche.'

"Several of the more progressive hunters quickly realized that muskrats were marketable and gave up the pursuit of ducks and other game. One hunter alone in February killed 6,000 rats, for which he received 20 cents apiece.

"Other hunters have followed the lead of this mighty nimrod, and it begins to look as if the state will soon rid itself of the industrious rodents whose burrowings have for many years endangered the cities and towns along Louisiana's river fronts."

Balzac by the Yard.

A well-known author not long ago stepped into the bookstore, but for some little time could not attract the attention of a clerk, all interest being centered in a stout gentleman who was strolled over in that direction and heard the head clerk remark:

"And now, sir, you have almost completed a library of which you will be proud; but, of course, you will want Balzac?"

"Waal, I don't know, now. You see, we've only got two feet and seven inches' space left," the old gentleman replied. "Go ahead and measure him, though, and if he isn't too wide I'll take him too," he added.

Spanish Executioner's Remorse.

A curious story comes from Seville. On Sunday night the local executioner died, his death being due to remorse. For several years he had carried out any executions, but recently he was summoned to Cordova to inflict the final penalty on some criminals. The impression made upon him was so painful that he was unable to face the ordeal when condemned in Seville, and the sentence will have to be carried out by the Madrid executioner.

What Charlie Had.

Several of the scholars had returned to Sunday school after being absent some weeks on account of illness. "I had the measles," said one little girl. "I had the mumps," said another. "So did I," said a third. The superintendent heard them, and, addressing a curly headed boy, said: "Well, Charlie, you were absent, too. What did you have?"

Charlie's face flushed. He thought a moment and then sang out in high treble, "I had a little brudder!"

He has been an enthusiastic cyclist and can tell a good story of adventures encountered on the highways of western England. ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash —and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

That Blush That Won't Come Off.

One can now have a blush tattooed on her face that is warranted "not to come out in the wash" or to yield to the weather. It will not come and go, of course, like the delicate flush with which novelists so conveniently endow their heroines, and one is not sure whether it is not better to trust to Providence for an occasional blush than to wear it continually and never be able to pale on occasion. If one did naturally blush, moreover, with the "healthy flush" already placed there by artificiality's artful aid, goodness alone knows what the effect would be. Our last state of rosiness might be worse than our first of pallor.

Matter of Stories.

"Yes," said the visitor from Pumpkinville, "you have some pretty tall structures here in Chicago, but our town erected a building of more than a thousand stories last summer, and—"

"A building of more than a thousand stories!" echoed his Chicago friend. "Say, what brand do you smoke, anyway?"

"It's a fact," rejoined the Pumpkinville native. "I was referring to our new public library."

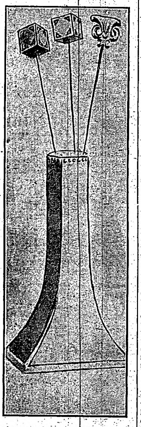
WOMAN AND HOME

HOLDS THE HATPINS

PRETTY VASE ESPECIALLY DESIGNED FOR THEM.

Meant to Hang at the Side of the Dressing Table—Can Be Had in Colors to Match the Room.

Not since some inventive mind thought of the long pin for holding a woman's hat securely on her head has this weapon of utility and defense assumed such imposing proportions as to head and such prominence as it has of late. The new style of millinery demands hatpins of gigantic size, and in large numbers. This demand leads to another—a place to keep the pins when not performing their natural service, for the fastidious woman never thinks of leaving her hatpins in her hat when she takes it off any more than she does of leaving her stays laced up as they are when she discards them or dons them.



For holding these large headed hatpins, which are much too long to find a safe anchorage in an average pincushion, special silver vase-like holders have been devised to hang up at one side of the dressing table ready for use. The mouth of the vase is broad enough to allow the heads of the pins to separate, otherwise the jeweled and enameled knobs would be rubbed against each other, with disastrous results. The modern hatpin is too thick in its stem to be thrust easily into or be withdrawn from a cushion. The vase holder makes this operation quite simple and easy.

The new holders are much longer than any that have been made before. The daintiest ones are fashioned of filigree silver with a solid base. Enameled holders are attractive and they can be had in colors to match the room. The newest pin trays are divided into compartments formed by small ridges, so that black and white pins are not mixed up with a kaleidoscopic jumble. Trays without such partitions should be reserved for a certain kind of pins, and then small cushions will do to hold the others. No woman wants to be at the mercy of a jumbled up pin tray when she is dressing in a hurry.

Glass and silver combine to make charming toilet and dresser articles. The pin trays and small boxes made of thick beveled crystal set in cut out silver stands are most attractive. They are daintier in some ways than all the silver trays and have the advantage of not showing scratches. If the crystal part breaks another one can be fitted in. In all else but the shape these pin trays resemble those dainty little dishes designed to hold slices of lemon for afternoon tea. The lemon dishes are round or oval and have very slanting sides, while the pin trays are oblong, as a general thing.

Gift for a Household Shower.

A novel and inexpensive gift for a household shower given for a bride-to-be was a set of iron waxers. Six oblong cases, eight and a half inches long by five and a half inches wide, were made of a fine quality of gingham, two in blue, two pink and two a soft gray.

These cases were filled with bay berries and packed in a dainty box covered with rose-figured wall paper. As the young bride did her own housework, she found the waxers quite a treasure, the heat of the iron not only brought out the cleansing wax for her flatirons, but the kitchen was filled with a pleasant fragrance.

Guimpes of Fine Lace.

Guimps of very fine laces deftly put together by hand are disputing place with the tucked net guimpes which have been positively epidemic. The carrying of the frock color on up to the chin through a net guimpe matching the frock is still an insistent note in French models, but the becoming white guimpe, though usually shrunken in size, has been demanded by so many sensible women that it has remained in the majority in spite of the fashion edict.—From a Paris Letter to the American Register, London.

BRINGS OUT LUSTER OF HAIR.

Best Color That Can Be Worn by the Woman Whose Crown of Glory Is White.

The silver-haired woman makes a mistake in wearing black in her hair under the impression that it will bring out the color. The contrast is too startling, and black deadens the luster. White deadens the silver tones and is apt to give the hair a greenish hue.

The most becoming one that can be used is silver, though there are certain shades of turquoise blue that are lovely with it.

For daytime or informal wear bows or fillets of silver gauze are charming, while for evening a big silver flower or wreaths and garlands in silver oak leaves or narrow silver bands will give the silver-haired woman a touch of distinction that no other coloring can.

Fashion for White Veils.

As the warmer weather comes on heavy black dotted veils are giving way to thin white ones. Many of the new ones have barred squares in white formed by heavy threads. Others have black dots, and some have a tiny black selvedge.

The Toilet Table

A little ammonia in tepid water will soften and cleanse the skin.

Physicians claim that sleep is more refreshing in a darkened room; therefore, it is best to have inside shades of dark green Holland under the ordinary shades. These are more easily adjusted than blinds. It is well to accustom children from infancy to sleep in the dark.

Let a woman who has been working all the morning over the countless details of housekeeping put on her hat and go out for a brisk walk. If it is only for 15 minutes it will do her untold good—her head will be clearer and her heart lighter. Time thus taken is not wasted, but the best kind of an investment, as she will find she can do much more in the long run.

THE NEW NECK GARNISHINGS.

Long and Heavy Chains with Old-Fashioned Plain Locket or Purse Are Being Worn.

New neck garnishings are of narrow black velvet and gros-grain ribbon, about half an inch wide. The pseudo chains often hang below the waist and are used to suspend various necessaries or ornamental objects. They have narrow jeweled or plain gold slides at intervals; the "bijou" hung at the ends being either an old-fashioned plain gold locket, a lorgnette or a small gold or silver mesh purse.

The jeweled chains, long employed for the same purposes, are heavier than the old ones, and a particularly chic chain has square amethyst settings and long open links. An effective French fad, too, is to match the gown worn with jewels of the same color.

For instance, amethysts in the paler tints are the gems for the elegant gowns in wistaria. The whole effect is dimly suggestive of a rare shade of old pink [illegible]

The pallid tourmaline in smoky yellows, is very delicate with cloth gowns in the same subtle tints. Enormous masses of Russian jewelry are also seen, the heavy chains in this showing gold tassels or jeweled drops at the ends, and the rarely set brooches with their dangling fringes. The bracelets, and what not, introducing stones in a deep blue lapus lazuli, which is almost black in shadow.

There is likewise a craze for black opals, but as those rare gems with their burning underlights are very expensive, they are confined to the few. With a black chiffon dress, touched slightly at the corsage with a line of red under black, was worn a magnificent necklace, brooch and bracelet of black opals. A dull fire flamed with movement from these mysterious and fascinating stones, the wearer suggesting with her trailing black, her touches of red and her enormous mushroom hat of sooty, drawn tulle an ensemble Parisian to the last detail.

Suiting the Occasion.

Myra was a typical April bride. How so? [illegible] All smiles and a showery bouquet.

FAMOUS WHITE HOUSE BOSSIE

Official Cow Appears Not Yet to Have Been Given a Permanent Name—Two Suggestions.

No sooner has the handsome and ladylike creature whose portrait appeared in a recent issue of the Sun assumed the proud position of "the First Cow in the Land," than envy begins to raise its head. Of course a cow in her position, necessarily in the public eye, cannot fail to attract general notice, and cannot hope to avoid criticism.

Here comes the Johnstown Democrat with the intimation that the lady cow's name is "Imogene." This slander is indignantly refuted by the Washington Herald, which is published in the same pasture and whose editor doubtless has a personal acquaintance with the White House cow. Neither is her name Helen, nor Desdemona, nor Angeline. The report that her name is Carrie evidently originated in Kansas, where the hatchet Carrie has its habitat. She is a generous cow, and her name is not Hetty. Neither is it Bridget, though she shows a great fondness for the grass when it's wearing of the green. No glacial Gertrude nor haughty Hildegarde is she. Marie is too frisky for her, and Gretchen too domestic. For while she is fond of home, she also realizes her position and her duty to the public. A nickname like "Sooky" or "Brindle" would be impertinent or vulgar. It seems to us that the only proper name for her would be either "Martha" or "Hall," depending largely on whether she adopts as her last name "Washington" or "Columbia."

Whatever her name, she seems to be a creature of usual ability who is doing her best to serve her country. She has been patient under criticism, has borne photography without a murmur, and not a complaint has escaped her lips. She appears to be worthy of the honor of chief of the Pure Milk Circle of Cows' Daughters.—Baltimore Sun.

The Size of Taft's Vest.

It would naturally be supposed that a woman who knows President Taft as well as Miss Mabel Boardman would have been the right person to select a present for the executive. The "Tafters," that is the party that made the trip with Taft to the Philippines, decided to give the president a watch and chain. Miss Boardman was selected to procure the present.

The watch was a substantial one, as it should be for a man like the president, and the chain was one of the heavy gold link chains which stretches from one vest pocket to another across the front of the wearer.

Before presentation was made one of the "Tafters," Senator Scott of West Virginia, called at the Boardman house and was shown the watch and chain. "Look here, Miss Mabel," remarked the West Virginia senator, "you have entirely miscalculated the length of that chain. I guess you don't know how broad Taft is across the front. Just try it on me," and the senator presented a fairly rotund form and it was found that the watch chain would have stretched like a taut hawser across the front of the president. Upon this measurement five inches were added to the chain in order to make it fit the presidential frontage without causing any inconvenience.

With the Spirit of Chivalry.

A cavalier strayed out of a colonial novel and wandered around Washington until he grew old and lonely, and, oh, so poor, that the only thing he owned was the non-negotiable asset that a gentleman calls his honor.

His gray hair still retained its rakish wave, and every line of his shabby slenderness called for doublet, lute and white palfrey, says a Washington correspondent. Only his eyes belonged to the world he walked in. They were just ordinary, pleasant eyes that accepted philosophically the fact that he was old and perhaps friendless and certainly poor. And they looked downward as he walked along the quiet street, his lips moving with his thoughts, as is the way with people who live alone.

As he reached a crossing a tiny thing on the bricks caught his interest and he stooped and picked it up. The cavalier spirit that was not quite lost forever made him place the tiny thing against his lips before he put it in his pocket, but while he did it the eyes smiled whimsically, as if they were making fun.

And the thing he picked up was a hairpin.

A common, wire, wide-sprawling hairpin, that no nice woman would wear.

Turned Down.

There is a certain Washington maid, who is rich in her own right, and whose natural generosity has on more than one occasion been imposed upon by impecunious friends of both sexes in the set whereof she is a member.

At a dance not long ago an acquaintance of hers was, quite by chance, in a position to overhear a portion of a rather delicate conversation between the aforesaid young woman and her cousin Jack.

"... Caroline," the young fellow was heard to say, "you know that I have long been fond of you. Now, I'm going to ask you for the ..."

"Really, Jack, I can't do it," interrupted the young woman, hastily. "I've been so unlucky that way!"

"What are you driving at?" came from Jack. "I'm about to ask you to marry me."

Caroline heaved a sigh of relief. "Mercy, Jack!" she exclaimed, "I thought you were going to ask a loan!"—Harper's Weekly.

Superintends Her Dairy.

Mrs. Philander Knox, wife of the secretary of state, is very fond of her country home near Valley Forge, Pa., and when there takes charge of the supervision of the dairy. In Washington she is a member of the celebrated Cosmos club and takes part in its discussions. She is not fond of the new rich, it is said, and invites to her house those who are fitted by mental acquirements rather than wealth to take part in [illegible]

AN INTERESTING PAINT TEST

There is a very simple and interesting chemical test by which to detect impurity in paint materials. Thousands and thousands of people, all over the country, are making this test. It is a sure way to safeguard against the many adulterated white leads which are on the market. Any one can make the test—all that is needed is a simple little instrument which may be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit includes also a set of color schemes for exterior or interior painting, or both, if you wish, and a book of specifications. No houseowner should make any arrangements for painting till he gets this outfit.

One can't expect a satisfactory painting job without pure white lead. There is a way to make sure you're getting a pure white lead—without testing it. See that the keg bears National Lead Company's famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark, which is a positive guarantee of purity. Your dealer probably has this white lead. If not let National Lead Company know.

The St. Paul Dispatch has bought the Pioneer Press, and it is understood the two papers will soon be issued under one management. The Evening Pioneer Press, it is understood, will be discontinued.

Mrs. J. B. O'Brien wishes in this way to thank the friends and neighbors of Red Lake Falls for the kindness and sympathy shown her in her late bereavement and also for the beautiful floral offerings.

Moses Allard returned to Red Lake Fialls this week and will probably remain here. He has spent the past two years in the west, at Bonner's Ferry Idaho, Coner d'Alene, Idaho, and Salem, Washington.

Mrs. Lewis A. Nelson and family spent last week with relatives at Roseau and with friends at Middle River.

Attorney Chas. E. Boughton was at Thief River Falls between trains yesterday on a business mission.

A program is out for a teachers' meeting to be held at Thief River Falls tomorrow and Saturday. A feature of the program will be an address by Dr. Tupper who recently returned from India. He will speak on educational conditions in India.

M. P. Stone, who was here from Crookston yesterday, is an original genius when it comes to means of entetainment. He treated some of Red Lake Falls' young ladies to the novel experience of a canoe ride in an automobile.

Harry Store, formerly county auditor of Polk county, was the guest of Sam E. Hunt this week. Mr. Store is a crack rifle shot and is employed by the Stephens firearms company as a traveling representative. While here he did some fancy shooting for the entertainment of friends.

Clerk of Court C. W. Johnson leaves this evening for Grand Forks. He goes for the purpose of attending a reunion of the graduates of Gustavus Adolphus college. It is the purpose of the meeting to form an alumni association of graduates of the college residing in northwestern Minnesota and North Dakota.

A center of attraction the past week has been the new Bijou theatre. Manager Barr is putting on a good show and gives a change of program every night. The pictures are good and the machine is well handled. Good crowds are attending the show and no doubt the continuous show stunt will be a success.

Mrs. Mikkelsen has sold her cottage located in the south part of town to Mrs. Cress. Mrs. Mikkelsen and son, Cecil expect to leave in a few weeks for Minneapolis where they will reside. Cecil, hwho is a member of the class of '09 of the Red Lake Falls high school, expects to attend Macalaster college for two years and then enter the State University for a course in engineering.

Attorney Ira C. Richardson and Lewis Larson of Thief River Falls and Carl Johnson of St. Hilaire were in town last evening to attend a meeting of the local Woodman camp. The Woodmen of the county have under consideration a plan to endow a booth at the Woodmen sanitorium in Colorado, and at last evening's meeting ways and means for securing the endowment were discussed.

"Butch" Brunnelle is the proud owner of a new canvas canoe. He took it down to the swimmin' hole for its first ducking Tuesday afternoon. He broke a bottle of beef tea over her prow, christened her "Mermaid" and pushed her off. "Butch" was so excited in the enjoyment of his new boat that he did not realize that he was attired in his only serviceable suit for state occasions instead of his bathing togs, so after the celebration of the notable event he went to bed while his clothes went to the line to dry. "Butch" says the water's fine—deep, too.

Greenbush Tribune: The commissioners of Red Lake county last week decided to bond the county for $35,000 for the purpose of building a court house to replace the one which went up in smoke a couple of weeks ago. Of course the Thief River people are hot about it and will likely make a desperate effort to prevent the erection of the court house at Red Lake, but we would like to see them disappointed. It is none of our affair what becomes of the county seat there, but Red Lake seems to be as well located for that purpose as Thief River, and besides the latter have an entirely too exalted opinion of their own importance.

There was once a man arrested on suspicion of a generally fraudulent life. On him was found a map of England, and certain of the towns were marked with the initials T. W. K. FELT THE SHOCK HERE

Jar of Earthquake Felt Here Last Saturday Night.

The shaking of the buildings, rattling of the dishes or vibration of the telephone wires that you may have noticed at about 10:30 last Saturday night was caused by an earthquake shock. There was quite a heavy shock at Winnipeg that night.

Many people felt the shock, among them Rev. Fr. Fayolle. Father Fayolle says there is no doubt that it a was a slight earthquake shock. He has experienced similar sensations many times. In Africa where he was at one time stationed slight shocks like that felt Saturday night were of frequent occurance.

"The clothes oft proclaim the man," said Shakespeare.

Arrayed in an ill fitting suit, out-of-date or exaggerated in style, a man may be at heart a gentleman but the world is liable to misjudge him. It is easy to dress well nowadays at comparatively small cost, considering the style, fit and workmanship you get when you buy

Kuppenheimer Clothes

They are never exaggeratted in style either. They have enough snap to suit any tasty man but you never find "freaky" or "crazy" styles in this line.

Owing to slow deliveries of woolens by the mills we have been receiving new goods every week, so our stock is not depleted yet by any means; in fact the very latest effects were the last to arrive. So you are not too late for the latest and best.

The Measure of a Woman's Wit.

There are three ways by which a woman's brain
Can well be measured. One is by the fit
Of boot or shoe. A size that gives her pain
Proves her deficient in the thing called wit.

A waist so girded that its span appears
A wasplike structure shows her stupid quite,
But when her head must put on sundry tiers
To wear her hat—all sense has taken flight.

—L. S. Waterhouse in New York Life.

The Real Advantage.

John Bright used to tell how a barber who was cutting his hair once said to him: "You 'ave a large 'ead, sir. It is a good thing to 'ave a large 'ead, for a large 'ead means a large brain, and a large brain is the most useful thing a man can 'ave, as it nourishes the roots of the 'air."—Sacred Heart Review.

Easy to Carry.

"Why, I see you have sent little Willie for beer for the first time and that you have given him two jugs to carry. Why did you do this?"

"I did it so that with one in each hand he could keep his balance better."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

THOSE SIX PER CENT BONDS

The Farmers of the County Will Get the $14,000 Graft.

Very Low Bids for Court House Bonds—Several Bidders.

The board of county commissioners met Saturday to open and consider bids for the bonds of the county in the amount of $35000 that are to be issued and sold to raise funds for the construction of the new court house. The bids were very satisfactory—so low that that $14000 that the Thief River papers have been talking about will go to the tax payers of the county.

The lowest bidder is willing and anxious to take those 6 per cent bonds at 4½ per cent and pay a premium $1,277.00. That is equivalent to a straight bid of 4.2 per cent. That is the bid of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

A. P. Toupin of Red Lake Falls bid 4½ per cent straight. W. M. Stoddard of Minneapolis bid 5¼ per cent. S. A. Kean & Co. of Chicago bid 5¼ per cent. offering a premium of $1,757.00. E. H. Rollins & Sons of Chicago bid 5 per cent with a premium of $1,150.00. The Thos. J. Balger Co. of Chicago bid 5 per cent with a premium of $1,300.00.

Thus the county commissioners have the opportunity to dispose of the bonds at a rate of interest that no one will say is high, and all of the tax payers will share in the $14,000.00 graft.

All bids were laid on the table and the board adjourned to meet June 4, at which time the bids will be considered.

Mr. Tandberg Very Ill.

A telegram was received this morning from Minneapolis stating that County Treasurer O. T. Tandberg is dangerously ill. The news of his unfavorable condition comes as a surprise to all. Mr. Tandberg had been receiving medical treatment in Minneapolis and had been getting along so well that it was thought that he would be able to return to Red Lake Falls soon. Mrs. Tandberg and Miss Tandberg left for Dugdale at once and took the first train from that place to Minneapolis.

THE FIRST BALL GAME

Local Ball Tossers Will Take on Fast Dakota Bunch June 14.

The first base ball game of the season on the local diamond will be played Monday, June 14, between the Wahpeton, North Dakota, team and Red Lake Falls. The Dakota team is a semi-professional aggregation and the locals will have to play some to hold them.

The local team has not been organized, but the boys have been out two or three evenings and there seems to be plenty of material for a good team. Red Lake Falls will play an all-home team.

Will Have Ball Team.

Thief River News: A subscription paper was circulated last Saturday among the business men of the city to raise money to support a base ball team here this year. Some $500 was subscribed and the matter of engaging players and organizing a team is now in progress. It is the intention to have only two or three hired players—a catcher and a pitcher and possibly a short stop. With the fund of $500 and the gate receipts it is thought that the ball team will be self supporting for the season.

Questions Answered.

In the daily work on the farm many things happen that we cannot quite understand. We ask first one party and then another and each usually gives us a different answer.

Many questions come to our minds about agriculture that we would like to have explained. How to feed roots, how to keep the boys and girls on the farm, the hired man question, how to test our seed, how to grade up our cows, the best methods to follow in various work, the latest ideas in building and co-operation, and a thousand other questions. All of the above you have the privilege of asking at the Farmers Institute, and they will be answered by men who are paid by the state for knowing how to answer them.

DISPLAY FLAG ON JUNE 14TH

Day Set Apart for the Stars and Stripes to Float From Every Pole.

June 14 is Flag day and will be observed as such throughout the United States. The G. A. R. headquarters issues the following circular letter regarding the object of the day:

"Since the struggle of 1861-1865, the flag has become the symbol of a mighty nation. It has been carried to the utmost parts of the earth, carrying liberty wherever it has been thrown to the breeze. Americans cannot fail of a feeling of pride and satisfaction, nor restrain the swelling of patrotism in the breast, when we contrast the meaning, in far distant lands, of ours and other flags displayed together.

"The Stars and Stripes, within the recent past, have come to possess new beauty for friendly eyes and new terror for the foes of liberty.

"We respectfully appeal to the governors of all the states of our land and also the mayor of each American city, to herald the coming and celebration of Flag day, June 14, 1909, by proclamation; we call upon every public officer, every teacher of the youth of our land, the editors of all newspapers, the daily instructors of the youth of our land, to call pubilc attention, to arouse enthusiasm, and to provide for public exercises and general celebration of the day.

"We earnestly exhort our citizens to join in making Flag day an event, and its celebration in 1909, a great event. Let us from one end of our land to the other, fling the Stars and Stripes to the breeze on June 14, 1909. May it greet the rising and salute the setting sun, and float all day long from every church edifice, school, public and private and however humble, throughout the entire land."

Help Lay Cornerstone.

Hazel, Minn., May 24, 1909.

Mr. Editor,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:—

I wish to say, we, at Hazel, are well pleased with the location where our court house is to be built at Red Lake Falls, and will kindly ask our neighboring towns to help the boys of Red Lake Falls to lay the corner stone for the new court house, and leave the county as she is, and let Thief River Falls have the big agricultural school which will do us more good than ten court houses.

We don't have any trouble at Hazel about the unhandy part in paying our taxes if we can only find the money to pay the same.

G. W. Eastman.

THE LOSS ADJUSTED

County Reimbursed for Loss in the Burning of the Court House.

Insurance adjusters, representing the different companies that had issued policies on the late lamented court house, were in the city Tuesday to adjust the loss occasioned in the burning of the court house.

In the negotiations the county was represented by the County Auditor A. A. Latendesse, Wm. C. L. Demann, vice chairman of the board and Judge S. A. Swanson.

A very satisfactory settlement was made. The county is to receive $4,135.50. The amount of the insurance on the building, $2,500, was paid in full and $1,635.50 was for the loss of and the damage to furniture and fixtures, law books, etc. No doubt the amount received will cover the loss and the county will lose nothing as a result of the fire.

Didn't Like It.

It has been suggested that the act of calling the proposed new county Pennington was so repulsive to the president of the Soo railroad that he decided not to build the new road to Thief River Falls. Anyhow there must be some good reason for ignoring the metropolis of North America, instead of making his plans for railroad construction conform to those of the railroad builders at Thief River.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

Monday, May 31, has been designated as Memorial Day, upon which occasion it is the privilege of the grateful citizens of our great republic to pay tribute to the memory of the dead and honor to the living of those whose heroic sacrifices and devotion to the principals upon which the country's foundation is builded, have given to us a free government in the enjoyment of which we are prone to forget the value of the gift, failing in gratitude to those who gave it.

It is unfortunate, indeed, that in our city there are few of the veterans who fought in the great war that determined that if a divided country must fall, the united country shall live. Out of the terrible strife, out of the unnatural war of brother against brother, the country has come to in her real great ness, purged of the unnatural growth of involuntary servitude.

It is unfortunate, that there is not here in our city a Grand Army Post, that from the beautiful ceremonies of the day as celebrated the country over by the veterans we might learn lessons of patriotism. But we can in a manner celebrate the occasion. Let us display old glory on that day. By appropriate exercises in the schools the significance of the observance of the great natal day may be impressed upon the minds of the young. We can make this the opportunity to decorate the graves of deceased relatives and friends. It is fitting that we do this on the "natal day of the dead."

J. A. DUFFY,
Mayor.

Uncanny.

"Did that lady think she would like the flat?" asked the landlord.

"Yes," replied his assistant, "but there's one thing rather strange about her case."

"Her references appear to be all right. What's the matter with her?"

"She didn't say anything about the horrible taste the woman had who lived there before or hint that the place would have to be entirely repapered and redecorated before she would take it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Hard Grinding.

But they grind exceeding small.
When you think of the stuff they have to grind
It's a wonder they grind at all.

THIEF RIVER LINE GOES TO PLUMMER

Much Talked About "Thief River Line" is to be Constructed.

Contract Let to Foley Brothers To be Completed in a Year.

This week the Soo railway company let the contract for the construction of the new Brooton line—the "Thief River Line," so-called. The contract was let to Foley Brothers of St. Paul and by its terms the road is to be constructed from Moose Lake to Plummer, striking the south shore of Red Lake and the north shore of Leech Lake and the work is to be completed within a year. The reason why the line goes to Plummer instead of Thief River Falls cannot be accounted for, except that the people of Thief River seem to have the same success in trying to run the Soo railroad as they did in trying to dictate to the state legislature.

It is said to be the plan of the Soo people to later extend the line to Grand Forks in which event the road will be built through this city.

Mind and Body Building.

Some of the best physicians, who only a few years ago ridiculed mental healing, are beginning to adopt the principle, so far as they know how, in their practice; especially the power of suggestion. They are finding that their patients are often more affected by mental medicine, by their encouragment and good cheer than by their pills. They are advocating, too, the the use of a good malt tonic such as golden grain belt beer; an unequalled appetizer and the best digestive known. Have it on your home table at all times. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

IT IS A GOOD PLAN

Good Roads Campaign That Might Work Well Here.

The commercial club of the city of Estherville, Iowa, is conducting a good roads campaign that is said to result in great improvement in the highways. The plan has been commented upon by papers of the northwest as being practical and sensible. P. B. Gaass wrote to the secretary of the commercial club of the Iowa city making inquiry to determine if a similar campaign could be conducted satisfactorily. The following reply which he received is self-explanatory:

Estherville, Iowa, May 24, 1909.

Mr. P. B. Gaass,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:—

I have your letter of inquiry regarding our method of road improvement.

In reply will say that our Commercial Club has offered prizes of $5, $3, and $2 on each of the six mail routes going out of here for the men who do the best work in maintaining a mile of road by dragging with a King road drag. Besides this we arrange to have the local newspapers do a good deal of talking along that line.

There is considerable road dragging around here and when dragged the roads are most always good and they are very bad and rutty when not dragged. It does more good than anything else that can be done so easily. The law of this state allows the township trustees to pay 50 cents per mile for each time the road is dragged. A man gets 50 cents for hauling a drag one mile and back. They often do it by taking a drag down the road when they go to work with a team in the field.

Our plan, you see, is not extensive, but I am glad to tell you what we are doing and I believe nothing is more sensible or more appreciated by both townnspeople and farmers.

Very truly yours,
A. J. Rhodes.

If your stomach, heart or kidneys are weak try at least a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't dose the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail the depending organs of necessity fail. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by all druggists.

Don't Want Lindquist.

Thief River News: The only objection to the creation of Pennington county in the north end is the fact that County Commissioner Lindquist will be a resident of the new county. This cannot be helped and we predict that Mr. Lindquist will devote more time to his farm and less to public affairs after November 1910. There is a whole lot of good material for county commissioners without requesting Mr. Lindquist to serve in the new county.

SCHOOL OFFICERS TO MEET.

The school officers of the county will meet at Thief River Falls tomorrow. The following program has been prepared by Superintendent Anderson for the occasion:

MUNCH IS A RANGER

Will Have Charge of Red Lake and Polk Counties—Game Warden Too.

C. C Andrews, the Forrestry commissioner for Minnesota, has appointed Wm. Munch a Ranger and Mr. Munch's territory will comprise the counties of Red Lake and Polk.

It is the duty of the Ranger to arrest people who leave fires that might do damage, whether or not any damage has actually been done. The smallest fine that can be imposed upon conviction is $50, one half of which goes to the person furnishing evidence. The law does not apply to forest fires only. Any prairie fire comes within the law where it gets off the land of the owner and when it is left in such condition that it might jump from the land of the owner to surrounding property.

Mr. Munch will continue to serve as deputy game warden and it will pay those who are tempted to violate the game laws and those who set fires to be equally discreet.

Taxes Must be Paid.

On June 1st a penalty of 10 per cent will be added to all unpaid Real Estate Taxes, but in case one-half the amount of the tax on any real estate shall be paid before June 1st then no penalty is added, providing the remaining half of said tax shall be paid before the first day of November.

2w County Treasurer.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16

Farmers are Invited to Come to Red Lake Falls That Day.

Morning and Afternoon Sessions—Meeting for the Ladies.

A Farmers' Institute is to be held at Red Lake Falls on Wednesday, June 16th commencing at 10 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. Prof. Wm. Robertson of the Crookston School of Agriculture will be in charge of the Institute, and will be assisted by Mrs. Ida E. Tilson of West Salem, Wis., O. A. Storvick of the Dairy and Food Department, and Supt. L. P. Harrington of Crookston.

The regular institute sessions will be devoted to a discussion of the lines of farming that are particularly adapted to this part of Minnesota, dairying, swine raising, clover, rotation of crops, etc. poultry, fruit growing, vegetable gardening, schools, etc., subjects in which all the members of the family are interested, will also be given attention.

In the afternoon, commencing at 1:30, a special session for women and young people will be held in a separate hall, where lectures on the care of poultry, home economics, schools, and the industrial contest for boys and girls will be given by Mrs. Tilson and Supt. Harrington.

The care of milk: Too much of the cream and milk sent to the creameries arrives in poor condition. This is often due to some cause that can be remedied. If you keep cows it will pay you to learn about this matter at the institute.

There is a prospect that the present high prices for poultry and eggs will continue. A small flock of hens can be made to pay the grocery bills and it is worth while to learn something more about this branch of farm stock. Mrs. Tilson is one of the best poultry lecturers in the United States.

Every member of the family is invited to attend—from the youngest to the oldest. Sessions commence sharp at 1 a. m. and 1:30 p. m.

PAPERS CONSOLIDATE

Crookston to Have Only One Daily Paper in the Future.

On Saturday, May 29, the last issue of the Crookston Daily Journal will be published. That paper has been consolidated with the Daily Times. In the future only one paper will be published and that will be issued from the Times office.

The consolidation of the papers means much for Crookston and for the publishers. The consolidated paper will give better service and the expense to the newspaper patrons will be less.

QUARTER BILLION IN SIGHT.

Such Is Total Revenue Estimated as Coming to State From Ore Lands.

One thousand "forties" of state ore lands under lease, the whole represent nearly 1,000,000,000 tons of iron and many of them undergoing development, is what Attorney General George T. Simpson and State Auditor S. G. Iverson found as the result of their visit to the iron country last week.

This land is leased on a basis of 25 cents a ton, and as it will take fully fifty years to exhaust it, Mr. Simpson estimates for the state in that time a revenue not far short of $250,000,000. One "forty" alone is estimated to contain 80,000,000 tons of ore.

The two officials found active operations all over the range. On the state lands many drills were at work and on a large number stripping had commenced.

The visit of Simpson and Iverson to the range was for the purpose of inquiring into private encroachments on meandered lake beds, the ownership of which was vested in the state by a law passed by the last legislature. In the case of one lake the company at work was found to be working far in advance of the meandered line.

In order to stop encroachments suits will be necessary, but no action will be taken until Mr. Simpson is fully assured as to the state's rights. There is some dispute in that respect, which will have to be looked into thoroughly.

STATE AUTO TAGS READY.

Law Requiring Registration Goes Into Effect.

The automobile law passed by the last legislature went into effect Saturday though the enforcement of its provisions will not begin for another month. Owners of machines have thirty days in which to comply.

The distribution of the metal tags began Saturday. The numbers are painted on a steel plate, with a red background. Those who have seen the tags do not regard them as weatherproof, but Secretary of State Schmahl says it is the best he can do in view of the low price of the license and the fact that the state furnishes two tags for each machine. To get a stamped tag, he says, would mean a deficit for the department.

The Minnesota employes' compensation commission, created by the last legislature, has organized and now asks for the views of working men, manufacturers, employers' liability and accident insurance companies, economists and all others conversant with the subject of liability. Communications are also asked on the question for or against a compensation act, basis of compensation, method of creating the fund and its distribution.

The commission has organized by selecting H. V. Mercer as its chairman. A secretary probably will be selected from the labor department statistical force.

INSURANCE TAXES INCREASE.

A total of $371,727 in insurance taxes have been certified to the state auditor and collected by him on 1908 business, according to figures given out by Insurance Commissioner Hartigan. This is $10,000 more than the previous year.

Of this amount $145,895 was paid to the state by old-line life companies, $40,370 by casualty companies and the remainder by fire companies.

PREMIUM LIST INCREASED.

Women's Exhibit at 1909 Fair to Be Better Than Ever.

The state fair of 1909 will offer more attractions than usual to the women of the state.

The premium list has been increased so that it now aggregates $500. The exhibit of women's work will be housed in the very attractive Red Wing building, which it occupied for the first time last fall.

The revised premium list will not only be richer in money prizes, but it will be enlarged so as to include every branch of women's work in the arts, the handicrafts and in household industries.

J. H. Beek of St. Paul, second vice president of the state fair association, will be superintendent of the women's department.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society of the western part of the Southern Minnesota district held their annual convention at Arlington in the M. E. church. Miller, Fairfax; vice president, Mrs. Rev. F. Brinkmann, Arlington; recording secretary, Mrs. Dr. Reineke, New Ulm; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. F. Sell, Fairfax; treasurer, Mrs. Dr. Hartung.

After a short session the board of county commissioners of Beltrami county adjourned to meet May 25, when they will receive bids for the sale of the $195,000 refunding bonds to take up the outstanding indebtedness of the county.

Charles E. Vasaly, the new member of the state board of control, appointed from Little Falls, has resigned his position as register of deeds, and the county commissioners appointed Frank Bastien to fill the unexpired term, which is two years.

Grief-stricken because of the separation from his mother and sister, who a week ago sailed for Austria, their native land, and despondent over the life he had led since their departure in his effort to overcome his sorrow, John P. Brenick of St. Cloud, Minn., a traveling salesman, committed suicide in St. Paul.

Henry S. Dahleen, county auditor of Becker county, has tendered his resignation to the county board. Mr. Dahleen has been auditor of Becker county four years, having been elected three times without opposition. He gives up his position to become president of the Security State bank, which will be started about June 1.

A coroner's jury at Virginia decided that Nelson Hanley, aged sixty-five years, a blacksmith, whose body was found last week in a badly decomposed condition thirty miles north of Duluth, was murdered. A gash found in the neck led to the murder theory. The authorities are in the dark how to proceed further in the case.

At a special election held at Spooner there was carried the proposition of issuing to the State of Minnesota the bonds, in the aggregate sum of $22,000, bearing interest at 4 per cent per annum; $10,000 for constructing water works; $5,000 for a village hall; $2,000 for purchasing fire apparatus, and the remaining sum to refund outstanding indebtedness.

F. J. Ekwald of Erie, Minn., has discovered a new fibrous plant, which he believes will become an important article of commerce, supplanting largely cotton, flax and jute in the manufacture of rope, twine, bagging, etc. Samples of this fiber were sent to the bureau of paint industry by Representative Steenerson. Mr. Ekwald has sufficient seed to plant several acres of his new plant, and proposes to introduce it generally among Minnesota farmers.

The Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific railroad, incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine, filed its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state at St. Paul. The new company proposes building a line from Virginia to Duluth and various branch lines.

Prayers were asked in the pro-cathedral at Winona for Rt. Rev. Joseph P. Cotter. For the past two months Bishop Cotter, accompanied by Father Gallagher, has been at Atlantic City for the benefit of his health, but the change has done him no good, and he is getting worse.

It is reported from Brussels that Chr. L. Lange, one time secretary of the Nobel society, has been appointed general secretary of the Interparliamentary union. The government of Norway is going into the lottery business. The law forbidding such institutions will be repealed, and a lottery will be opened, under the auspices of the state, Sept. 1, 1909. The proceeds of the lottery will be used for the good of the land. During the first three years the society for the prevention of tuberculosis, the national forestation propaganda and the Bergen museum will each get one-sixth of the net receipts, while these will each get a twelfth portion; the Nansen fund, the building fund of the Akershus castle, the Scientific Society of Trondhjem, the Tromso museum and the society for reclaiming marsh lands. The lottery will be limited to 300,000 crowns, but may be increased to 400,000 crowns at the discretion of the king. The largest prize will be limited to 20,000 crowns.

The committee that has had charge of gathering money for the Michelsen fund has completed its labors, and last month turned over to the former premier 214,045.22 crowns. "I wish the honored committee will make known to the contributors my sincere thanks for the gift with which men and women, both at home and abroad, have so signally honored and gladdened me.

"It is my wish and purpose that the Christian Michelsen fund shall remain intact; that for some time to come the interest be added to the principal, and that later the interest be expended for the benefit of young men and women who reveal talents for work that would prove of general public usefulness.

"At a later date I shall give further particulars in reference to this."

Axel Anderson is a much discussed man in Christiania at the present time. Eleven years ago, while a student in the University of Christiania, he submitted a thesis for the doctor's degree on "The Sacrament during the first two centuries after Christ." It was examined by a committee of professors, composed of Odland, Schott and Brun, who rejected it as a superficial effort, and Mr. Anderson was denied the degree he sought. Later on he translated his thesis into German, and had it published in Germany, where it attracted the favorable attention of many noted scholars, and was also praised in other countries. Recently another committee of the faculty of the University of Christiania re-examined Mr. Anderson's thesis and pronounced it a work of scholarly research and merit. They notified Mr. Anderson of this fact, and apologized to him for the injustice done him eleven years ago and expressing regret that, on account of formal objections and his own disinclination, it is now impossible to rectify the wrong by granting him the doctor's degree.

A writer who recently returned from a trip through Palestine relates some items of interest concerning the colony of Swedes in Jerusalem, known as the Larssonites. They emigrated to Jerusalem some fifty or sixty years ago under the influence of a rival and and have kept up a comparatively separate existence in the Holy City since that time. They reside in what is called the American section. They are a God-fearing people and live an unassuming and exemplary life among the Catholics and Mohammedans of the city. They are well known for their charity among the poor and the improvident Arabs. The noted Swedish writer, Selma Lagerlof, some years ago wrote a book entitled "Jerusalem," in which she describes the emigration of this sect to the Holy City.

The newspapers of Norway and Sweden have enjoyed a little tilt about them accepting of official decorations on the part of citizens of one country from the other. A Christiania daily sizes up the situation as follows: "It has now been learned that the rumor that the Swedish government does not desire Swedish officials to receive and carry any decorations of any of the Norwegian orders is well founded. From a Norwegian point of view it is only another official evidence on the part of Sweden that her stand on this question is made at just exactly the same time the Swedish press began to look for sympathy from Norway in regard to the building of the Swedish Continental route to Germany. In Norway, however, Sweden's attitude toward Norwegian orders has not caused nearly the furore that was anticipated. It is only pertinent to note that General Thaulow, a Norwegian officer, who stands very high in foreign military circles, has returned all his decorations from Swedish orders on the ground that if a Swedish citizen can not carry the St. Olaf order, for instance, a Norwegian citizen cannot, as a matter of course, carry a Swedish order. The Norwegian press in general seems to approve of the general's course in this respect as being absolutely consistent."

What is the matter with J. C. Christensen?

That is a question widely discussed by the newspapers of Denmark at the present time. Christensen is one of the leading men of the country, head of the party of the left and formerly prime minister. He was forced out of office last year, partly on account of the Alberti scandal and partly on account of a mistaken policy on the part of his cabinet. Since that time he has been the leader of the opposition to the government, at the head of which stands Nergaard. The thing that has brought Christensen into unfavorable notice at this time is his attitude toward the problem of fortifying Copenhagen. The readers of this column will recall the fact that the commission for the national defense reported in favor of fortifying the capital, both on the landward side and on the sea front. The Nergaard ministry took up the proposition and is trying to force it through the rigsdag. Christensen has come out squarely against the proposition, contrary to his former views and contrary to a large element of his party. Consequently his "flop" has created surprise and indignation within his party, which will be torn asunder on account of his attitude. He is being roundly denounced by his former friends and is defended by others who have been his enemies.

Ostermalm has been having an epidemic of scarlet fever the past weeks. Over forty persons have been ill up to the present writing.

Perfectly Equipped.

When the large and healthy looking individual who had asked at the door for "a little something to eat" was told that he might if he would work a while at the woodpile he shook his head mournfully.

"I've got the ague," he explained, "and my hand is that unsteady I couldn't hit more'n one stick in seven."

"All right," exclaimed the mistress of the house. "Go out in the back yard and shake those ashes for me."

A Sharp Retort.

"My dear," said a thin little Brighton man to his wife, "this paper says that there is a woman down in Devonshire who goes out and chops wood with her husband."

"Well, what of it? I think she could easily do it if he is as thin as you are. I have often thought of using you to peel potatoes with."

The thin man laid down his paper with a sigh that sounded like the squeak of a penny whistle.

No Cause for Complaint.

"I thought you said this house had an extra large back yard," said the prospective tenant.

"So I did," answered the agent.

"But it is only four feet deep, by actual measurement," protested the prospective tenant.

"Well," rejoined the wily agent, "the ordinary yard is only three feet, you know."

A wizened little man charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half, or in this case better two-thirds, was a big, square-jawed woman with a determined eye.

The judge listened to the plaintiff's recital of wrongs with interest.

"Where did you meet this woman who, according to your story, has treated you so dreadfully?" his honor asked.

"Well, judge," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to glare defiantly at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."

Fruit and Temperance.

In America a distinctly increased demand for fruit has been noticed within the last year or two, and is ascribed in the first instance to the growth of the temperance movement. As a man loses the taste for alcohol so he encourages the more natural and primitive appetite for fresh fruit.

The next winter when it became cold the eczema started again and also in her head where it would take the hair out and leave bare patches. At the same time her arms were sore the whole length of them. I took her to a physician, but the child grew worse all the time. Her sister's arms were also affected. I began using Cuticura Remedies, and by the time the second lot was used their skin was soft and smooth. Mrs. Charles Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, '08."

HUNTING WOLVES IN TEXAS.

Big Prairie Animals That Are Not Afraid to Attack Man or Horse.

"You can talk about the sport of hunting the fox all you want," said Maj. Charles Russell of Vinita, I. T. "Down in western Texas, where I used to live, we have a sport that beats fox hunting all hollow. I refer to hunting prairie wolves on horseback. In that country we chase the varmints on Texas ponies with hounds, and when we get the wolf within shooting distance we kill him with a pistol.

"Let me tell you it is exciting sport. Some of the wolves are larger than a mastiff and can tear up a pack of dogs in no time. I have even seen the creatures when brought to bay not hesitate to attack a mounted man. I have killed them when they were leaping for the horse's throat, and I have seen them almost pull a rider from his horse. Usually it takes more than one shot from a heavy pistol to slay the wolf.

"We have another sport in the Texas Panhandle almost as exciting," continued the major, "and that is the jackrabbit hunt on horseback with greyhounds. Contrary to general opinion, a jackrabbit cannot outrun a good greyhound, except straightaway for, say, 300 yards. Even a good cow pony can run over a jackrabbit within half a mile. Those horses can jump, too. I once owned a pinto pony that could jump a five-strand barbed wire fence."

LIGHT BOOZE

Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a tussle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says:

"During the two years of my training as a nurse, while on night duty, I became addicted to coffee drinking. Between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a good, hot cup of coffee about that time. It stimulated me and I could keep awake better.

"After three or four years of coffee drinking I became a nervous wreck and thought that I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me to leave off coffee for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort to release myself from the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum, and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the stimulant, but I liked the taste of Postum and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman—have not had any bilious attacks since I left off coffee."

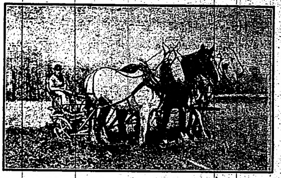
What Government Experts and Other Prominent Writers Say on Agriculture and Allied Topics.

GOOD TEAMS ARE AN IMPORTANT FARM ASSET

Animals Should Be of Medium Size, Well Mated, Active, Strong, Intelligent and Trained—By J. H. Hynes.



A Good Farm Team.

The original home of the horse is unknown, but in all times and among all nations he has been a boon companion to man. In the early ages when civilization was confined to the warm climates the horse was a royal animal. Horses were used by princes and warriors in vast numbers. Job gives the finest description of the horse ever written, a part of which we quote: "Hast thou given the horse strength? Hast thou clothed his neck with thunder? Canst thou make him afraid as a grasshopper? The glory of his nostrils is terrible. He paweth in the valley and rejoiceth in his strength. He mocketh at fear, neither turneth at fear, neither turneth he back from the sword."

A study of the nature and construction of his body shows wisdom on the part of the Creator in designing that the horse should be a most useful servant to man.

The farm team should consist of medium-sized animals well mated, active, strong, intelligent, and well trained. About 1,400 pounds is a handy weight for a general-purpose farm team. Any less weight lacks strength and a greater weight results in slow, awkward movements. The team should have a combination of bone and sinew and muscle, developed in a high degree and so nearly alike in each animal that an equal distribution of strength will result. This will allow them to stand severe strain better and longer without damaging either. An unevenly mated team in any of the features is a drawback.

The physical construction of the horse is so similar to that of man that the rules pertaining to the care of one will apply to the other. The food given the horse must be pure, for the stomach of the horse is very small considering his weight and the digestion is rapid to quickly replace lost energy in work. While the digestion in the cow is slow and complicated that in the horse is rapid and simple hence only the best of feeds should be used if you would avoid disease.

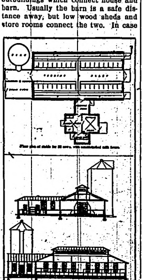
Another important item is pure water. Cattle and hogs may thrive drinking impure, muddy water, but a horse will not. We do not think it best to water teams just after coming in from work, especially if the morning work work was hard. Work horses should have a liberal amount of salt in their feed every day or so as he sweats so much in labor, which results in the carrying off through perspiration much of the saline elements in the body. We believe salt just as essential to the health and nourishment of the horse as it is to man.

When spring work begins care must be taken not to overwork the team in the start. They should be gradually worked up to the point where they can endure a full day's work. Don't think for a moment that your horse is made of steel. Coming out of the winter in a somewhat weakened muscular condition, due to idleness, you must not expect reasonably that you can get a full amount of work from them. If you have heavy work, use the forenoon for this and then in the afternoon do some lighter work for a few days till the team gets hardened somewhat. When spring work begins then commence heavy feeding. Grain rations must be given freely. This in conjunction with plenty of clean hay will enable your team to do its duty. Never feed dusty, molded hay. Better none at all. When pasturage can be had give the team free access to it. On fair nights turn out at pasture rather than keep the horses in stall. When they must be housed from inclement weather see that they have liberal beds of clean, dry straw on which to rest. A horse dislikes to lie down in a bed of filth and will not do so as a general thing.—Farmers' Review.

FARM SUBWAY FOR BAD WEATHER

Tunnel Connecting House and Barn Used in Winter.

Strangers who travel through New England notice the sheds and other outbuildings which connect house and barn. Usually the barn is a safe distance away, but low wood sheds and store rooms connect the two. In case of fire there is little hope of saving the buildings. People who go to New England in summer wonder why this connection is made. Could they live on the farms in winter and see the great snowdrifts or view the blizzards they would understand. The object is to reach the barn without going outdoors. A writer in the Rural New Yorker makes a suggestion which he has worked out in the little picture shown herewith. He says:



House to Barn Subway.

"This represents a tunnel under ground, connecting house and barn, which could be used in winter in northern latitudes where heavy snow storms exist or conditions of heavy winds and gales. At times going outdoors is very disagreeable, especially for a case where women were obliged to travel between house and barn [illegible] in addition anything could be handled between house cellar and barn cellar without bringing up and down. This tunnel could be used in such cases or where a person objects to having buildings connected."

The tendency now is to put public traffic underground. The great subway in New York is a success. Tunnels are now being made under the rivers which flow past Manhattan island. We hope to see the day when all railroad trains will be put under ground.

Care in Breeding Chickens.—The poultry raiser in breeding for show-room specimens and in compliance with the requirements of the standard of perfection, all specimens possessing disqualifications and blemishes should be culled out. Under this head come such faults as feathered legs on youngsters of clean-legged breeds; scantily-feathered legs on full-feathered typical shape, defective head points, etc. Birds thus defective should be segregated and disposed of because undesirable for stock birds; the pullets may be reserved for commercial eggs, provided the breeder has ample room, otherwise they, too, had better be sold for that purpose to the commercial breeder.

Don't Forget the Salt.—Common sense and many experiments teach that the proper way to salt cattle is to provide it in sufficient quantity and make it accessible to them at all times. Salt should be placed at at least two different points where the cattle run and they should be allowed to get it whenever they want it. An animal will eat no more than is absolutely necessary in this way. While, if salt is given at infrequent intervals, cattle and particularly fattening steers are apt to eat much more than is good for them. Salt is an important factor in preparing cattle for market and the same care should be given to its use as to feeding.

The Ground Squirrel Pest.—To rid the farm of the ground squirrel a good way is to dissolve one ounce of strychnia sulphate and two ounces of borax in two quarts of hot water in a closed vessel, stirring occasionally for 20 minutes, or until completely dissolved. Then add six quarts of warm water, and sprinkle this poisoned solution over 30 pounds of rolled or crushed wheat, stirring and mixing thoroughly until it is all absorbed. Place a quarter of a teaspoonful of the poisoned grain near the entrance of each occupied burrow, or in each runway. For mice one-half ounce of strychnine is sufficient [illegible]

MOLDS FOR MAKING CONCRETE SEWERS AND CULVERTS

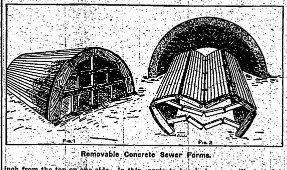
Collapsible Forms for Mixing Cement in Short Time and at Small Expense—By A. A. Houghton.

The necessity of setting up and taking down forms in making molds for sewers, bridges and culverts of concrete work is a great waste of time, in addition to the great amount of lumber required. With the simple form described and illustrated herewith, which can be constructed by any one in a short time and at a slight expense, the labor in handling forms when molding all classes of bridges, culverts and sewers will be saved, as in a few minutes' time the form can be placed in position to mold a section, and by simply removing the key blocks the form will neatly fold together so that it can be removed and used again without delay in construction.

The manner of construction for a culvert 6 feet 9 inches wide and 3 feet 4½ inches high when completed is to use for each section 24 one-twelfth segments of a circle, as four sets of six each are used as supports to each section. The best way to make these is to cut 24 pieces of 8-inch plank, 2 inches thick and 19½ inches long; take one of these pieces and make a pattern by marking on each end 1½ inch from the top on one side. In this 1½-inch space draw a curved line from the marks at each end, so as to bring the highest point of the curve in the center of the top edge of the piece. This will make one-twelfth segment of a circle of the desired diameter. In mitering the ends mark a point 1½ inch from each end along the bottom of the piece; then draw a line from this mark to the end of the oval line at the top, and when this three-cornered piece is cut off the correct miter is obtained for the purpose.

If the length of the completed section is to be 12 feet use lumber 2 inches wide and 1½ inch thick; of this length lay four of the segments of circle with oval sides up at equal distance apart and cover with the 12-foot lumber, nailing on top. The oval segments should be so covered as to leave leave half an inch projecting on each side; this is planed down on one edge, in a bevel, even with the ends of the supporting timbers, so as to make a tight joint when they are joined together.

After completing the six sections in the above manner join them together with a hinge on each support, as illustrated in Fig. 1 and Fig. 2, requiring 20 hinges. As illustrated in Fig. 2, the hinges are all placed on the bottom side of supports, except those in the center on top; these must be on the outside to enable it to fold together. By using a flat strap hinge for this, there will be very little mark left in the completed work. For the cross supports cut four pieces of 2x4-inch lumber 4 feet 10½ inches long. Each one of the bottom pieces is cut 1 foot from each end and the balance of strip cut in the center, making four pieces; join together with three hinges, as illustrated in Fig. 1 and Fig. 2, putting one hinge on top of the strip and two on the bottom, at the joints, and then fasten to the bottom supports with hinges, at bottom of the strip and fasten to the support at about the center. This allows these cross supports to break down, as illustrated in Fig 2, and thus folds the section together.



Removable Concrete Sewer Forms.

The top cross pieces or supports are cut from the same lumber 3 feet 6 inches long, and are divided into four pieces, in a proportionate manner as the bottom cross supports, and are hinged together and fastened to sections in the identical manner as the bottom ones. This allows both cross supports to fold down alike, and thus draw in the sections together, so that it can be removed from the completed work in a very short time and without damage to the concrete.

As illustrated in Fig. 1, blocks are used to hold the cross supports in position while the section is in use. These should be at least 4 by 4 inches and the proper length to closely fit into the spaces. As illustrated, seven of these are used at each set of supports.

TURKEYS NEED MUCH ATTENTION

Cures for Numerous Ills They Are Subject To.

The poultry raiser who is fortunate enough to have a large area of ground should not overlook the turkey as a money maker. However, never keep turkeys and hens together. There are ailments which are almost harmless to hens which prove fatal to turkeys. In raising turkeys keep them free from lice and do not overfeed them. In the spring the turkeys need green food, insects or animal food and plenty of fresh, cool water and a good range. Do not keep them shut up in houses, except in winter, and even then, except when sleet falls or the weather is extremely severe, they must have plenty of air. One of the most fatal diseases to turkeys is blackhead. In some places this disease has wiped out whole flocks.

Diarrhea is the most pronounced symptom. This, however, sometimes occurs from other intestinal disorders and does not alone signify the presence of the malady. The next symptom is the drooping tail, followed by a drooping of the wings, after which death soon occurs. When the disease is at its height the head assumes a dark color; hence the name "blackhead." Young turkeys are much more susceptible or they may be more delicate and cannot withstand the invasions of the parasites so well. They begin by moping and humping as if they were cold. A blackening of the head does not always occur.

The disease is caused by animal parasites, which can be detected only by the aid of a microscope. Clean food given to fowls, as one bird with a disease will infect the feeding ground of others. A sick bird should be removed from the flock and placed in close quarters, which should afterward be disinfected, or the bird may be killed at once, and then should be burned. Medical treatment is not very successful, owing to the difficulty of reaching the parasites at the seat of the disease; yet treating them with some of the following remedies may be worth the trouble:

Sulphur, five grains; sulphate of iron, one grain; sulphate of quinine, one grain; place this amount in capsules and administer one night and morning to each turkey for a week. If the bird does not respond to treatment kill it at once without drawing blood and then burn the carcass, disinfecting the coop.

A Canadian's Opinion of Bad Butter.—A Canadian farmer thus expresses his opinion on bad butter: "While the subject is up, why is it that so much butter is bad and a lot of it not fit for human consumption? Let any farmer who reads this ask himself the next time he is carrying the milk to the house from the cow stable, and he notices a brown scum on the top of it, what that brown scum really is. And then let him ask himself what he would think if, when he got to the house, he found his good wife kneading a batch of dough with hands as filthy as his own. Let him wonder whether he could whistle two bars of Home, Sweet Home, before exploding. And yet, sir, the bread would be just as fit for food as the butter made from that milk. For myself, I believe that bad butter could be spelled with four letters—d-i-r-t."

Keep Chickens Warm and Dry.—Chickens must be kept warm and dry on wet days in spring and summer. It is handy to have a room with a stove in it where they can get some exercise and still be warm and comfortable. Cold hinders their growth and causes bowel troubles that often prove fatal.

Effect of Potato Imports.—In the face of heavy importations of potatoes from England, prices grow firm. An analysis of the situation indicates that a shortage of 30,000,000 bushels in the crop compared with last year is not likely to be overcome by importations, says Farm and Home. Receipts from abroad, however, may cause some easing off in prices from time to time. Counteracting the heavy imports is the increased demand at this time for potatoes for seed purposes. Some anxiety lest German potatoes flood the market prompted an investigation of conditions. It appears that ocean and rail freights from Germany are such that potatoes from that country cannot profitably be handled except, perhaps, at eastern ports.

Planting Strawberry Plants.—For making the holes into which strawberry plants are to be set, a flat mason's trowel pushed forward and back to make a wedge-shaped cavity is an excellent implement, or a wedge sawed from a piece of 2x4 scantling, with a long handle fastened to the broad end will result in a less back-breaking process. In setting the plant spread the roots out fan-shape, and use care not to bury the crown.

POPULAR AS EVER

MRS. LONGWORTH DECLINES TO BECOME BACK NUMBER.

Her Favorite Color, Alice Blue, Is Seen Everywhere on the Streets of Washington—Often at White House.

Alice blue dies as hard as the Teddy bear. In fact, to paraphrase the famous telegram of Mark Twain, "the announcement of the death of each has been very much exaggerated."

Alice blue is redivivus conspicuously on the person of its primary perpetrator, who proposes to relinquish not a jot or tittle of her perquisites. The other Roosevelts may be back numbers. But no post-mortem identity answers for fair Alice. She's here with the goods, and means to stay.

During the valedictory days at the White House just preceding the inauguration, when Mrs. Roosevelt and her children, much beloved of all the retainers, were dispensing farewells and souvenirs, and Mrs. Alice was bustling in and out among the moving lares and penates that somebody innocently characterized "lard and potatoes"—an attache of the White House much moved—it was moving day—came up and lachrymosely extended a hand of final fellowship to the president's older daughter.

Mrs. Longworth regarded the well-wisher with an energetic shove. "Go along with you, man!" she exclaimed, with a laugh, "you aren't getting rid of me as easy as that. I'm not saying good-by. I expect to be here as much as I ever was before. You can't lose me, my Charlie!"

And, indeed, as persona grata at the executive mansion under the new regime, there is none to excel the Lady Alice. President and Mrs. Taft often affectionately dub her their oldest daughter. Mr. Taft feels himself happily responsible for the Longworth-Roosevelt alliance, that is panning out so well.

So Alice is furbishing up her national identity and wearing her own blue again. It is her trademark, her personal cachet.

The latest Longworthian lid shows the Alice blue in a half dozen or so cerulean plumes, long and willowy, which smother the outlines of a big black directoire hat in Neapolitan braid, going from side to side and issuing from a big fat bow of Alice blue velvet. It has the dash of an effect by Romney or Gainsborough. The Lady Alice has been looking very smart in this, spinning these afternoons in her nifty little "electric" up to the congressional offices to fetch her liege lord home after the business of the day.

Her aunt, Mrs. Cowles, too, doesn't propose to be classed among the Rooseveltian has-beens. She is anything but extinct, is this amiable ex-president's sister, who gives one so glad a welcome at her aesthetic home in N street.

The President's Desk.

If the thousands who sit in the president's reception room in the White House waiting for an audience, only knew it, they might make the time less monotonous by contemplating the principal article of furniture, the executive's desk. It is handsome and massive, with a wealth of carving, but its chief interest consists in its historic origin. You all know that Sir John Franklin went to discover the north pole and never came back. His good ship Resolute drifted in the currents of the Arctic ocean, spared from destruction in some mysterious manner, until she reached the waters off the shores of Alaska, where some American whalers boarded her and claimed her. When she reached San Francisco the United States bought her, repaired and refitted her, manned her with an American crew, and sent her to England with international compliments. The old ship was broken up about 30 years ago, and from the soundest of her timbers a handsome desk was made, by direction of the queen, to be presented to the then president of the United States. That is the desk that stands in the president's reception room, and on it the papers of at least eight administrations have been written.

All Washington Plays Golf.

At Washington, President Taft has no monopoly on golf, for even the Japanese ambassador is included among the close students of the ancient game, and from present indications it looks as if Chevy Chase will have to be renamed the "course of all nations."

An idea of the unusual hold golf has upon well-known men can be gleaned by glancing back at the seniors' tournament at Apayamis last fall, when something like 50 men drove off the first tee. The scores some of the veterans made that day would have done credit to any tournament "regular."

Mutual Aid Society of One.

There is an individual at Le Mans, France, who is president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary, and all the members of the Mutual Aid society of the hatmakers of Le Mans. A few years ago there were 350 members, but although the hat trade gradually left Le Mans the society was never dissolved. From time to time he votes himself a small sum from the funds for help during illness, and gives himself a receipt for it.

The Skeptic.

Somebody said he heard a robin sing—
  I felt the cold, and heard the north wind blowing;
Another said he saw the signs of spring—
  I looked across the fields and it was snowing.
Somebody said the Future glittered bright—
  The Present met me with a grim, stern [illegible]

good health, with its blessings, must understand, quite clearly, that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to living aright. Then the use of medicines may be dispensed with to advantage, but under ordinary conditions in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time and the California Fig Syrup Co. holds that it is alike important to present the subject truthfully and to supply the one perfect laxative to those desiring it.

Consequently, the Company's Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna gives general satisfaction. To get its beneficial effects buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

Why the Visit Was Brief.

He was a bright little boy and his mother had taken him on a visit.

"Ostend," said the hostess before supper, "do you have grace at your house?"

"Yes, ma'am," responded the little boy without hesitation.

His mother looked up in astonishment.

"Why, indeed, aren't you mistaken, dear?"

"No, indeed, ma. Didn't I hear a gentleman with a bill tell pa the other day that he had thirty days' grace?"

And then amid general confusion Ostend was hurried home.

"No, is that so? Gee, what a cinch for the men who have to buy Easter hats for their wives on Mars."

Even such notable patriots as Aldrich no longer argue that the tariff is a sacred institution.

Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate, was one of the richest men in the world. But when he died the other day he didn't take a cent of it with him.

Frank B. Kellogg is going to run for United States senator on his reputation as a trust buster. By the way, will some kind friend furnish us a list of the trusts he has "busted?"

Harry Ives makes a good suggestion in the interest of reapportionment. Now is the time for the people of northern Minnesota to insist upon proper representation in the legislature.

Senator Bailey objects to criticism of his attitude on the tariff. The senator exploded a lot of mock heroics when he was caught in the Standard Oil net, and he is not likely to deceive the people again.

J. Adam Bede is demanding the return of his seat in congress, and he's preparing to contest the nomination in the Eight district with Conregssman Miller. The problem is to guess which side to the argument will denounce Cannon and Cannonism.

According to the state law which went into effect May 1, everyone selling milk now, even though he owns but one cow, is required to have a state milk license, which costs one dollar. Any infringement on this law is punishable by a fine of not less than $15 nor more than $25 for each offense.

"I have brought thirty years' experience to this work," said Senator Aldrich recently by way of rebuking Senator Beveridge. But, asks the St. Cloud Times, of what public value is this experience when it leads the senator from Rhode Island to bring in probably the worst tariff bill that was ever officially presented to either branch of congress?

The new law which goes into effect July 2 and provides for a gravity test for all kerosene and gasoline has a paragraph which says that "The sale of adulterated illuminating oils or gasoline is hereby prohibited and any oils that present a yellowish or dark color or dirty appearance to the eye may be rejected and disapproved for illuminating purposes by the chief inspector without further test."

On sober second thought Canada is not quite sure it wants to build a couple of Dreadnoughts to aid Great Britian and increase the imperial navy strength. The matter has been held up while the cabinet considers the subject carefully. There is not the slightest doubt of the Dominion's loyality to the British crown, but, as has been hinted by some prominent statesmen up that way, there may be times when Canada would prefer to go alone and not get drawn into British complications.

In noting the recent sale of the Pioneer Press to the Dispatch some of the country papers pretend to see the mailed hand of the "interests." It would be well to await developments before passing judgment. The Dispatch, under the control of Mr. Grasty, has shown no evidence of corporation control, and from what we know of his past history, he has always maintained an independent editorial policy. We have reason to expect that this attitude will be adhered to in the future conduct of the Pioneer Press.

Insurance Commissioner J. A. Hartigan has compiled a statement from the reports of fire insurance companies on their Minnesota business for 1908. It shows that in 206 cities and villages having fire departments the companies received $5,943,641.87 in premiums of which 2 per cent went as tax for support of the fire department relief associations. The losses paid in these cities and villages come to $4,497,462.82. The ratio of losses to premiums was higher than the average. Total premiums from the municipalities for the past sixteen years were $65,996,147.51, and losses were $35,559,467.04.

The republican party pleaded, last campaign, that the friends of the tariff be permitted to revise it. They are showing, now, says the Duluth Herald, how they go about it, and the result will be that the people will have no further patience with revision by the friends of the tariff. They will most assuredly turn revision over to the enemies of the tariff, if enough of them can be found, and that would mean returning the patient to the operating table for a more critical operation, with attendant disturbance of business all along the line. Real revision could be done now if congress were free, with far less disturbance than will be possible for a long time to come

Many partisan sheets are trying to perjudice Governor Johnson because he signed the bill imposing a tax upon grain owned by speculators after it is stored in elevators, which has heretofore escaped taxation after it left the farmers hands, says the Faimont Sentinel. The theory of these editors is that the elevator men will pay to the farmer for his grain a price less the tax. On that theory, we should not tax elevator property of any kind owned by the grain companies; the cattle which stockmen have bought from farmers, or the flour which rich milling companies have in stock ground from wheat bought of the farmers. It all resolves itself back to the farmer, so on the theory of the peanut politicians, what is the use of taxing anybody but the farmer anyway?

Congressman Charles R. Davis of St. Peter does not think much of the new tariff bill. He says:

"I want a tariff bill that I can defend. In fact we should have a tariff bill that needs no defense, but that seems impossible. I cannot defend the Aldrich bill—not a single schedule of it. We came here to revise the tariff schedules downward. There is no evading this fact. We are not here to enact a tariff law with higher average and valorem duties than the Dingley law, or even to re-enact the Dingley law. There is no sophistry that can convince me that the republican party did not promise a revision of the tariff downward. My people are not satisfied with the threatened tariff legislation. I am not going to support it and then go back home with an attempt at justification. I don't think there would be any justification for me. The people of my district know as much about tariff as I do. Some of them probably know more."

TRIBUTE TO VETERANS.

At Winfield, Kansas, recently, "Billy" Sunday, the evangelist, delivered a striking address on the old veterans, begining in this eloquent fashion:

"Every town is, or should be, proud of the little, staggering, tottering remnants of blue. I consider a town unfortunate if it hasn't within its citizenship evidences of the war to teach and inspire the children of bravery, valor and honor, for the memory of the defenders of their nation, and when I look at you—when I think, men, that you are going up against the one, inevitable, invisible enemy, Death, and he doesn't fight fair. He uses smokeless powder, and fights from behind ambush. If he would come out into the clear, you could give him a magnificent run for his money. But you lose out. They are going down 150 a day, and they face his guns 1,000 veterans a week, and 50,000 of them a year are missing when the encampment rolls around, and I want to say to you people, honor their memory. It wont be long that they will walk your streets. There are many people here tonight who will live to see the day when there will not be a veteran of the civil war on earth. They will be beneath the sod. It is hard for them, it is hard for us to realize that nearly 50 years have rolled away since you went to war. Some of you are gray and bald this evening, but you are young in heart, for time is measured by heart beats, not by the hands on the dial of the clock or the watch, and wonderful things have happened since you men went to the war and came back."

JUSTICE T. D. O'BRIEN.

The appointment of Thos. D. O'Brien, former insurance commissioner, to the supreme court of Minnesota, by Governor Johnson, to succeed Justice Elliot, will be endorsed by every Minnesotan who recognizes genius and plain everyday honesty. The St. Paul Dispatch voices the general sentiment in the following tribute:

"Justice Thomas D. O'Brien of the supreme court of Minnesota," rings true. We believe Governor Johnson has made no mistake in this appointment and there will be little partisan division in the public approval which will come as an echo. Mr. O'Brien, beside having rendered the state good service in more than one capacity and thereby earned the recognition now given, is well equipped by learning, temperament and experience for the seat on the state's highest tribunal. We believe also that the people of Minnesota will look upon his acceptance of this office, under all of the conditions and with its always doubtful political tenure, as something of a personal sacrifice made at the call of duty. If the state may be the loser through the retirement of Mr. O'Brien as counsel in litigation in which the interests of the people are concerned, it may be compensated by his services on the supreme bench."

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Hibbing Tribune: The United States senate is "annoyed" by the republican insurgents. It is liable to be much more annoyed soon by new democratic congressmen.

Albert Lea Standard: President Taft is now said to be opposed to an income tax. Well, it cannot be denied it would hit some of his especial friends pretty hard.

Virginia Virginian: After reading the divorce proceedings in the daily papers, it's refreshing to turn to a story on the celebration of a golden jubilee by some happy old couple.

Ortonville Herald Star: We have not as yet gone very deep into the Payne tariff bill, but it is pleasing to know that one of its first provisions is for a decrease in the tariff on oxalic acid. Now oxalic acid is frequently used by the venders of circus lemon ade as a substitute for real lemons, so in this tariff reduction it may be truly said that Mr. Payne has literally handed us a lemon.

Albert Lea Tribune: While Governor Johnson is in Washington and Virignia, the peerless Nebraskan is "doing" Minnesota. This may mean nothing, but the fact that Mr Bryan expects to carry Winnipeg solid may put a ruffle in the faces of some of the governor's advisors. Mr. Bryan spoke in Winnipeg a few day ago, and the people up there are said to have been capitivated by his eloquence and suavity.

Moorhead Citizen: A few of the republican papers in the state that are so narrow that they cannot see anything but their side of the question and hollering "steel" trust at the governor because he had the manhood to veto a tonnage tax bill that was unjust to a certain portion of the state. Who was it that put in money to help to elect J. F. Jacobson? The steel trust and nobody else in the last campaign. Who was it that had these mining properties taxed to the limit on the iron range? Governor Johnson and his tax commission. Why did not the republicans do this when they had a republican in the governor's chair for at least forty years? Because they did not want to. Governor Johnson did not veto the the tonnage tax because the steel trust wanted him to, but because it was for the best intersets of the state and its people.

End of a Newspaper War.

Winona Independent: And to think that the old Pioneer Press has been absorbed by the Dispatch. As the Dispatch is an evening paper it is probable that the evening edition of the Pioneer Press will be discontinued and the morning edition will be printed as before. The heavy scrap which these two papers have been making against each other for the past few months was bound to end in some such manner as this. It's no fun to keep on losing money week after week and month after month.

AUTOMOBILE RULES.

New Regulations Passed by the Last Legislature.

The new state law for automobiles went into effect today and owners and drivers must observe the new rules of the road, and attend to the proper equipment of their cars. They have thirty days in which to get licenses for the vehicles and for chauffeurs, but the law as to speed limit, road rules and equipment will be in effect tomorrow morning.

Twenty-five miles an hour is the speed limit on straight road; but cars must slow down to one mile in eight minutes, or seven and one half miles an hour, when approaching a bridge, a steep descent a curve, a road or street crossing, or on passing from a side street into a main thoroughfare.

There are several new provisions in the road rules. One of them requires all gasoline cars to be equiped with mufflers, which must not be cut out within any city or village limit. Another requires that on traveled or city streets, slow moving vehicles must keep to the right curb, allowing those moving more rapidly to keep nearer the center of the street and pass to the left. The old rules about stopping on signal for frightened horses, giving half the road to vehicles passing or meeting, and making wide turns when going into a street at right angles, are all reaffirmed.

Every automobile on the road must have adequate brakes, a suitable bell, horn or other signal device, and must keep lamps lighted from an hour after sunset to an hour before sunrise. There must be two lamps in front, visible for 200 feet ahead, a white light behind shining on the number plate, and a red light visible from the rear.

In cases of accident due to operation of a moter vehicle, the driver is required to stop and give his name and address on the request of the person injured or any person present.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

Why He "Gum" It Up.

Benson Times: The following was handed us by one of our well known bachelors on the south side as the summing up of his reasons why he has no wife:

I've run a bit with Beatrice and chased around with Bess;
I've had a case with both of them, I may as well confess;
I've whispered airy nothings in the pearly ear of Nell,
And told a tale of eloquence to Betty and to Bell;
I've hit the high and toppy points with Sarah and with Sue,
And swung to subtle symphonies with Prissie and with Prue;
I've builded castles in the air, assisted some by Nan,
And trolled my moonlight serenades to Dora and to Fan;
I've sworn eternal constancy to Dolly, Tess and Fay,
And jollied quite a jolly lot with Mabel and with May;
I've turned a double trick of hearts while playing whist with Pearl,
And hypnotised Miss Cynthia With "Just one little girl;"
I would have married each and all—and that's a going some!
But darn their unpoetic souls—they all chewed gum!

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

There is an evaporation from the body going on continually, day and night, through the pores and glands of the skin. This is nature's way of maintaining the proper temperature of our systems and preserving the softness and flexibility of the skin, and so long as the blood is free from impurities no trouble will result. When, however, the blood from any cause becomes infected with humors and acids, these too must be expelled, and coming in contact with the delicate fibres and tissues with which the skin is so abundantly supplied they produce irritation and inflammation, and the effect is shown by Eczema, Acne, Tetter, and skin affections of various kinds. These impurities and humors get into the blood through a deranged or inactive condition of the system; the members whose duty it is to carry off the waste and refuse matter of the body fail to properly perform their work, and this impure, fermenting matter is left in the system to be absorbed by the blood. The skin is not only affected by poisons generated within the system, but poisons from without, such as Poison Oak, Poison Ivy, Nettle Rash, etc., enter through the open pores and glands, and so thoroughly do they become rooted in the blood that they are ever present, or return at certain seasons of each year to torment the sufferer. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., cannot cure skin diseases. True, such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, and aids in keeping the skin clean, but it does not reach the real cause, and at best can be only palliating and soothing. A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only certain cure for skin diseases. S. S. S., a gentle acting, safe blood purifier, made entirely of vegetable ingredients of the forest and field, is the proper treatment. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation, and neutralizes the acids and humors, thoroughly cleansing and purifying the blood, and curing skin affections of every kind. It supplies to the blood the fresh, nutritive qualities necessary to sustain the skin and all other parts of the body, and rids the blood of any and all poisons. S. S. S. cures Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Poison Oak and Ivy, Nettle Rash, and all other skin troubles, and cures them permanently by removing every trace of the cause from the blood. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired furnished free to all who write.

I have used your S. S. S., spring and fall, for the past two years, with the result that it entirely relieved me of a form of Eczema which my doctor was unable to cure. My arms, lower limbs, and, in fact, the biggest portion of my whole body was affected, and when I first began S. S. S. the itching, etc., was worse, but I continued the remedy with the result that the dry, itching eruption entirely disappeared. I think a great deal of your medicine, and have recommended it to others with good results. It is the best blood medicine made, and I can conscientiously recommend it for the cure of all blood and skin affections. CHAS. HORSTMAN.

THIEF RIVER FALLS.

From the News and Press.

Manager J. J. Bird, of the local ball team, was down to Mahnomen Tuesday and engaged Bennie Holstein as catcher for the local team. He expects also to secure Charles Roy for pitcher, and Bob Hallet for shortstop.

Ed. O'Hara returned to this city last Friday from Rochester, where he had been operated upon for stomach trouble. The operation was a success in every way and Mr. O'Hara is now enjoying the best of health.

A sad accident occurred last Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Jacobson. Their little seven-year-old son had in some way gotten hold of a dynamite cap. He proceeded in his boyish fashion to strike the cap with a hammer. The result was that the forefinger and thumb of his left hand were so badly mutilated that the remainder of them had to be removed. His face was also badly mutilated by fragments of the shell. The boy was taken to the city hospital Monday evening and is doing well. This should be a warning to other little boys not to play with such dangerous things.

AUDIENCE NEVER SEES HUMAN SIDE OF SINGERS

When the Curtain Falls Real Life of Kings and Queens of Opera Can Be Studied.

It is when the curtain falls that the real self of the king and queen of the operatic stage can be studied.

Then for a time the grand manner of the vocal monarch is laid aside, and the impersonator of the great role becomes for an instant just a plain human being, with all the virtues, faults and follies of the rest of us.

A well known stage manager who has for years been associated with important grand opera ventures, and who has seen all the great singers at close range, talks entertainingly of their ways.

It is all very different from what people think," he says. "For example, I have laughed while the great Italian tenor, Tamagno, now dead, was thrilling an audience with his wonderful performance of "Otello." As soon as the curtain fell and while the applause was yet thundering to bring him before the audience to bow his thanks Tamagno would streak to his dressing room to grab a bottle of beer, and take a long drink.

(Copyright by A. Dupont.)
Mary Garden.

"Emma Eames is the personification of grace behind the scenes, and everybody admires her very highly. She is fond of children, and when she sang in 'Otello' with Tamagno and Maurel she won everybody by the gracious way she played with the children who figure in the second act of the opera.

Caruso and Scotti Frolic.

Caruso, the leading tenor of the Metropolitan forces for many years in this country, and one of the greatest of favorites, is a very democratic sort of man, and I have seen him and Signor Scotti between the acts take each other by the shoulders and waltz around the stage singing the popular number 'Yama.'

"Mary Garden is a woman of most wonderful personalty, and back of the scenes it was a never ending source of interest to me to watch her. She is gifted with most commanding intellect, and her strong, nervous habits of thought show all the time.

"No matter how great the amount of industry involved in perfecting some detail that will add to the realism of her performance, the ceaseless industry of the woman will carry her through. Some singers would have been content to let a substituted dancer go through the gyrations that delight Herod, but as a true artist Miss Garden thought it imperative to preserve the illusion by doing the dance herself, therefore she studied for months, and actually became a dancer in order to do justice to this incident.

"Especially is she a wonder in the arc of makeup, and so great is this skill that she does not simply retain the illusion in front of the footlights, but back of the stage, when you are right close to her, and can see the volume of paint that has gone to help the effect the illusion is not lost.

"During the performance she never loses the character. If she is a queen she retains her regal poise while waiting for cues. Never does she relax. If she is Jean the poor little mountebank in the 'Juggler of Notre Dame' she wanders aimlessly around the stage, throws herself down to rest on a pile of scenery, and never for an instant is anything but the ragamuffin youngster who becomes a saint through devotion to an ideal.

Tetrazzini Delightful.

"The personality of Madame Tetrazzini is a delight to all who have been privileged to get back of the scenes, and come into contact with her. She is the true Tuscan, sunny and emotional. She loves to sing, she has no vanity, and she is frank to say that she hasn't the least idea how she manages to do it all.

"More than once I have known astounded auditors to ask her:

"'How do you manage to sing those extraordinary high nots?'

"The answer is always the same. She looks hopelessly baffled, and with a laugh says in broken English:

"'I don't know.'

"Like most prima donnas, in fact more so than most of them Tetrazzini loves applause, and when she comes dashing off the stage after some particularly tumultuous outburst of admiration on the part of hr audience she is just as likely as not to throw her arms around the neck of whoever happens to be in the path and administer a hearty kiss.

"Tetrazzini has a speaking voice as high in proportion as her singing voice, and once to hear it is to know her ever afterwards, for there is probably no other speaking voice like it.

"There is none of the grand manner about Tetrazzini. She loves to receive, and her dressing room door is ever open to those she likes.

"It was a frequent custom between the acts during the season in New York to have her room so crowded that there was no room for her to walk around, and nobody enjoyed it more than the prima donna.

Sig.. Scotti.

"La diva has a great liking for dogs, and always has a number.

Melba is Haughty.

"Madame Melba is the exact opposite to Tetrazzini. She is the empress back of the scenes. Never for one instant does she drop her hauteur. Melba has been the friend and admired of kings and queens. For nearly two decades her place as the reigning soprano of the world was undisputed, and it is only lately that Tetrazzini has come to contest that superiority.

"As befits a singer of her fame she travels with a whole retinue of attendants, a secretary, etc. Perhaps she needs come of thse to take care of her jewels, for at one performance she wore gems worth a quarter of a million dollars, and many of them had an interest far beyond their financial worth.

"One night when Melba had passed from the stage on her way to the dressing room, I made bold to bow and say:

"'Madame, the opera is magnificent tonight.'

"She paused an instant to say:

"'Is it not always magnificent when Melba sings?'

"Constantino and Dalmores, tenors, are both men who like and are liked by society.

"Both are men of good birth, splendid education and accomplishments, and have the saving grace of a modesty that is a never ceasing charm when exhibited by one of the most lionized classes of artists.

"Both also have the skill of athletes. Dalmores is a boxer. Constantino is a wonderful fencer, and I have seen him when he was doing the opera of 'Faust' while waiting for his call, walk around the stage, and challenge anybody who carried a blade to a little test of skill. At such times he would risk his prowess against anybody from great baritone to supernumary, and it was rarely that anybody managed to make a point against him.

Has Wonderful Wardrobe.

"Constantino has a wonderful wardrobe for the forty parts he has in his repertoire, and for roles which demand a sumptuous showing he has hats and belts studded with diamonds and pearls, and these he will show to friends with as much pride as a woman displaying her new spring gown.

"Zenatello, the young dramatic tenor, is a marked contrast to these two older artists. He is modest and retiring and dodges any social adulation. He knows little English, but has a funny fad for mastering the words of slangy English songs of the kind George Cohan writes, and it is funny to hear him while standing in the wings waiting for the cue that will take him into some tragic situation, humming over to himself the foolish words of some idiotic song.

Madam Tetrazzini.

"Renaud is a great student, and is profoundly silent back of the stage, giving his whole mind to his work, and talking little. Sammarco is somewhat similar, though a little more sociable than the French baritone.

"Labia, though a countess by birth, is jolly and unaffected.

"Plancon has the habit of most bassos of going about the scenes trying his voice in sonorous notes.

"The real singer you never can know unless you get back of the scenes.'

M. Dalmores.

Apathy the Only Flaw.

The English woman's intelligence, when it is developed, is of a high order, and her taste may be cultivated to a high degree. It is from sheer apathy that she is not, as a rule, one of the most fascinating of women.

Madam Homer at Home.

INDIANS SUDDEN WEALTH

Wanted Money From Sale of Land in Greenbacks for Display.

Wealth has suddenly come to the French River Indians through the sale of the valuable timber on their lands near Lake Nipissing. For many years the late chief of the Ojibways sternly repulsed the advances of the lumbermen, but his son has yielded to their solicitations, and it is stated that altogether the band will ultimately be entitled to something like 200,000 pounds sterling. The distribution is being made by Indian Agent Cockburn at Sturgeon Falls. The assembled braves listened stolidly to the explanation of the agent that the piece of paper each received meant that a large sum of money was in the Quebec bank to their credit, which could be obtained when required. A short lecture on banking and the convenience of the savings department followed, after which the recipients marched solemnly to the bank and drew the face value of the checks.

Burdened with wealth, they returned to the agent's office, where each Indian piled his money upon the table and joyfully regarded the stacks of greenbacks which spelled ease and comfort for some time to come. One Indian insisted on having bills of small denomination and was loaded up with a mountain of greenbacks. With a grin he staggered into the office, money bulging out of every pocket. Slowly unpacking himself, he piled his treasure on the table, making a bigger display than any of his red brothers, which afforded him the greatest satisfaction.

With difficulty the men were dissuaded from carrying off their money to the reserve, twenty miles across Lake Nipissing, but finally, after making many generous purchases and paying their bills, nearly all deposited their wealth in the bank. It is said the sale will mean an income to some families of 600 pounds sterling a year. A not unnatural result of this sudden acquisition of wealth has been the frequent and prolonged visits of young bucks from other tribes, who are finding new attractions among the maidens of the Dokis families. The matrimonial market has shown quite a boom. One wedding has already taken place, and indications are favorable for many more in the near future as every Dokis maiden represents an immediate cash value of about 200 pounds and a prospective yearly income of 60 pounds.

The guest glanced up and down the bill of fare without enthusiasm.

"Oh, well," he decided finally, "you may bring me a dozen fried oysters."

The colored waiter became all apologies.

PICTURESQUE COWBOY IS VANISHING FROM PLAINS

Dashing Swashbuckler a Victim of the Coming of More Modern Ways of Doing Things.

Loved of all the nation as an institution, particularly American, and worshipped by the small boy, the day of the cowboy is passing.

The dashing swashbuckler, with his leggings, his swaggering sombrero, his belt, revolvers and lariat will soon be no more, he is vanishing from the plains, a victim of the coming of a more modern way of doing things.

The knell of the cowboy's passing existence is sounded in the decision to abandon the reunion of cow punchers, for many years an annual event in Texas.

This used to beheld at Seymour, Tex. It was an event to which the whole southwest looked forward, and cowboys from half a dozen states made long trips in the saddle in order to be on hand for this reunion. It had been planned to hold it as usual this spring, but those who had it in charge found so little interest that they started an investigation to find out what had become of all the cowboys.

Their discoveries were depressing from the standpoint of the small boy, who in dime novel and pictures has worshipped the deeds of the sharpshooting, broncho busting, fearless men of the plains.

His Occupation Gone.

So widely has the cowboy been scattered by changed conditions that like Othello, he could truthfully say that his occupation is gone. Not more than a few hundred cowboys could by any possibility have been brought to Seymour, and, as this would have been as far short of a true reunion as a swallow is from composing a summer, it was reluctantly decided to have no conclave, and this means likely that the old picturesque institution has passed for all time.

Yet it has not been so long since that a reunion was held that was a remarkable success.

Seymour, now the center of cultivated and agricultural section was a dozen years ago given over to grazing. In 1897 it was the scene of the largest gathering of cowboys ever seen in this country.

The men from ranches in Texas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma rode to the gathering, and more than twenty thousand cowboys and five hundred Indians rallied to the camp and pitched their tents in Seymour.

The influx of the settlers to the Panhandle and the ranch territory of western Texas had at that time just begun, and the advance of the farmer, who was destined to take the soil from the cattle grazer was yet in the future.

One man bore the assignment of keeping this army of visitors in order, Capt. W. J. L. Sullivan recently elected doorkeeper of the Texas house of representatives. His proved courage and knowledge of the men of the plains had led him to be picked as the man who could best be relied on to keep them in check and he did not shirk the responsibilities of being named as grand marshal.

Cowboy Breaking a Bucking Bronco.

Sullivan Is Diplomat.

Sullivan was the only peace officer in Seymour, and everything was up to him. But so skilfully did he discharge his duties that during the four days that the conclave lasted he found it necessary to make only two arrests and these were for minor offenses, which shows that the cowboy was never as needlessly quick on the trigger as the eastern public had been led to believe.

But Mr. Sullivan was a diplomat. He wouldn't take any chances on a clash between the Indians and cowboys. He put the Comanches on one side of the town, while the cowboys had their camp in another direction.

On the second day matters looked a little squally for the Indians, but Sullivan was on the job, and chased back the first party who suggested going over and paying a night visit to the redskins.

Seymour had admirable advantages for a gathering of this kind. The road to the town, which then had a population of 300, was wide and flat, and gave a fine course for the furious races between the cowboys on their swift ranch horses.

On the second night of the reunion Seymour saw the remarkable spectacle of twenty thousand cowboys riding back into town, at breakneck speed, each man with his six-shooter out, and firing into the air.

The bombardment lasted for more than an hour, and the spitting of the flashes and the detonation of the shots made a most thrilling effect.

Prohibition was another visitor that had not yet made its way into the far West, and in order to take care of the thirst needs of the guests thirty temporary saloons were instituted. These were crowded night and day, and yet in spite of the amount of liquor consumed there was little disorder.

Put Up Furious Battle.

Occasionally there were fights. Two big cowboys battled furiously with their fists for an hour before one was forced to give up, but there was no shooting in the affray, for each man turned over his pistol to friends before the combat started.

Some of the men who took part in the festivities had hundreds of miles to ride to get back to their ranches. In fact, there were some who came from as far as New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Montana.

So great a success was the whole affair that it was resolved to make it an annual event, and it looked as though the spirit of the Western life had been saved by getting the comrades together once more.

Then came the war with Spain. That helped the game of the cowboy, for Theodore Roosevelt, remembering the valor of some of the men who had been his companions in the days when he was recruiting his present robust health by a life on the plains, formed a regiment of rough riders, a most striking company, and the plaudits of the whole nation went out to these men who went up San Juan Hill with the gallant colonel.

Cowboy Roping a Steer.

But the modern encroachments were not to be stayed. Civilization didn't feel just the same to the cowboy as the nation did.

Real estate operators found that a lot of the land used for grazing could under proper conditions be turned into the most fertile farm land and yield a far greater profit.

The life of Texas underwent a change. The farmer began to take the place of the cattleman, and even where the latter managed to maintain his way he began to apply new methods to the care of his herds.

Typical Cowboy in All His Glad Rags.

The automobile began to be seen in the West. At first the cowboy laughed. What could the motor car do to push him out of his calling. It couldn't tame a broncho, it couldn't shoot, and certainly was unable to throw a lariat.

Auto Comes on Scene.

But the auto got over the road fast. It could make a round of the ranch at far greater speed. It wasn't like a horse. It never tired out, and an automobile of fair size could take around four men who could do the work of a dozen under the primitive conditions of the West.

And so the settlement of new sections, and the application of modern methods has had the gradual effect of forcing the cowboy further and further into the West and Southwest.

But there are no longer the same number of places to go to. The persistency of the advance of progress makes it ever on the alert to penetrate where it is least expected. Hence no matter wher he turns, the cowboy finds that the agencies that have been putting him out of business are actively at work.

The pacification of the Indians is another of these factors. Formerly the cowboy alone could protect the rancher and his family from the redskins. Uncle Sam's soldiers were all right in the case of a considerable uprising when there came possibilities of pitched battles. But during a large part of the time the settler could not have troops at his elbow. To save himself from marauding bands of Indians he needed to have ever near in his own employ, in fact, intrepid men who would know how to deal with the murdering, robbing aborigines when liquor fired them into taking the warpath.

But now the Indian outbreak is almost completely a thing of the past, and about the only place left for the cowboy of real life is in the Buffalo Bill show.

GATHERING SEA FOWLS' EGGS.

Perilous Work of Cliff Climbers on English Coast.

With the advent of spring the Yorkshire cliff climbers are making preparations for gathering the eggs of the myriads of sea fowl that build nests in the dizzy precipices of the northeastern coast.

At Bempton, a few miles from Bridlington, the favorite resort of these egg hunters, the chalk cliffs tower 400 feet above the sea. They are the home of thousands of gulls, cormorants, kittiwakes and other sea birds that have just begun to build their rough nests in the chalky crevices. William Wilkinson, who has pursued this perilous calling for many years, is known locally as "the king of the egg hunters." He is a bluff, weather scarred man of the sea, with as much nerve and agility as is possessed by the most daring steeplejack.

Wilkinson wears an old helmet to protect his head from the pieces of rock dislodged by the rope by which he is suspended in midair. Around his body he buckles a kind of leather hammock, in which he is able to sit. On his arms he wears leather protectors.

"Lower away, boys," he cries as he swings himself over the brink in an almost horizontal position and presses each foot firmly against the chalk surface. Three of the men seize the rope and foot by foot the intrepid climber is lowered till his cheery voice is lost amid the fluttering sounds of the disturbed birds. He swings from nest to nest, putting each egg carefully in a bag slung over his shoulder. As soon as his bag is full he gives the "hoist up" signal on the guide rope and the men haul him up.

Wilkinson makes several descents and at the end of the day shares the spoil with his assistants, who sell them for eating purposes to the inhabitants of the neighboring villages.

WOMEN'S FOOD EXPENSIVE.

Menus of Student Clubs of Men and of Women Show This.

The question whether men eat less than women do or whether they buy more economically is suggested to a writer in Health Culture by a comparison of the grocery bills run up by men students and bachelor girls who have clubbed together for the purpose of cutting expenses.

In every case in which tables for comparison are given the men's menu for the week costs less than that of the women. Both seem to have reduced the food allowance to the lowest possible terms, but in footing up the amount spent the women have run into certain extravagances avoided by the men.

"Maybe," says the puzzled inquirer, "women really don't know how to shop, after all, but the more likely supposition is that no matter how strict the regimen the feminine nature requires certain luxuries that mere man can get along without."

Brillat-Savarin's Sleepy Sisters.

Brillat-Savarin had two spinster sisters who found as much pleasure in sleeping as the author of the "Physiologie du Gout" found in eating. They lived in the country, and were in the habit of passing ten months of the year in their beds, leaving them only to prepare for the annual visit of their brother, who invariably arrived on October 1. He remained with them until the end of November, when they bade him farewell with the words, "Good-by until next year, Anthelme; we are going back to bed." This somnolent regime agreed with them admirably, for they both lived to a great age, one of them, Pierrette, attaining her hundredth year. Pierrette's end, according to her brother's biographer, was worthy of her life. She was sitting up in bed, eating her dinner, and not being served quickly enough screamed somewhat angrily, "Bring the dessert." When the servant brought it she found her mistress dead.

Missionaries Forty Years.

More than a century of service in the missionary field among the Indi*ans of Oklahoma by one family* was celebrated today when the Robertson memorial chapel in Haskell was dedicated. Many of those present were full blood Creek Indians, among whom the Rev. W. S. Robertson preached and worked so long. The two daughters of the family, Miss Alice Robertson, postmaster in Muskogee, and Mrs. N. B. Moore of Haskell, were honored guests.

Forty years ago in an Indian cabin on what is now the site of Haskell, the Rev. Mr. Robertson preached the first sermon ever preached in this section of the country. He was at that time stationed at the Creek mission of Tullehassee. The memorial chapter dedicated today is a cut stone edifice erected at a cost of $4,000. It contains seven memorial windows, one to each of the members of the family.

Buried Treasures in Morocco.

In Morocco it is customary for a man to bury most of his riches in a place known only to himself. This custom is practiced by all Moors, for they cannot trust their own family, who would murder them directly it was known where the money was.

At the death of the head of the family in Morocco digging operations commence at once, but seldom is the money discovered. There must be many fortunes buried away in odd corners of the country. An instance came under the writer's notice at one of the coast towns. During the demolition of a house a considerable sum of money was found built into the wall.

Shiloh Church to Be Rebuilt.

An effort is being made to build a suitable memorial church on the site of the original Shiloth church, on Shiloh battlefield, now one of the most attractive of military parks. It was on this very spot the bloody battle of Shiloh was begun on the morning of April 6, 1862. It is the purpose to build a memorial church to cost not less than $10,000. The names of all contributors will be recorded in a permanent register and kept on exhibition in the church, which will be open to all visitors and tourists.

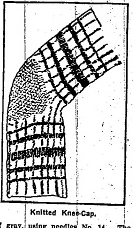
WOMAN'S INTERESTS

CAP FOR THE KNEE

DESIGNED TO ADD TO COMFORT OF THE ELDERLY.

Full Directions for Its Work in Wool—Those Fond of Knitting Will Take Pleasure in Fashioning the Article.

A neat-fitting knee shape so desirable for the comfort of many elderly persons may be made from one skein of 4-ply scarlet vest wool, and two skeins of gray, using needles No. 14. The knitting should measure 10 stitches to the inch in width. The size given is for a lady; if 20 more stitches are used, a man's size is obtained.



Knitted Knee-Cap.

Cast on with the gray wool 96 stitches and 1 extra. Knit off 36 on the first needle, 30 on the 2d, 30 on the 3d. Knit the last (extra) stitch with the first in the round; this always gives a neat round.

Knit 16 rounds of 3 knit, 3 purl, for a rib. Join in the scarlet, knit a round; then commence a second round, first putting the gray wool over the scarlet at the back of the needles. Do this each round, as it gradually knits the wool that is not in use up to the level of the other, and prevents long loops at the back.

19th and next 7 round—gray; 27th and 3 following rounds—scarlet; 31st and next 7 rounds—gray; 39th and next 8 rounds—scarlet 48th and 55th round—gray; 56th and 59th round—scarlet; 60th and 67th round—gray; 68th and 69th rounds—scarlet; 70th to 77th rounds—gray.

Knit the 78th and 79th rounds in plain knitting.

The knee—with gray wool, k 1, p 1, until you have knitted 25 stitches. Turn, (Always slip the last stitch). P 1, k 1, to the end of 27 stitches. Turn, k 1, p 1 until you have knit 29 stitches. Turn. Now change the little rib. Slip the first then knit the knit stitch of last row, purl the purl stitch.

Knit one more at the end, turn. Knit in this manner, knitting one more stitch each little row, and changing the rib after every 3d row until you have 12 extra stitches on each side the center.

Knit 6 whole rounds, keeping the center stitches in the pattern, the other in the ribs of 3 k, 3 p.

Find the center stitches; knit to the end of these, turn, knit 52, turn, knit 51, and so on, until you have 29 only. Knit these, then knit the whole round.

2 rounds knit plain, 8 rounds of gray in ribs as before, 2 rounds scarlet, 8 rounds gray, 4 rounds scarlet, 8 rounds gray, 8 rounds scarlet, 8 rounds gray, 4 rounds scarlet, 8 rounds gray, 2 rounds scarlet, 16 rounds gray. Cast off and run in the end of the wool.

IDEA FOR THE BUTTONHOLES.

Bands Affixed to the Clothing of Small Children Will Save Work and Worry in the End.

There are few things more maddening, as mothers know, than to have buttonholes tear out on the clothing of small children. To prevent this cut bands for skirts and underclothing long enough to turn back about an inch and work the buttonholes through the four thicknesses.

For buttonholes that show it is a good plan to face with a double strip of material. It may look a little clumsier at first but is less unsightly than darned or torn buttonholes. In the same way buttons should be sewed on with small extra square of material underneath.

In working, stay the buttonhole by overcasting closely, also by long bars of the thread on the outside. Be careful to work the corners closely as it is here where the strain comes, yet they are often merely drawn together with a stitch or two.

When the buttonholes of sweater or knitted coat pull out of shape, sew a piece of tape or ribbon on the under side. Cut out under the buttonholes and overcast loosely to prevent raveling. If the buttonhole seems to have weakened as well as stretched, it can be re-worked through the sweater and the ribbon both.

HAT STRINGS BACK IN FAVOR.

Pretty Fashion Seems Likely to Force Its Way to Popularity It Once Enjoyed.

The hat string has designs upon femininity; it is making a strong bid for favor, and would force its way into popularity.

This pretty fashion seems not to belong to the city streets, where people congregate and popular fashions thrive. Ribbon ties are a more exclusive bit of elegance, and belong, more properly speaking, at the garden party, and always to the pretty face.

But great things are predicted for hat strings, and who shall say what may result? These strings are used most frequently on hats of the "scoop model"—not the old, old bonnet scoop at all, but a bent-down brim, not very large, that we have been calling a turban, because it is one of the turban sizes. Some strings are tied loosely in front or at the side. Others are single streamers fastened to the back of the hat, brought round to the side, where they fall gracefully over the shoulder. Ribbons of velvet or satin messaline are used most generally.

TINY FLOWERS AND FEATHERS.

Lilliputian Roses, Very Closely Packed, Used to Trim Some of the Smartest Hats.

Tiny feathers are quite the rage at present, and leaves as small are used with the lilliputian roses, the life-sized forget-me-nots, and the modest little violets that are seen on some of the smartest hats.

A very pretty hat has a crown made of pink net draped in folds with a puffed effect at the top and a brim of pure white straw. Nestling half in the pink net and half falling out of it upon the white brim is a garland composed of tiny sprays of white lilac and the smallest imaginable pink roses, while at the back of the hat is a large wide bow of pale pink satin.

Such flowers as meadow sweet and the feathery gypsophila are being employed as if they were plumage waving over a bouquet of closely-packed little flowers.

A retinue of bridesmaids will wear hats of delicate mauve net with white brims, and at one side bunches of sea lavender starting from Louis Quinze wreaths of tiny pink roses. The girls are to carry in the crook of the left arm a loose sheath of sea lavender and pale pink roses tied with broad pink satin and lavender ribbons.

Gray chip is a favorite straw, and one that lends itself to many millinery efforts in the manifestation of refinement. A hat of the softest of dove gray shades with a scarf of silver gauze draped round the crown has at one side clusters of gray roses shading to purple, and a mass of little silver apples nestling in silver leaves.

Bachelor's buttons are being used, and as they are very small flowers they answer fashion's purpose admirably. In many instances the bouquets appear under the brim instead of on the top of it, making rosettes, beneath which streamers of knife-kilted black tulle flow, which streamers are carried to the front or back and caught in place by means of another little rosette.—American Register, London.

MADE EFFECTIVE LAMP SHADE.

Designed of Light Corded Silk on an Empire Frame of Wire Some Twelve Inches Deep.

A good-looking lamp shade for lamp or electrolier was made up recently on an empire frame of wire, 12 inches deep. It was covered with a light corded silk in a soft shade of dull pink, laid on in flat vertical plaits all around the frame

The frame was then divided into panels by half-inch gold braid put on in vertical lines. The top and bottom were finished with inch and a half gold braid to match that used for the paneling.

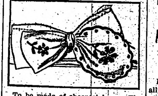
If one of these silk shades are used on the coal oil lamp they last longer and are never scorched on the top if they are fitted with a deep collar of asbestos or isinglass.

A charming example of such a shade had a flat box plaited foundation of canary yellow China silk paneled with a galloon in bronze gold.

Rice Molds.

One quart of milk and water equal parts, half teaspoon of salt, one cup of sugar; bring to boiling point; one cup of ground rice, moisten well to prevent clodding; stir in fluid, boil 15 minutes, pour in custard cups or any small, pretty form. When ice cold turn out. Serve with cranberry sauce or any other tart sauce.

FOR TAILORED WAISTS.



To be made of sheerest lawn. The embroidered design may be worked out in light or dark blue or pink mercerized cottons.

Baby's Frock.

A little empire frock for babies wear is one of the new season's offerings. It has the tiniest, shortest yoke, cut out in the conventional square, which is daintily finished with heading, ribbon threaded. The full skirt is gathered to the yoke and is trimmed on the bottom with groups of tucks and lace insertion. The little puff sleeves end in narrow lace frills. It is a sweet little frock and is entirely new in design. The price is $4.75. A similar design in materials a little inferior to that described is only $2.79.

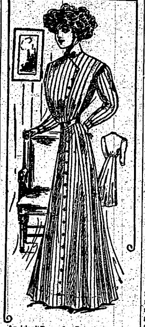
ALL BRIGHT COLORS

CHARMING DESIGNS SHOWN IN THE SUMMER FROCKS.

Also a Season for Fine Handwork—Slimness Continues to Be an Indispensable Effect—Ideal Gowns Illustrated.

The summer frocks are most charming. There is a riot of pale flower colors, sweet peas, buttercups, roses, carnations, trellised vines, slim stripes and checks. Board-like lines lie beside linens almost gossamer fine; muslins and ginghams fall in soft wilted folds, and some embroidered webs seem as grand and bewitching as those once worked in hand frames and lying now in museums to show dead beauty's thrift and taste.



An Ideal Dress for Practical Wear.

Since slimness is the rage though the wide skirt threatens—there must be no superfluous bulging. Only soft materials shape the finer frocks, and every line from throat to hem of skirt must go toward the look of skimpness. Trimmings lie flat, shape, waist and skirt fronts, and are inserted in bands whose very joints seem made with glue.

And yet the right woman is a saint in these narrow restrained modes. But the situation means that one must cultivate ardently all knowledge of her very own type, and when in doubt choose always the thing midway in the scale of dazzlement. It is far wiser to be a little behind fashion in a becoming dress than to keep pace with her in things which make us look frights.

An ideal gown for practical uses is pictured. This, singular as it may seem, is a semi-princess model, but so trimly is the joint of the waist and skirt hidden by the neat belt that a one-piece frock would never be suspected. If liked, the costume could be made in two distinct pieces, or the bodice or skirt alone may be chosen as a model for a separate garment. Six yards of the wider goods will make this dress and eight and seven-eighths of the narrower.

Such a style would not suit a clinging texture, for all its lines are on the tailored order, and such effects call for rather solid materials. Linen striped and plain, pique, duck, cotton, ottoman suiting, and khaki are some of the desirable mediums, and the round buttons could be of pearl or bone, and either match the dress color or be in pure white.

HAT PLUMES ARE STIFFENED.

Arranged So as to Give Added Height to Some of the New Turbans and Bowler Shapes.

A "wired plume" does not sound in the least appropriate. One thinks of the long ostrich feather always as the most perfect expression of grace in hat garniture. It is, however, only the rib or background of the feather that is wired to give added height to some of the new turbans and bowler shapes. The plume is stiffened to an almost unbelievable height and then doubled, so that it remains quite tall enough for all practical purposes, but this panache is still a swaying plume.

The all-black hat with its long ostrich feathers is no more the Parisian favorite, and the large white hat, too, will give way befort the softer silk and satin straws in pastel colors. Plumes to match will be worn on these large yet delicate creations intended for afternoon wear, with costumes of peach color, apricot, zenith blue and iris.

The Toilet Table

Premature grayness of the hair usually accompanies a run-down condition of the whole system. Everybody knows that the best thing for a weakened system is a good tonic and plenty of exercise. The same is true of a weakened scalp or faded gray hair. A tonic is needed; one externally and one to be taken internally to build up the system. Sulphur and iron are the lacking elements where the hair turns prematurely gray, and by supplying them the original color may be partly restored.

An excellent household remedy for burns is pure vaseline or olive oil. The great thing is to exclude the air and dirt from the burnt surface, and this the oil will do.

The New Parasols.

Some of the newest parasols have detachable handles, making it quite possible to pack this article of one's wardrobe in the trunk without any trouble.

SEASON'S HATS NOT PRETTY.

Some of the Millinery Decreed by Fashion Can Only Be Described as Remarkable.

It has been argued that truly fastidious women have never adopted caricature fashions. A glance backward at the peculiar things women have worn upon their heads will quite disprove the statement. Women pretty generally are taking advantage of the precedent they have established and are actually buying this season's hats.

Headgear is exciting, to put it mildly, and as the season advances there is no abatement of interest in the remarkable top pieces. In fact, they seem to have grown more exaggerated since the days of the earliest spring showing. Women go to these continuous openings to look; they wander about to laugh, and they remain to buy; while men stop at the hat windows and wonder if they will be "expected to pay for anything like that."

Women go in pairs because it takes the genius of two women to make a final decision on this momentous subject. The woman in the wistaria purple gown tries on a remarkable creation in cactus red, and somehow she can see, in her mind's eye, just how it will tone in with her sagebrush gown. It is furiously red, but wonderful withal, and the cactus idea appears in the prickles as well as in the color. The sharp points of the notched ribbon are bunched closely together in a large blossom-like mass, as only an expert could have done it.

These hats have a very professional air, although it is true enough that they are copyable. Almost anybody can put a row of bitter black cherries from a wayside tree an an inverted flower pot of burnt straw if they have first seen it gracefully done. The magnolia hat, with its wonderful blossoms of tropical growth laid on the ribbon velvet trimming of a hat of purple satin straw in a braid that is unprecedented in size, is not a copyable hat; but most of the inverted basins and pans are, because the trimming is frequently nothing more than a band of velvet and a tight little bunch of mixed flowers loking as if it came out of a southern garden just 50 years ago.

Pictorial Ancestry.

An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket, and, pointing to the head engraved on it, said, "My great-great-grandfather was made a lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."

"What a coincidence!" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indians whose picture you see on this cent."

EVOLUTION OF SAFETY PIN.

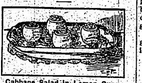
Idea Really Is a Development of the Greek Fibula, or Ornamental Brooch.

The ingenious predecessor of the modern safety pin was the Greek fibula, or ornamental brooch. This piece of metal work, like so many articles of antiquity, embodied practically all the essential principles of its modern counterpart. It was made to spring by a loop in the metal wire which formed its point, and it had a guard under which the point was caught. But it was considered to be more ornamental than useful.

Wealthy women often had jeweled fibulae which they wore in a dazzling row down each arm. Persons of smaller means had plain or fanciful gold and silver brooches pinned in conspicuous places on their clothing. Large brooches were sometimes used to pin up tapestries.

Several bloody stories are told of jealous women who used the sharp-pointed fibulae to inflict wounds upon their enemies, sometimes with fatal results.

A GARNISHED DISH.



Cabbage Salad in Lemon Cups.

To make a dainty dish for the company luncheon, shred some young cabbage, add chopped nuts and pimentos, mix with stiff mayonaise dressing, and serve ice cold in lemon cups. This salad goes well with cold meats, and may be arranged on the meat platter as pictured.

Fashion for White Veils.

As the warmer weather comes on heavy black dotted veils are giving way to thin white ones. Many of the new ones have barred squares in white formed by heavy threads. Others have black dots, and some have a tiny black selvedge.

All Want to Bow to Royalty.

The Lord Chamberlain's post bag on Friday and Saturday next will attain mammoth proportions, between three and four thousand letters being received on each day from people either desirous of being summoned themselves to attend a court, or of presenting a daughter or daughter-in-law. Answer This Question

When thousands of women say that they have been cured of their ailments by a certain remedy, does this not prove the merit of that remedy?

Thousands of women have written the story of their suffering, and have told how they were freed from it by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—for thirty years these reports have been published all over America.

Without great merit this medicine could never have gained the largest sale of any remedy for woman's ills—never could have become known and prized in nearly every country in the world.

Can any woman let prejudice stand between her and that which will restore her health? If you believe those who have tried it you know this medicine does cure.

Read this letter from a grateful woman, then make up your mind to give Mrs. Pinkham's medicine a chance to cure you.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I am a firm believer in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was a great sufferer from organic female troubles for years, and almost despaired of ever being well again. I had bearing-down pains, backache, headache and pains in my abdomen, and tried Mrs. Pinkham's Compound as a last resort. The result was astonishing, and I have used it and advocated it ever since. It is a great boon to expectant mothers. I have often said that I should like to have its merits thrown on the sky with a search-light so that women would read and be convinced that there is a remedy for their sufferings.

"My husband joins me in its praise. He has used it for kidney trouble and been entirely cured."—Mrs. E. A. Bishop, 1915 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Difficult to Draw.

A teacher asked her class to draw a picture of that which they wished to be when they grew up, and all went diligently to work except one little girl, who only chewed her pencil.

"Don't you know," replied the little girl, "but I don't know how to draw it. I want to be married."

Misses Mollie Allard and Rose Harren entertained the F. F. B. at a kitchen shower for Miss Lillian Buse at the Harren home Monday evening. The rooms were profusely decorated with boats of wild flowers and Japanese parasols. As Miss Buse entered the room she was showered with kitchen towels. One of the means of entertainment provided by the hostesses was a "kitchen contest," various articles of kitchen utensils being used in answering puzzles. Happily the bride-to-be was the winner of the head prize, no doubt an indication of her good equipment for the domain in which she is to rule. Each guest received and read a letter, each letter telling of an epoch in the life of the bride-to-be. The bride-to-be was presented with a clothes basket filled with porcelain ware and during the evening a messenger arrived laden with a trunk filled with good wishes. An elaborate supper was served. The dining room was decorated with pink hearts and the chair of the bride-to-be was festooned with hearts and bows. Misses Allard and Harren are charming hostesses and it was a very pretty affair, one no doubt that will long be cherished in the memory of her in whose honor it was given. The favors were Japanese parasols.

What Came of a Woman's Hat.

By ESTELLE MARSH.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Tom Buxton got into a parlor car, put his belongings in the rack above him, took a newspaper out of his pocket and settled himself to endure a journey. Before opening the paper he made a hasty survey of the car. At the other end were several uninteresting looking people, in the center an old woman and a boy, but on the opposite side, slightly in advance of him, in a chair whose back was turned toward him, was something that arrested his attention. It was a feminine hat. It was to be seen above the back of the chair and indicated a woman beneath. It was the work of an artist. Its rim, nearly a yard in diameter, was topped by several splendid black ostrich feathers springing from a profusion of bands and buckles that had been thrown together in an extraordinary combination. Such hats are only to be associated with beautiful women.

The next thing for Buxton was to get a view of the owner of the hat, but as she persistently kept her face toward the window this was impossible. After a long wait for her to change her position he arose and walked toward the forward vestibule, then sauntered back. To his discomfiture, the lady had changed her position, her face being toward the opposite end of the car. As he passed her she turned again toward the window. He kept on toward the rear vestibule, went into the smoking room, came out and walked to his chair. The lady had swung around to face forward.

Buxton said something without moving his lips.

For fear of appearing obtrusive he swung his chair around and looked out of the window. When he swung it back the lady was facing the front of the car, her head was resting on the cushion, and she held a folder time table over her face. She was apparently resting or slumbering. The shapely hand that held the folder was delicately gloved, and a bit of lace fell from the wrist. The figure was shapely and the position one of graceful repose.

"Confound it!" exclaimed Buxton mentally. "Why can't I get a glimpse of her face? If it corresponds to the rest of her she must be a Venus."

But fortune did not seem to favor him. She remained in her half reclining position under his admiring gaze for nearly an hour, while the delicious odor of a bunch of violets she wore on her bosom was continually wafted to him. Then she moved slightly. Buxton hoped. But, alas, before lowering the folder she turned her face toward the window.

Buxton said things again without moving his lips.

But the conductor is coming to punch the tickets. She will turn aside to hand him hers. He stops in the middle of the car to explain something to the old woman with the boy, and it seems half an hour before he makes her understand. Buxton grows restless with impatience. The ticket puncher comes on, and when he reaches the lady's chair she languidly extends her hand sideways without turning. Her ticket is punched, the conductor moves on, and again Buxton is disappointed.

What a singular series of coincidences that the lady should have happened for an hour and a half always to be in such position that Buxton could not see her features! "I wonder," he said, "if she isn't a very homely woman who is keeping her face away from me on purpose. But she hasn't seen me. She was sitting in that position when I came in, and her back has been toward me ever since. No; I can feel it in my very bones that she is beautiful."

He was now ready for an aggressive movement. He arose and, going to the chair next to hers, sat down. After a brief gaze out of the window he turned his eyes toward her. He was too late. She had turned her back.

Suddenly, without warning, her chair swung around, and she faced him squarely.

"Julia!"

"Tom!"

A pause.

"I've been trying to get a glimpse of your face all the morning."

"I know it. I could see you in the mirrow beside the window. Why should you try to see me after all that has passed?"

"Hang the past! It's the present that interests me. I've been falling in love ever since I boarded this train."

"I trust you won't treat the lady as you treated me."

"And I trust she won't treat me as you did. But that's past. I dare say it was all my fault anyway."

"I have come to the conclusion that it was all mine. But it's too late now. The divorce proceedings are drawing to a conclusion, a great deal of money has been spent, and if we 'make up' it will all have been for nothing."

"Well, if that isn't like a"— He checked himself. He had learned wisdom. He continued, "A reconciliation under the circumstances would be unwarranted—a pecuniary absurdity—if I had not made ten times the amount involved in stocks while the suit has been pending."

"In that case I suppose"—

"Suppose what?"

Culinary Conceits.

Parmesan cheese sprinkled thickly over stewed tomatoes that are later browned in a baking dish gives them an added zest.

Just for a change try filling apples which have been cored ready for baking with orange marmalade or raisins and a little butter and sugar. The result is delicious.

Hard boiled eggs, chopped and covered with a not too rich white sauce that is seasoned with curry, the eggs and dressing served in a ring of boiled rice, is an excellent dinner entree or luncheon dish.

A delicious salad may be prepared from cold duck. Mince the meat fine, adding a small quantity of stuffing to it. Season highly with salt and pepper, stir in a little minced celery and cover with mayonnaise or some similar dressing. Serve on a bed of lettuce leaves.

CHARTER COMMISSION APPOINTED

Will Propose Amendment to City Charter to be Voted Upon at Next Election.

Unless Charter is Amended City Council Cannot Consider Franchise Proposition.

After the proposition of the Red Lake Falls Electric Light company for a long term franchise had been submitted to the city council it was found that under the city charter the council could not grant a long term franchise. A charter commission has been appointed to prepare an amendment to the city charter to be submitted to the voters and voted upon at the next city election. Judge Watts has named the following citizens of the city to serve on the commission: John A. Duffy, A. P. Toupin, Chas. E. Boughton, N. M. Watson, Theo. LaBissoniere, H. H. Zaiser, Frank E. Hunt, Chas. N. Bourdon, Joseph Helm, Fred Borchers, T. A. Crompe, Arthur Lizee, Henry Hennemuth, Simon Paul, Joseph Remick.

The council submitted the names of forty citizens, not office holders, to the court, believing that it would be well to have the commission made up of citizens. Some of those were appointed on the commisson and, as the names will indicate, several of the city officials were appointed. Only citizens who have been residents and tax payers in the city for five years are eligible for service on the commission.

A special election to vote on an amendment cannot be called within six months of the time of any regular city election, so the proposition will not be voted upon until the regular city election next fall.

Mr. Tandberg Improving.

County Treasurer O. T. Tandberg, who has been in Minneapolis for several weeks for medical treatment, and mention of whose critical illness was made in the last issue, underwent an operation for appendicitis last Thursday. A letter received today from the attending physician states that Mr. Tandberg is progressing favorably, though slowly. The slow progress is to be expected since the appeundix had ruptured, causing a general inflamation of the bowels. The physician expresses the opinion that from present indications Mr. Tandberg will improve steadily and recover. He is gaining from day to day.

BALL TEAM ORGANIZED.

J. J. Padden Chosen Manager and E. G. Buse Captain.

At a meeting held last evening the Red Lake Falls base ball team was organized. J. J. Padden was chosen manager and E. G. Buse captain. It is not the intention to hire any "professional" ball players, but to put an all home team in the field. It is thought that there is material enough here so that a creditable showing can be made. Since no outside talent is to be empoyed, the expense of maintaining the team will not be great, and the people of the town will be asked to contribute only moderately to the support of Red Lake Falls' pasture lot athletics.

The first game scheduled is to be played with the Wahpeton, North Dakota, team June 14, on the local diamond. Don't forget the date and don't forget to get out and root.

SUCCESSFUL MEETING

More Than Two Hundred School Officers at Thief River Falls Friday.

The meeting of the school officers of the county held at Thief River Falls last Friday was a very successful meeting, more than two hundred school officers being in attendance. Every number on the program was given and there were some interesting discussions of plans for the improvement of the rural schools of the county—improvements in lighting, heating, ventilation, sanitiation.

The state industrial contest work was thoroughly discussed and its value in rural educational work was demonstrated.

The school officers were very much pleased with the meeting and the schools will profit much by the information that the officers received. The meeting was a practical one—a part of Supt. Anderson's plan for improvement of conditions in the rural schools.

Mill is Running.

Plummer Pioneer: The S. P. K. Lumber company's mill started for the season Monday morning and it is now cutting between 8,000 and 10,000 feet daily. About twenty men are empoyed at present, but more will be added to the force later. The engine installed last week by Supt. Everritt, proved to be too light for the work and on this account the daily cut is not as large as desired. The trouble about the Clearwater lake dam, which has been in court for several months, has been settled and no more inconvenience is expected from that source. The S. P. K. people now have the privelege of using the dam to float their logs down the river, and as soon as rains come to raise the water, the second log drive will be brought down.

Eclipse of Sun.

A total eclipse of the sun is scheduled to occur on June 17, visible in all portions of the United States except the extreme south.

The eclipse will be on in this lattitude about 6:10 in the morning and will continue until after sunset. At the time of the disappearance of the sun, the eclipse will cover about one-half the area of Old Sol.

The last total eclipse of the sun was witnessed shortly after the close of the civil war, in the year 1869. The eclipse will be remembered by many citizens who yet speak of it as a queer experience.

The eclipse predicted for June 17 is to be total and will be a reproduction of the one in 1869. The occasion will afford a rare experience.

C. O. F. CONVENTION.

Will Be Held at Little Falls Next Week.

The state convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters will be held at Little Falls June 8, 9, and 10. There will be delegates in attendance from all over the state. J. P. Harren will go to Little Falls next week as a delegate from the local lodge to the state convention.

THE BAND WILL PLAY

Open Air Concert at the Healy Dam Sunday Afternoon.

The next open air concert by the Red Lake Falls band will be given Sunday afternoon. If the weather is favorable the band boys will give a river bank concert. They will meet at the Healy dam on the Red Lake river at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and for the entertainment of their friends will play a program of their best selections during the afternoon.

A certified copy of the county division petiton has been filed with the county auditor. It's an interesting instrument. The name of about every farmer living in the city of Thief River Falls is on the petition.

Quite a number of the people living in the townships of North, Norden and Silverton also signed it, but not more than fifty people living outside of the city and those three towns have signed.

Last week it was announced by the Thief River papers that the farmers demand county division. There is no doubt of it.

Just for fun, about a third of the names of the signers are printed below. Bro. John (Hancock) Eastman heads the list. The rest of the list looks just like the part that is printed. Only difference is that the names are spelled differently. Following are the names of many of the farmers who demand county division:

Lieutenant Governor A. O. Eberhart Will Deliver the Address.

Thirteen Young People Will Recieve Diplomas from Red Lake Falls High School.

The commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls high school will be held at the Metropolitan opera house next Monday evening, June 7. The address is to be delivered by Lieutenant Governor O. A. Eberhart. Mr. Eberhart is an able speaker and his address will be worth hearing. The fact that he will probably be a candidate for the republican nomination for governor next year will add interest to the occasion.

The following young people will receive diplomas: Eleanor Hansen, Igna Hamry, Anna M. Rosch, Ethel J. Bourdon, Rebecca F. Hunt, Hazel J. Healy, Cecil L. Mikkelsen, Banche A. Altstadt, Mary W. Cadieux, John B. Richards, Theodore C. Garceau, Agna E. LaFontaine, Segrid A. V. Anderson.

To Make Worry Impossible.

Good robust health is a great enemy of worry. A good digestion, a clear conscience, and sound sleep kills a lot of worry. It is not a very difficult thing to make worry imposible. We can keep ourselves perfectly free from worry enemies by doing everything that must be done sanely and by the daily use of a good malt tonic, such as Golden Grain Belt Beer. Serve this wholesome food beverage at mearltime and you will strengthen and upbuild your entire system. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

EXPECTED HAS HAPPENED.

Thief River Falls Makes First Move in Delay Game.

Attorney Chas. E. Boughton went to Thief River Falls last Saturday to appear for the county commissioners in injunction proceedings before Court Commissioner Johnson. The county commissioners were required to show cause why an injunction should not be issued restraining them from issuing the "court house bonds." Of course Attorney Boughton could not talk loud enough nor long enough to "show" Commissioner Johnson that there was "cause," so, as expected, the injunction has been issued and there'll be a little scrap in the district court and no doubt in the supreme court. That, too, is expected.

BUSE-HEALY WEDDING

Popular Young People Married in Red Lake Falls Wednesday.

A very pretty wedding was that of Miss Lillian Adelia Buse and Mr. Harry Boomer Healy solemnized at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Ernest Buse, in this city at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, June 2. Rev. D. K. Laurie was the officiating clergyman. The bride was becomingly attired in an Empire gown of white Messaline silk and wore white bridal roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Mollie Allard, wore a pretty gown of pink silk and carried pink carnations. The groom and his best man, Mr. E. G. Buse, wore the conventional black.

The Buse home was prettily decorated with flowers for the happy occasion. It was a quiet home wedding, only the relatives and members of the F. and F. B., the especial girl friends of the bride, being present.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to the Healy home where a wedding breakfast was served. As Mr. Healy and his bride entered the Healy grounds they were showered with rose petals. The dining room was prettily decorated with flowers and flowers were strewn over the table. Covers were laid for twenty-five and a most elaborate wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. Healy and his bride left Wednesday noon on a wedding trip to the cities. After July 15, they will be at home to friends at Detroit, Minn. The bride and groom grew to womanhood and manhood in Red Lake Falls and it is no exaggeration to say that there are very many friends who are happy to offer congratulations and best wishes.

Institute at Plummer.

A farmers' institute will be held at Plummer next Wednesday, June 9. The institute will be in charge of Supt. Robertson of the Crookston experiment farm. He will be assisted by Supt. T. A. FARMERS' INSTITUTE WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16

Farmers are Invited to Come to Red Lake Falls That Day.

Morning and Afternoon Sessions—Meeting for the Ladies.

There will be forenoon and afternoon sessions of the farmers' institute to be held in Red Lake Falls Wednesday, June 16. The regular meetings will be held at the Bijou theatre at 10 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. The institute will be in charge of Supt. Wm. Robertson of the Crookston experimental farm. Among the speakers will be O. A. Storvick of the dairy and food department.

In the afternoon there will be a special meeting for the ladies and the boys and girls at the city hall. Such subjects as poultry keeping, domestic science, school work, etc., will be discussed by Mrs. Ida E. Tilson. At this meeting L. P. Harrington, principal of the Crookston agricultural school, will give a talk on the state industrial contest.

The industrial contest is a contest in the production of grain, corn, fruit and vegetables and in sewing and cooking by Minnesota boys and girls under 18 years of age. The object of this work is to get the boys and girls interested in the general duties about the farm and home so they will see more in the things being done about them.

When they realize that there is a good and poor way to do things and that real skill and knowledge are required to do them well, they see that these plain tasks are really worthy of and require their very best efforts.

Manure Spreaders

: : On Western Farms : :

It is Only Recently That Use of These Machines Have Become General Here—Some Reasons Why They Must Be Used to Keep Up the Fertility of the Soil

The eastern farmer needs no argument to convince him of the value of a manure spreader, but the western farmer, whose soil is rich, may have some doubts as to the result that may be secured by the use of this important farm machine. Where manure is distributed by hand, it may under certain conditions tend on the rich soil of the west, to do more harm than good for two reasons—first, if the season is wet, the small grain crop will lodge, the yield will be decreased and the quality lowered; second, if the season is dry, the manure will burn out the crop. These conditions are produced because of the fact that it is absolutely impossible for the farmer to spread his manure by hand thinly and evenly enough to secure the best results. The distribution of manure by hand means the spreading of from twenty to fifty loads per acre. With a manure spreader we have an entirely different proposition. As little as three loads of manure can be distributed to the acre, and if this manure is fine, the distribution is so even that every square inch of ground will be covered.

The manure spreader not only has the advantage of so evenly distributing the material, but it will make a given quantity of manure cover from two to four times the territory as when spread by hand, and every acre spread will produce increased crops. In addition to this great item of value, the manure spreader will economize labor more than any other farm tool. It is used a greater portion of the year and it enables the farmer to dispense with the most unpleasant task that he has to perform.

A farmer in Iowa, after he secured his manure spreader determined to experiment. He took a 20-acre piece of land which he expected to plant to corn, and upon ten acres of this piece he spread twenty-five loads of manure per acre by hand and plowed it under in the good old-fashioned way. On the adjoining ten acres he plowed and planted his crop of corn and then topdressed with the manure spreader, putting on six loads to the acre. After harvest he measured his crop on these two pieces. Where he had topdressed with the manure spreader he got a crop of twelve bushels more to the acre than he did where the manure was spread by hand and plowed under. In addition to this he had saved at least one-half the cost of labor in getting on his manure, and made it cover three times the territory.

To carry the experiment out more fully next year he planted all of his 20-acre field to oats. Where he had distributed twenty-five loads of manure to the acre by hand the oats lodged, and he was able to save only about one-half of the crop. Where he had spread six loads of manure to the acre with the spreader he harvested the largest crop of oats that he ever raised on his farm.

COST OF FARM PRODUCTS.

Agricultural Department Gives Results of Investigation.

Bulletin No. 73, entitled "The Cost of Producing Minnesota Farm products," recently issued by the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture, should be of great value to the agricultural interests of Minnesota. It represents a partial result of a co-operative investigation carried on for the past seven years by the Minnesota experiment station and the bureau of statistics, and marks a preliminary step toward a careful and complete study of farm profits and the farm business.

The investigation has been on a large number of private farms in the three leading agricultural areas of the state. The facts brought out are surprising to those who have not followed carefully conducted systems of cost keeping. The average annual cost of maintaining the farm work horse at Northfield was $90.40, at Marshall $87, at Halstad $75.07, while the cost of horse labor per hour varied from 7.3 cents at Halstad to 9 1-4 cents at Northfield. The cost per acre of producing some of our staple field crops in Southeastern Minnesota was as follows:

Corn husked from the standing stalk $11.66; corn cut, shocked and shredded, $15.30; timothy and clover hay, $5.55; oats, $9.85; wheat, $9.86, and potatoes $26.37. The cost of producing these crops in the western part of the state was much lower. It was found that the average milch cow on the farm produced 4,950 pounds of milk containing 186 pounds of butter fat annually and that her cost of maintainance for the same period was $40.97.

Edward C. Parker and Thomas Cooper, assistant agriculturist at Minnesota experiment station, were in charge of the investigations in this state.

GIVE CONVICTS JOB.

Suggestion Made That They Make Drain Tile.

Convict labor to make drain tile for the use of farmers of the state was one of the novel suggestions made at a meeting of the Seventh district bankers, held at Marshall.

The bankers did not resolve in favor of the proposition, but they took it up for discussion. It was generally agreed that drainage tile is one of the things necessary to improve the farms of the state, and those who know believe that even in the older parts of the state, the southern counties, the value of farm lands could be improved 33 per cent by being properly drained. The large marshes are being drained with dredge ditches, but the small sloughs must be tile-drained if the work is to have permanent results.

The principal reason why there is not more tile draining done is that drain tile is expensive. It was suggested that if the convicts at the penitentiary could make the tile they could be sold to the farmers much cheaper than at present.

One argument advanced in favor of this plan was that it does not require skilled labor or expensive machinery to make drain tile. Some skilled labor and considerable expensive machinery are required in the twine factory, and more will be needed to make farm machinery, so that the state is compelled to hire skilled men to do a great part of the work.

The making of drain tile at the state prison would not interfere with any skilled labor in the state.

IMPROVE ITASCA ROAD.

Engineer Cooley and Timothy O'Connor Look for Ground.

G. W. Cooley, engineer of the state highway commission, and Timothy O'Connor of Renville, a member of the commission, returned from Park Rapids and Bagley where they inspected the road which the state is to improve and for which the legislature appropriated $10,000. The road runs twenty-three miles from Park Rapids to the state park at Itasca and thirty-five miles from there to Bagley.

They said that the $10,000 given by the state will be far from what is necessary to build a first-class road. Mr. Cooley thought, however, that with some aid from Clearwater county they could make a fairly good road from Park Rapids to the park, but nothing beyond that. Mr. O'Connor said that $3,000 a mile was not too much to spend on a road.

Mr. Cooley thought that if a good road were built to the park and the roads from here to Park Rapids were good there would be an immense number of people visiting the park each year. At present the road from Park Rapids to the park is hardly passable for automobiles.

TWO PROFESSORS QUIT NORMAL.

The Winona normal school will this season lose two of its professors, both having been called to university work. A short time ago Dr. G. O. Virtue, who has had social science, history and civics, accepted a call in a similar chair in the University of Nebraska, at Lincoln, Neb. Now Dr. John A. Thackston of the mathematics department has accepted a call to a similar position in the University of Florida at Gainesville, Fla.

In Bacon Ridge.

Mrs. Rystop—Now, thar's that Judson Tassel. He's a likely looking chap, but he's been calling on Nancy Squires for nine years and he hasn't proposed yet.

Mrs. Hardapple (sarcastically)—Oh, give the boy a chance, Cynthia. Maybe he's afraid he'll break the speed laws.

One of the prime essentials to a successful business is to eliminate bossiness.

CLASS OF 800 TO GRADUATE.

Commencement Exercises at State University Are Completed.

Plans for commencement week at the state university are complete, and 800 seniors are to receive honors. President Cyrus Northrop will give his annual reception to the senior class on Friday, June 4, at which reception men prominent in state affairs will be in the receiving line.

The baccalaureate sermon is to be delivered by Dr. John E. Bushnell of Westminster Presbyterian church, Minneapolis, in the university armory on Sunday, June 6. "The Scarlet Arrow," the senior class play, will be presented at the Metropolitan theater on the afternoon and evening of Monday, June 7.

Tuesday will be class day, and the campus will be turned over for the entertainment of the graduates, where they will deliver their class day ivy ode and Sigma Chi orations. Wednesday will be alumni day, and those who return to their alma mater are expected to hold reunions and picnic dinners on the campus knoll.

Amos Packer Wilder, United States consul general to Hongkong, China, will address the class at the commencement exercises in the university armory on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, President Northrop immediately thereafter conferring the diplomas upon the graduates.

NEED EXHIBIT ROOM.

Fair Managers Will Construct New Machinery Building.

At a special meeting of the board of the State Agricultural society managers the board decided to build a new machinery building just northwest of the present machinery building. The structure will be constructed with a steel frame and with corrugated steel roof. It will be 100 by 400 feet, and will have posts twenty-six feet high as supports. It will open on all four sides, affording ample room for entrances and exits. The approximate cost is $20,000.

Bids were received for this work from several Twin City firms, but were rejected. New bids will be received this week.

The board authorized Secretary C. N. Cosgrove to proceed with the grading of the road from the Midway terminal to the grandstand, and to build a bridge over the so-called Como drive, which will give a new approach to the grandstand. A bridge will be built over the channel at the west end of the grounds. This section is to be landscaped and channels dug.

READY TO BEGIN SALES.

State Auditor Iverson Will Start at Anoka This Week.

State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson will start his land sales this week and will be engaged about a month, in which time he expects to sell about 300,000 acres. It is nearly all school land, but there are some resales of land on which the purchasers are in default on interest.

The first sales will be made at Anoka and Elk River of some small tracts in Anoka and Sherburne counties. Having received daily for some weeks between 200 and 300 letters relating to this sale, Mr. Iverson thinks that he is justified in predicting that it will prove a most profitable one for the state.

In the lots placed on the market are 60,000 acres in Roseau county, 28,000 in Kittson, 45,000 in Marshall, 38,000 in Red Lake, 32,000 in Crow Wing, 20,000 in Becker, 30,000 in Itasca and 23,000 in St. Louis counties.

NO MAY CONTEST.

Late Season Causes Postponement of Butter Scoring.

A late spring has resulted in calling off the usual May contest of the state buttermakers. These contests are conducted by the state dairy and food department, which begins a series of six monthly scoring contests in May, prizes being given to the winners of high average marks. Andrew French, state dairy and food commissioner, said:

"The spring has been so late this year that the grass has just become fit for pasture, and the creameries have not been able to get the needed supply of cream. The season is more than two weeks late, and for that reason I have decided to have no scoring done in May. The contests will begin in June, and will be carried on for six months as before, running a month later in the fall."

HAWLEY INDORSES BOND ISSUE.

At a special election at Hawley to decide the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $8,000 for the purpose of installing an electric light plant and also bonds to the amount of $8,000 for a waterworks system, the citizens voted for both propositions as follows: Electric light, 107 to 19; waterworks, 84 to 36. This was in the face of strong opposition by a few business men who were afraid a waterworks system would prove a financial loss to the village.

As Defined.

"Father," said the minister's little daughter, "the paper says you 'officiated at the wedding clad in the traditional garb of the clergy.' What does 'traditional' mean?"

"'Traditional,' my dear," answered the good man as he looked at his cheap suit of black with a sigh, "refers to something that has been handed down."

One poor turn deserves another—from the organ grinder's viewpoint.

ADVERTISE FOR IMMIGRATION.

C. R. Frost Gives His View of Making Public Conditions in State.

Minnesota bankers, in their movement to promote immigration and advertise the possibilities of Minnesota's farming lands, have started something of great importance to the state at large, according to Charles R. Frost, secretary of the Minnesota Bankers' association. The movement was inaugurated at the bankers' convention at Marshall last week and given a further "boost" at a later convention at Sleepy Eye.

"Bankers of the state," said Mr. Frost, "have awakened to the fact that it is not enough for them to know that Minnesota lands are better than those from Texas to Canada that are advertised so freely in our state. The farmers who till the land must know it, and the thousands of investors in other states must be made to know it.

"To aid immigration and prevent an exodus to other fields, the bankers aim to create a standing agricultural committee of the state association which will act as a sort of clearing house of information bearing on land values and the adaptability of lands to different crops.

"It was suggested at Sleepy Eye that each group of the association in the nine congressional districts of the state appoint a committee for its particular territory and engage a man to give his whole time to the work of gathering statistics of the agricultural possibilities of his section and give them publicity. It is a big movement and should lead to big results."

ONE LICENSE TAG REQUIRED.

Wise Automobilists Who Know the Law Win Bets Accordingly.

Automobilists all over Minnesota are laboring under a misapprehension as to the new state automobile law, and incidentally the misapprehension is yielding up a small fortune in hats and other bets to the knowing ones.

It has been generally understood that the law requires placing a license tag on the front and the rear of the automobile.

The law specifically says that two duplicate tags will be issued to each automobile owner by the secretary of state upon payment of the registration fee. But it only says that a tag must be placed on the rear of the car. Apparently the idea that one of the tags must be placed on the front of the machine arose from the issuing of two tags.

Certain persons who have read the law carefully have been taking advantage of their fellow autoists by making small bets on the requirements and have in consequence won every bet.

FIND ERRORS OF TWO MILLIONS.

Public Examiner Claims Great Northern Owes State $72,476.

A report showing errors and omissions in the Great Northern's reports of gross earnings amounting to $2,211,959.29 was made to Public Examiner Anton Schaefer by E. W. McGrew, corporation examiner. The back taxes due the state on these gross-earnings are $72,476.76.

Mr. McGrew and three assistants have been working for over seven months checking up the gross receipts for taxation purposes for 1907 and prior years. During this examination the controller of the road reported earnings of $34,637.10, representing switching collected from the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway during 1907, and this amount was certified to by the state auditor. This leaves a balance of omitted earnings of $2,177,322.19 upon which the back taxes at 3 and 4 per cent are now due the state, amounting to $72,476.76, together with interest and penalties accruing up to the time of payment.

IGNORE NEW LAW.

Reports have come to the state tax commission that some local assessors are disregarding instructions under the new grain tax law and are listing only the grain on hand May 1. This is done because of contention that the new law does not take effect this year. It requires levy of the bushel tax on every bushel handled by elevators between March 1 and March 1, but the law did not take effect till April 23.

O. M. Hall of the tax commission holds that the law is effective this year. It may mean double taxation of grain handled last year between March 1 and May 1, but that will not invalidate the law. Neither does he take any stock in the claim that elevator companies have no record of the total amount of grain handled in the last year. Some controversy is likely over this feature of the bill, but the big issue will be over the constitutionality of the system.

DATES FOR M. E. CONFERENCE.

Both to Be Held a Week Earlier Than Usual—McIntyre to Preside.

District Superintendent F. M. Rule of Winona has received definite announcement concerning the holding of the Methodist conferences in this state the coming fall. Both will be a week earlier than usual and both will be presided over by Bishop Robert McIntyre. The Minnesota conference will meet at Austin on Sept. 22 and the Northern Minnesota conference at Duluth Sept. 29.

Related.

One day an earthquake and a case of ague chanced to meet.

"We are related, I believe," said the earthquake.

"We are," replied the case of ague, "although we have never met before."

"Shake!" they both exclaimed simultaneously.

Plague of Wood Pigeons.

Following the example of the Devonshire farmers, an organized effort is being made by Hampshire agriculturists to reduce the vast number of wood pigeons in the county, which during the last few weeks have committed havoc among green crops.

What Government Experts and Other Prominent Writers Say on Agriculture and Allied Topics.

SHEEP PAY BETTER THAN OTHER ANIMALS

The Wool Pays the Expense of Feed and the Lamb Is Clear Profit, and Requires Little Care—By J. H. Hynes.

No farm animal pays the farmer better than a flock of good sheep. The wool pays the expense of feed, the lamb is clear profit, and the foraging work the sheep does in the way of cleaning up pastures, fence rows, etc., saves much labor to the farmer—and adds materially to the appearance of the farm, says J. H. Haynes, in Rural New Yorker. A good portion of the year they are self-supporting, and, barring raids from worthless dogs, they need no watching. A dog-proof fence around the sheep yard and a good rifle are about the only means of defense from these curs. Sheep thrive on such a variety of foods that any farmer, regardless of what kind of soils he may have, can provide for their wants. Clover or cow pea hay, corn silage or fodder, turnip, sugar beets, sorghum hay, clean straw, with feeds of ground corn, oats or bran, and occasional feeds of oil cake will keep a flock in good health and condition. In our sheep experience we find four or five rules that must be closely observed.

Sheds are built on high, dry ground, with protection on northwest and east sides. These sheds are kept free from filth of all kinds, with plenty of room and fresh air, and all the light that can be given. Separate sheds are had for ewes heavy with lamb, and for the young lambs after they are old enough to get around freely. In feeding we never overfeed; make them clean up pretty thoroughly at each meal time. Never allow sheep to become saturated with water from heavy rains. This works greater injury to them than any other exposure. They can stand 20 degrees below zero, or cold, dry weather better than a drizzling, sleety day of 20 degrees above zero. Keep your flock sheltered on such days. If any sick sheep are found they are removed at once to other quarters and given proper care. Never keep a larger flock than your land will justify; better too few than too many, and then see that what you have are kept in A1 condition. No breeder can have success without some painstaking in the observance of the above rules, and the nearer he clings to them the better he will succeed. The most critical time with the flock is along about the lambing time, for it is then that the entire profits of the flock may be lost. We believe fully 40 per cent. of the lambs are lost in this country through neglect, and every lamb lost equals the loss of a five-dollar bill. A few weeks before the season for lambs and ewes should be fed some hay with crushed corn or oats mixed, and in connection with these small rations of root crops will be beneficial. Too much corn, however, should not be fed, as it is weakening when fed too largely. This treatment will insure strong, healthy lambs. The lambs should not be allowed to become stunted in any way. Keep them growing right along. Provide lambs shelters where they can be kept separate from the sheep, is which keep feeds which they will soon learn to take. What is nicer or more profitable than a nice flock of thrifty lambs? Remember, mutton is becoming a luxury—of no small caliber. It will pay to keep flock in inclosure every night where sheep-killing dogs are common. While our laws necessitate taxing of dogs, the revenue derived from it fails to meet the loss sustained by them. One other item: There are many breeds of sheep; each breed has it advocates. All are good, but no matter what the breed, unless you put forth efforts to keep it up to standard—or, better still, improve it—you are not doing what you should.

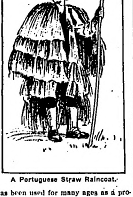
STRAW RAINCOAT FOR SHEPHERD

Garment Envelops Entire Body and Keeps Off Rain.

In some parts of Portugal the shepherds and sometimes men of other vocations wear mantles made of straw. These garments envelop the entire body and keep out the heaviest rain, says Popular Mechanics. Straw has been used for many ages as a protection from rain, the straw-thatched roof being the most familiar example, and it is a well-known fact that a properly constructed stack of wheat sheds water and protects the interior.



A Portuguese Straw Raincoat.

Chicken Statistics.—The cackle of the American hens is swelling into a mighty chorus. According to the last census, there are 233,598,005 chickens of laying age in the United States. These are valued at $70,000,000, and the eggs lay would, if divided, allow 203 eggs annually to every person—man, woman and child—in the United States. The value of all the fowls, $85,000,000, would entitle every person in the country to $1.12 if they were sold and the proceeds divided. All of the animal products exported—the pork, beef, tallow, ham, bacon and sausage—weigh 846,860 tons, while the weight of the eggs laid yearly tips the scales at 937,363 tons.

Money in Raising Squabs.—There is a market for squabs in large cities. They bring from one to three dollars per dozen, according to quality, general supply and demand and local conditions. If one has a good squab plant, the best way to dispose of the product is to secure a private trade with some good hotel or restaurant. The success in disposing of the product will depend upon the class of the stock and how well the customer is pleased. The business methods of the squab grower count for as much as his ability in growing and marketing any farm products. One reason why so many have failed in making a specialty of pigeons is that they forget to master business details. Plenty of people will buy squabs if good ones are raised. However, one cannot expect to make money with only a few pairs of breeding pigeons. Hundreds of them must be kept.

Poultry Destroys Injurious Insects.—Chickens and turkeys devour many caterpillars and other insect forms. They will often save the plum and peach crop from ruin by the curculio if they have free access to the orchard. On the other hand, they are liable to scatter scale insects over an orchard if they are allowed to roost in trees that are infested with scale. Chickens and turkeys may be taught to follow the plow in flocks and will pick up white grubs, cut-worms, etc., in great numbers.

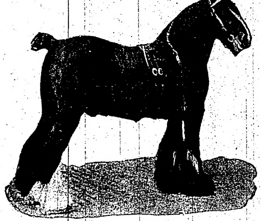
The guinea fowl is a most persistent and voracious insect hunter and if allowed some freedom is a much wider ranger than other domestic fowls. Pigeon crops sometimes contain many of the pupae of the sheep tick which they have picked from the wool of living animals. Ducks and geese also devour considerable numbers of insects.

Flow of Milk Depends on Nerves.—A cow may have all the qualities for a good milker and still be spoiled in milking. More depends upon the way milking is done than most people think. A cow can easily be ruined for life by a few weeks of careless milking.

First of all, the milker should be kind to and in full sympathy with the cow he handles. The flow of milk is determined largely by the nervous condition of the cow. If her nerves are quiet and normal milk will form in the glands and flow under the pressure of the hand of the milker. If the nerves are disturbed and the cow becomes excited or restless the milk glands will refuse to perform their normal function and the cow will refuse to give down her milk.

ENGLAND IS HOME OF BIG DRAFT SHIRE

Uniformity Exists in a Degree That Is Probably Unmatched by Any Other British Breed of Horses.



The Champion Stallion.

This favorite English draft horse has a great standing at home. The English Live Stock Journal sings his praise in its resume of his growing popularity. It says:

From the days of Henry VIII. to the present time the Old English breed of cart horses has been carefully nurtured, so that the back breeding (or pedigree), so essential where uniformity of type is needed, exists in the modern Shire in a degree probably unmatched by any other British breed of horses. In the days of Bakewell the prevailing color seems to have been black, and at the time of Arthur Young's tour through England he mentions the black breed as being quite distinct from the English breed of cart horses, viz., the Suffolk. The weightier breed found a home on the stronger lands of the Midlands, Derbyshire and Notts being early breeding grounds, the former is still first for breeding winners. Since that time the Shire horse has found a home and flourished in every English and Welsh county, and his tractability, ability and willingness to work at anything where power is needed, whether in front of the plow, drill or binder, in the shaft of a drag or a miller's wagon, or between the metals at a busy goods station, place him first as a draft horse.

There was a time in his history when soundness was by no means his strong point, and an eminent veterinary surgeon, writing some fifty years ago, said: "There is scarcely a dray horse but what has some ossification of the cartilages of the foot." That improvement could only come with soundness was recognized by the Shire Horse society at its formation, and at its first show, in 1880, no animal was awarded a prize which could not pass the examination for soundness. The rejected ones in those days were, of course, rather numerous, but the number has gradually dwindled down till perfection, at least so far as sidebone is concerned, is almost reached, seeing that not a single stallion cast for that at the 1904 show. The blacks have been blended with other colors till they no longer predominate, and the prevailing color among London winners now is bay and brown, and the levelness and uniformity existing among the selected animals in most of the classes is very striking.

Lord Rothschild's stud at Tring has a power of resuscitation which must be almost unique. Last year there was a great sale by which the stud seemed to be denuded of all its strongest members, and yet in 1909 it has already achieved its greatest success in the show-ring. On many previous occasions Lord Rothschild has carried away the championship. He has produced at the appropriate moment an Alston Rose, or an equally brilliant mare or stallion; but it was reserved for this year for him to take both championships and sweep the board of all its principal honors. It speaks something for the care, intelligence and knowledge with which animals are purchased for the stud, that all the winners this year, with the exception of one, were Shires that had been bought. It is still more interesting to know that those winning animals came, generally speaking, from tenant farmers. Sometimes doubt is raised in regard to the advisability of encouraging tenants to keep Shire mares; but the events of this year go far to show that the recommendation is sound. The primary use of heavy horses on the farm is to perform hard work connected with the various acts of husbandry, such as plowing, carting, harrowing and the like. To distract the attention from this particular business to the preparation of animals for show purposes cannot in every case be altogether wise. The farmer who is a good judge of horses, and has the instinct for breeding, will probably do best to content himself with the satisfactory price which he can obtain for a "plum;" if he does not know already, he will soon find out that showing is not in itself a profitable game.

PROFIT FOR FARMER IN DANDELION

Cultivated Product Now Rival of Spinach as Delicacy.

Dandelions as a table delicacy are no longer dependent on the nomadic pickers who go out as one of the first signs of spring, armed with a knife and a basket. Most of these boons to the suburbanite do not spend their days in keeping the vacant lots and parks free of the yellow blossoms for their own consumption. They peddle their wares, and the favor with which they have met has led one of the largest market gardeners of the west to devote many acres of his farm to the raising of the plants.

Cultivated dandelions are gaining a strong position in the market, and the variety raised by the grower who supplies most of the demand is said to be known all over the United States.

After the first sowing of the fields the crops are raised from the roots, which remain in the ground. In the fall the farm appears like acres and acres of land hopelessly covered with dandelions. These are covered for the winter for protection from the frost, and as soon as the earliest shoots of the new plants begin to grow from the old roots, about the middle of March, the covering is removed and in April the first crops are ready for harvest.

By care in cutting the plants before they have produced buds or blossoms the cultivated dandelion is said to be much more tender and sweet than the wild variety. It is pronounced fully as satisfactory and palatable as spinach, and is said to be one of the most healthful vegetables in the spring market, occupying a place similar to that of rhubarb.

COLONY HOUSE FOR POULTRY IS MUCH BEST

Far Ahead of Other Buildings for Shelter and Handling the Stock and Convenience—By J. W. Griffin.

The best thing I have seen lately in the colony poultry house line is illustrated in the accompanying pen sketch. All will admit that have used them that the colony house for poultry or hogs is far ahead of the general run of large houses as far as convenience of handling the stock and the general conditions are concerned. To have the best when it costs but a very little more should be our aim, says J. Wesley Griffin in Farmers' Review. From the time the chicks are put with the mother hen until each individual pullet is ready to start out in the world upon the duty of mother hens, this house may be altered to suit each period of her existence without the least expense over first cost.

The building is 8x12 feet square, 7 feet high in front and 5 feet high in the rear, inside measure. This gives 96 square feet floor space in the house. We will start a hen with 20 chicks. It is much better to start a hen with 20 chicks, give them careful attention and raise them all than to start her with 28 or 30, expecting her to lose a part or enough to dwindle down to 20. Ninety-six feet of floor space is plenty of room at first for a hen and 20 chicks, but later on they will utilize it all. The coop sets before one window, the dust box before the other. At the rear of the room is a perch pole one foot from the floor. By the time the chicks are seven or eight weeks old they are roosting on this. Then the coop is taken away, which gives more floor space. As the weather becomes warmer the glass sash are taken out during the day and cloth sash put in their place, the glass being returned at night. Later on the glass may be left out entirely. The cloth sash at the bottom are hung like those at the top, which, when raised, and held in position as shown in cut, gives a shade for each window and allow free circulation in the house of fresh air. When laying time comes, cracker and canned good boxes from the grocer's are set around the wall for nests.

This house is easy to build, easy to keep clean and free from mites and easy to move from place to place, it being built upon runners. The bill of material for the house is as follows:

Two pieces 2x6-inch sills, 12 feet long.

Two pieces 2x6-inch runners, 14 feet long.

Seven pieces 2x6-inch joists, 8 feet long.

Seven pieces 2x4-inch rafters, 10 feet long.

Two pieces 2x4-inch plaits, 14 feet long.

Siding, 300 feet.

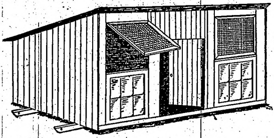
Common flooring for sheeting, 140 feet.

Good flooring for floor, 96 feet.
Two sash for glass, 3x3 feet.
Four sash for cloth, 3x3.
Four pair small hinges for sash.
One pair hinges for door.
Twenty-five pounds assorted nails.
One and one-half squares roofing.

The cost of the material at present prices will be in the neighborhood of $30. The carpenter's work will cost about $10, making a total cost for the house about $40. It may be cheaper in some cases, especially if the farmer can do his own building.

In buying material for several houses, say ten or twelve, the cost of the individual house is reduced about ten per cent.

In a field of twenty-five or thirty acres that is in meadow or pasture, with plenty of nice shade trees, ten or twelve of these houses scattered over it look very pretty. But still prettier are the little chicks when about grown, each flock at feeding time picking amound its home. And yet prettier, the swell in the bank account at selling time.



A Colony House.

INDIAN CORN IS GREATEST CROP

Total Value Exceeds That of Cotton, Hay and Wheat.

Greatest of all crops is Indian corn, the priceless gift of the Indian, who freely gave to the white man information which led to the production of 2,643,000,000 bushels this year. The crops of three years have exceeded this, but only the crop of one year—1906—exceeded it very much.

The value of this crop almost surpasses belief. It is $1,615,000,000. This wealth that has grown out of the soil in four months of rain and sunshine, and some drought, too, is enough to cancel the interest-bearing debt of the United States and to pay for the Panama canal and 50 battleships.

The price of corn is exceptionally high. There are only two years in the record of this department in which the farm price of this crop was as high as it is for this year. In 1881 the price was 63.6 cents; in 1901, when there was only two-thirds of an ordinary crop, the price was 60.5 cents.

The total value of this crop is by far the highest ever reached. The crop of 1902 was worth $1,000,000,000, and the crops of 1904, 1905 and 1906 were worth $100,000,000 more; the great increase of $300,000,000 over the crop of 1902 was made in 1907, and now the increase is $600,000, equal to the gold in the treasury of a rich nation.

The corn crop far exceeds in value the prominent farm crops next below. It is worth nearly as much this year as the great crops of cotton, hay and wheat combined.

In comparison with the averages of the preceding five years, the quantity of the corn crop of this year is 2.1 per cent. higher and the value 42.6 per cent. higher.

The Culture of Asparagus.—One of the best and easiest grown of our garden perennials is the asparagus plant. It can be started either from seed or from plants. If one wishes to raise plants to sell it is better, of course, to plant the seeds, but if asparagus is wanted for home or market use, in the shortest time possible, it is better to set out yearling seedlings. It is important in laying out the asparagus plantation to select a place where it can remain permanently, for if taken proper care of the plantation will last 20 years. The land selected should be deep, rich, fertile, moist and cool soil, having a warm exposure, a gradual southern slope being preferred.

Care of Garden Acquired.—There are certain general laws and principles underlying all garden work. It is necessary for the gardener to master these in order to become successful and always meet the unexpected. It is not enough to know simply what plant foods are good for corn, but what plant foods all crops require. It is well to know how to kill cabbage caterpillars, but it is better to know how to kill all biting insect pests.

But when one has learned the general principles of growing plants, it is then essential to acquire special knowledge of special crops. There are a dozen, and sometimes a hundred, small special facts, peculiar to each garden plant. A knowledge of these special facts makes possible success in growing special crops. Some of these may be acquired by reading or listening to what others say, yet they can never be fully mastered till one has had several years of actual experience. They must be absorbed at first hand to be fully appreciated.

Skim Milk for Pigs.—The usefulness of fresh, warm skim milk from the farm separator is by no means confined to the raising of young calves. Young pigs, if anything, thrive and grow even better on it than young calves do.

A series of experiments conducted at the Storrs agricultural experiment station in Connecticut shows conclusively that the skim milk produced better results than rich milk or even poor whole milk. One lot of pigs were fed all of the skim milk they would drink. The second lot was fed on ordinary whole milk, and the third lot was fed on rich milk. At the end of 40 days the pigs receiving the skim milk made an average gain of 31 pounds. The pigs receiving the ordinary milk made an average of 27.4 pounds and the lot receiving the rich milk made an average gain of 21.1 pounds. As the trial progressed this rate of gain was maintained.

Chickens Feed Themselves.—The profit in the farm flock of chickens comes largely from the fact that the birds make their living on scattering grains and feeds that could not be utilized by any other domestic animals. The larger the farm the more crops are grown, and the greater number of stables and feed lots the more waste feeds the chickens can pick up. Under certain conditions and at certain times, however, there is very little feed for the birds to glean. At such times, then poultry must be fed as other animals are if they are expected to thrive and produce. This point is often overlooked with the farm flock, and the farmer begins to complain that there is no money in poultry.

Perfectly Equipped.

When the large and healthy looking individual who had asked at the door for "a little something to eat" was told that he might if he would work a while at the woodpile, he shook his head mournfully.

"I've got the ague," he explained, "and my hand is that unstidy I couldn't hit more'n one stick in seven."

"All right," exclaimed the mistress of the house. "Go out in the back yard and shake those ashes for me."

A Sharp Retort.

"My dear," said a thin little Brighton man to his wife, "this paper says that there is a woman down in Devonshire who goes out and chops wood with her husband."

"Well, what of it? I think she could easily do it if he is as thin as you are. I have often thought of using you to peel potatoes with."

The thin man laid down his paper with a sigh that sounded like the squeak of a penny whistle.

NO TIPS IN FINLAND.

Maid's Surprise Upon Receiving Money From Her Mistress' Guests.

A country where there are no tips and where small services are rendered to the stranger without hope of reward would seem hard to find—yet such a country is Finland.

So far the tourist has not appeared in any great numbers, and consequently the commercial spirit which his advent always marks has been absent. As an example of this Mme. Malmberg, a Finnish lady who is paying a visit to this country, tells an amusing story. Two English friends whom she had met while over here had been staying with her at her house in Helsingfors, and on leaving gave the maid a tip.

She was very much astonished and did not know what it meant. Seeing Mme. Malmberg's son coming downstairs, she ran to him and said, "They gave me money. Did they give you any?" Hearing that they had not done so, she was much mystified. "I cannot understand why they should give it to me and not to you, when they know you much better than me," was her perplexed comment on the incident.

The Natural Inference.

A lady who had arranged an authors' at her house succeeded in persuading her reluctant husband to stay home that evening to assist in receiving the guests. He stood the entertainment as long as he could—three authors, to be exact—and then made an excuse that he was going to open the front door to let in some fresh air. In the hall he found one of the servants asleep on a settee.

"Wake up!" he commanded, shaking the fellow roughly. "What does this mean, your being asleep out here? You must have been listening at the keyhole."

Reciprocity.

Mistress—What did you tell those ladies who just called?

Servant—Oi told 'em you was out, mum.

Mistress—And what did they say?

Servant—How fortunit, mum.

THE WITCHES' TREE.

Curious Superstitious Regarding the Influence of the Elder.

County people speak of the elder tree as "The Witches' Tree," and planted it near farm buildings and dairies to keep off witches. They also say that the roots should never come near a well, still less grow into it, or the water will be spoiled. Evelyn's opinion was also unfavorable. He says: "I do by no means commend the scent of it, which is very noxious to the air.

"We learn from Blesius that a certain house in Spain, seated among many elder trees, diseased and killed nearly all its inhabitants, which, when at last they were grubbed up, became a very healthy and wholesome place."

Cattle scarcely touch the elder, and the mole is driven away by the scent. Carters often place branches on their horses 'heads to keep off flies. Nothing will grow well in the company of the elder, and when it has been removed and all its roots carefully grubbed up it is some few years before the ground becomes perfectly sweet and good for anything.

The berries, besides feeding the birds, make excellent country wine, delicious with soda water in summer or taken hot in winter; the wood is particularly good for skewers and the curious jews' red fungus grows on elder stumps. A species of elder in the Tyrol is covered with beautiful scarlet berries.

THINK HARD
It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of a lady in Fond Du Lac, Wis.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down once or twice to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose, and many other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use. "There's a Reason."

"I like the delicious flavour of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee."

The election of Boss Lorimore as United States senator in Illinos doesn't argue for the dawn of political purity. And the worst feature is the fact that the corrupt elements of both the republican and democratic parties joined hands to perpetrate this outrage on the people of Illinois.

T. B. Walker, the millionaire Minneapolis lumberman, proposes to contest for Moses Clapp's seat in the United States. Since the days of D. M. Sabin Minnesota has had no use for repersentatives of the interests in the senate and we don't believe she has now, says the Hutchinson Leader. Give your ducats to the poor, Mr. Walker, and make your campaign in a suit of store clothes. The people may then size you up as fit to represent them.

During the 1908 campaign, says the Redwood Reveille, we were told that the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law was a failure. Yet 51 national banks in the state have surrendered their charters in order to participate in its benefit. And Kansas and Nebraska, who have been watching their sister state closely, have just enacted laws almost identical with the Oklahoma statute. Moral: Don't believe anything you hear in a presidental campaign.

Jim Hamlin, editor of the Bricelyn Sentinel, gets off the following, and you don't have to believe it unless you want to: "A grade teacher at Winnebago, after having a medical examination in her room recently, wrote the following note to the parents of a certain little boy: 'Your boy Charles shows signs of astigmatism. Will you please investigate and take steps to corrrect it? To which she received a note in reply saying: 'I don't understand exactly what Charles has been doing, but I have whipped him good and hard tonight, and you can whallop him tomorrow, and that ought to help some. I think both of us can lick it out of him.'"

An Atchison girl had a proposal of marriage one recent Sunday night, and asked a week to think it over, says the Atchison Globe. She went to all of her married sisters. One, who used to be a belle, had three children, did all her own work, and hadn't been to the theatre or out riding since she was married. Another, whose husband was a promising young man the time she was married, was supporting him. A third didn't dare say her life was her own when her husband was around, and a fourth was divorced. After visiting them and hearing their woes the heroine of this little tale went home, got pen, ink and wrote an answer to the young man. You may think it was refusing him, but it wasn't. She said she could be ready in a month.

THE TONNAGE TAX AGAIN.

The Norwood Times, which has not always been friendly to Governor Johnson, concludes that the tonnage tax veto was proper. The editor of that paper has been studying the question and arrives at these conclusions:

"Tonnage tax and the governor's veto are occupying considerable space in the editorial columns of the country press, perhaps more for critisism of the veto for politics' sake or sectional and selfish motves of the tax, rather than a desire to look for justice between man and man. The Times has given the subject some thought and to be candid we must admit that there is not the ground for a square deal argument in favor of a tonnage tax that we supposed there was on first giving the matter consideration. When one studies the question he must acknowledge there are many good reasons, other than those that might be brought about by any political or the so-called mercenary motive for not endorsing a tonnage tax bill in any form. If the owner of a farm in a mineral distrct has the same kind of title to his land that a Carver county farmer has to his farm, we cannot see how we can advocate the state's right to interfere in one unless we concede to the state the same right in the other. In other words, if the legislature has a right to tax iron ore being removed it must have been the same right to tax gravel, clay, peat and dirt, not to say anythng about gas, oil, carbide, lime, cement, brick clay and a hundred other things which are in substance or otherwise under he taxable acreage in different parts of this and every state. Tax the acres for their salable value, or fifty per cent of its real value, then all machinery and all other personal property as other articles are taxed and we ought to get even with Duluth."

PASSING OF PARTY ORGAN.

The consolidation of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press and their renunciation as Republican newspapers have caused considerable comment from the newspapers of the state. Perhaps the best exposition of the position of the independent newspaper comes from the gifted pen of John C. Appelegate, editor of the Cannon Falls Beacon. The article is worth reading:

"It is slowly but surely, we think, becoming recognized that the thick and thin party newspaper has outgrown its usefullness in this free spoken country. In fact, the party organ overplayed its part years ago and now lags superfluous. The progressive press of the country has advanced to the position of publishing what the people who do the voting think, in lieu of printing what the corporation controlled bosses want them to think, as they have been accustomed to falsely represent them as thinking.

"The straight-laced party organ has ever been an unmixed evil, and is in a large sense responsible for the control of the party machinery by men representing greedy interests. Such men as Cannon, Payne, Aldrich and Hale have been influenced in their legislative programmes by the knowledge of the fact that however much the protest against certain proposed measures they will fall in line after the fuss is over, and shout for the party as loudly and insistently as ever. They know that the party organ will be particeps criminis after the fact, even if it does protest before the fact.

"In this manner, and to this extent the party paper has been responsible for the growing evils that beset us. By an ingenious system of excusings and whitewashings, and often by palpable lyings, the party press has misled the voters into perpetuating treason and dishonesty in places of public trust.

"And why Because forsooth, they wish to be recognized as "regular," as a part of the party machinery, and smiled upon by the bosses. Aside from this there is but one inducement—sharing in the party pork barrel.

"The injections of the Roosevelt standard into party thought has had much to do with the loosening up of the party bonds and the restoring of the heretofore hidebound party press to independence and self respect; but the sense of shame incident to defending the legislation of such statesmen as have for the past score of years controlled congress has had more to do with it.

"Between it the press with an honest but irrepressible hankering to be "regular" and those employed by the corporations, the people, and such men as would honestly represent them, have had a sorry time of getting a hearing. It is to be hoped that the itch for independence may spread until the newspaper fraternity is emancipated from such humiliating thraldom."

SCISSORETTES

An Oklahoma exchange is authority for the statement that fly paper is the most widely circulated paper in Oklahoma now.

Evidently a subscriber of the Lansing, (Kan.) News has not much of an opinion of the think-works of the editor of that paper, for he wrote him recently: "If your brains were dynamite and they should explode, they wouldn't muss your hair."

Editor Allison makes this explanation for an angry subscriber to the Snyder (Okla.) Signal Star: "John Anderson accuses the Signal of having misrepresented him. He must be mistaken as a close search of the files of this paper fails to show a single instance in which Anderson was referred to as a gentleman."

An author engaged a young lady typewriter to take down his new novel from dictation. At the passage: "Oh! my adorable angel, accept the confession from my lips that cannot exist without you! Make me happy! Come and share my lot and be mine until death do us part!"—and his fair secretary paused and ingeniously inquired: "Is that to go down with the rest?"

Last week's issue of the Silver State, published at Deer Lodge, contained an announcement that a "shirtwaist social" would be given in that city on a certain date, and that "all ladies attending without wearing shirtwaists would be fined." Good! Any lady who would attend without having common decency enough to wear a mere shirtwaist should not only be fined, but be thrown out also.—Dilling (Mont.) Tribune.

The space in the paper, says the Plattsmouth (Neb.) Herald, is like a tract of land that is for sale, it needs cultivation. When a business man buys a space in a newspaper and presents his copy for his ad, and then leaves the same ad. stand for weeks and weeks he does not derive much benefit after the second issue of the paper. He is like the man who buys a tract of land and plants it to a crop, and does no more. The ad. must be a new display, new ideas, new inducements offered. This being true, patronage will come.

Cough Caution
Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

How He Found Sleep.

By SALLIE MENDEEM.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

The way I got out of the burglar line was this: I had mighty good nerve and wasn't afraid of any one. I seemed to know what kind of a crib to crack and how to do it without waking anybody up and getting away between midnight and dawn, when the cops are most drowsy. While I was doing a job I thought of nothing except my work and was both cool and watchful. I wasn't one of those blokes who scare people to death or who are ready if necessary to add murder to robbery. The truth is I never liked the prospect of facing either charge.

As I was saying, while engaged at my work, however dangerous, I was steady as a monument, but when danger had passed and I had nothing to do but think I went downhill very fast. What bothered me most was that I couldn't sleep nights—that is, when comfortably stowed away in bed. I once took a nap in a gentleman's parlor and was only wakened by the sun coming up and shining in my eyes. I just got out in time to save myself. But when lying on a soft mattress, with warm covers and no chance of being disturbed, sleep wouldn't come to me. I lay awake thinking of the time when I would hear prison doors clang behind me. The thought was dreadful. I'm afraid I was too fine grained for the business.

Month after month my hours of sleep grew less till I feared insanity. One night I woke up at midnight after having slept two hours and knew there would be no more slumber for me till the next time I went to bed. I was so desperate that I got up with the intention of going into some house where I had no right and there snatch another couple of hours' sleep. I had a crib in view, a small house with not much in it. But I was looking for sleep, not plunder. I went there, took out a pane of glass, entered and went upstairs to find a place to settle down. I stood in a dark hall looking into a room where a night lamp was burning. In the room a woman was in bed with a child, both asleep. The child was sleeping on the front of the bed, very near the edge. He was a boy and, I think, about five years old.

On a narrow lower bed, close beside the other, slept another child, a girl of about three. She was sleeping in the center of her bed on her side and had her chubby fist up against her fat cheek. It was hot summer weather, and none of them except the woman had any covers whatever.

What interested me was that the boy's head was hanging over the side of his bed and so much of his body, too, that it looked to me as if he was about to fall. He was restless, and I knew he would be over very soon. Somehow I wanted to see him fall, though I kept in the dark so that he wouldn't see me if he woke up. The next kick he made sent him over. He fell a couple of feet, but didn't wake up. He landed partly on the little girl, but she didn't wake up either. I expected she would, as she moaned once or twice in her sleep and turned over, but finally she slept as peacefully as before.

It was such a delightful picture to one suffering from insomnia that I kept on watching the children. The boy continued his kicking and crowded the girl, pushing her with every move to the front edge of her bed. It must have been half an hour that he kept this up, when there was a thump, and the girl lay on the floor. But she seemed to be as comfortable there as on her bed. At any rate, she showed not the least sign of waking.

Meanwhile I heard the muttering of distant thunder, and while I was looking at them all there came one terrific crash loud enough to wake the dead. The mother turned over, but neither of the children moved. Then followed one crash after another, and I expected that at least the mother would wake up and take a look at her children. But she slept on. She must have been very tired or had lost a lot of sleep or she couldn't have slept through those terrible bolts. Never had I heard such thunder before.

The only effect the storm had on any of them was to increase the restlessness of the boy. He rolled and tumbled in his sleep like a ship tossed by the waves, sometimes lying for a few minutes close against his mother's bed, then rolling over to the outer edge of his own. I was sure he'd in time tumble out of this bed, as he had out of the other, and I was bound to see him do it. Sure enough, before I expected it he gave a lurch and landed plumb on top of his sister.

Neither of them awoke.

I reckon women know in their sleep what's going on with their children, for, now that the storm was over and everything was still as the tomb, the mother sat up in bed, glanced at her children, got up and put them in their proper places. Then she went back to bed herself and was asleep in a moment.

"Well," I said to myself, "if that's what a clear conscience will furnish I'm going to have a clear conscience." I went back to my room resolved never to enter any man's house again but my own, at least not for plunder. I went to bed and slept like a top for twenty-four hours.

I kept my resolution, found honorable employment and prospered. But I didn't forget the family that converted me. The mother was a widow, and, having a hard time to get on, I made her acquaintance and married her.

But none of my family know that I had been a burglar or how I came to know them.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA
Malaria is due to impurities and poisons in the blood. Instead of being rich, strong and healthy, the circulation has become infected with germs of disease which destroy the rich, red corpuscles that furnish nourishment and strength to the body, and reduced this vital fluid to such a weak, watery condition that it is no longer able to keep the system in health, or ward off the countless diseases and disorders that assail it. The loss of these red corpuscles takes the color and glow of health from the cheek, and we see pale, sallow faces and washed out, chalky complexions among the first symptoms of Malaria. But Malaria is a general systemic disease, and as the blood becomes more heavily loaded with its germs we have more serious and complicated symptoms; the impure blood having its effect on all parts of the body. The appetite fails, digestion is weakened, chills and slight fever are frequent, and the sufferer loses energy and ambition because of a constant tired-out and "no account" feeling. The lack of necessary nourishment and healthful qualities in the blood causes boils and abscesses, skin affections, and in some cases sores and ulcers to break out, and sometimes the patient is prostrated with a spell of malarial fever which may leave his health permanently impaired. To cure Malaria both a blood purifier and tonic are necessary, in order to remove the cause and at the same time build up the system from its weakened and run-down condition. S. S. S. is the medicine best fitted for this work. It is the most perfect of all blood purifiers, and the purely vegetable ingredients of which it is composed make it the greatest and safest of all tonics. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and removes every trace of impurity or poison, and at the same time gives to the blood the health-sustaining qualities it needs. It cures Malaria thoroughly and permanently because it removes the germs and poisons which produce the disease, and while doing this tones up and strengthens every part of the system. When S. S. S. has cleansed the blood the symptoms pass away, the healthy color returns to the complexion, the old tired, depressed feeling is gone, and the entire health is renewed. Book with information about Malaria and any medical advice free.
THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi river and became so impregnated with Malaria that for a year I was almost a physical wreck. I tried a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures, and Malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S. S. S. The result was that after taking it for awhile I was as well and strong as I ever was. I have never had a chill since nor the slightest symptom of Malaria. I hope others will be benefited by my experience, and with that end in view I give this testimonial, knowing that S. S. S. is the best remedy for Malaria.

TERREBONNE

Midas Clement, sick for a few weeks, has fully recovered.

The farmers have finished their seeding and the prospects of a fine crop bid fair.

On the 23 inst. a girl, Marie Eva, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Champoux.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lachance from Louisville were last Sunday the guests of their friends.

The celebration of the St. Jean—Baptiste, June 14, will take place this year at Terrebonne. The preparations promise quite an event.

Last Friday, Louis Parenteau, Arthur Archambault, and Rev. Fr. Veilleux went to Thief River Falls to be present at the school meeting.

Dr. Morley of Crookston with his $4500 automobile drove to Terrebonne last week, accompanied by Rev. A. Topin, L. M. Boriseau of Argyle, Rev. C. Morsunet and Dr. Spence.

My handsome residence property in Red Lake Falls together with 12 lots, is offered in exchange for highly improved farm in the neighborhood of Brooks, or Terrebonne, Minnesota. Address, L. C. Simons, St. Paul. 37

THIEF RIVER FALLS

From the News and Press.

Emil Sedlacek last week finished a well for the Kratka creamery. At a depth of 208 feet a flowing well was discovered. The well flows about 150 barrels every twenty-four hours and is considered to be great value to the Kratka creamery. This is the first flowing well so far as is known in the Eleven Towns.

It is quite likely that the city council will buy lots and let the contract of the new armory at once. While in St. Paul last week City Attorney Halvorson called upon Attorney General Simpson and had that gentleman approve of all proceedings in the bond issue and now the city is sure to get the loan of $20,000, although the state will not have the money to loan much before the 1st of January. The intention now is to issue certificates of indebtedness and erect the building and later pay off the certicates when the money for the bonds is received from the state.

Pain anywhere stopped in 20 minutes sure with one of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. The formula is on the 25 cent box. Ask your doctor or druggist about this formula! Stops womanly pains, headache, pains everywhere. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., for free trial to prove value. All dealers.

If sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a stomach nerve, or it may have strength and support to the heart or kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this truth. Dr. Shoop's restorative was not made to dose the stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the heart or kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test, will surely tell. Try it once, and see. Sold by all dealers.

GETS ENORMOUS FEES FOR FEW HOURS' WORK

More Money Than Lifetime Earnings of Competent Man Reward of Noted Attorneys in Single Cases.

More money than an ordinarily paid man could make in a whole lifetime of persistent effort in coming to be the portion of successful lawyers and doctors for single cases.

The reward of the specialist is constantly growing, and the number of ciphers on the end of checks in payment of services rendered continues to extend.

Only lately George B. Wickersham, now attorney general of the United States, represented the Chicago Traction company in the vitally important suits against the city of Chicago.

In return for the work he did in that case, Mr. Wickersham received the enormous sum of $200,000, one-fifth of a million, which only a couple of decades ago was regarded as the high water mark of a plutocrat's belongings.

Bu tthere have been bigger fees than the one to the credit of Mr. Wickersham.

In fact, in one instance the million mark was reached by James B. Dill, now a judge of the court of errors and appeals in New Jersey, had the important assignment of patching up the differences between Andrew Carnegie and Henry C. Frick, when the quarrel between them threatened to disrupt the entire steel industry.

Mr. Dill had no easy case. It took virtually his entire time for one year. He had to delve deeply into records, and the reconciliation was conceded to represent the work of virtual genius.

James B. Dill.

Gets $1,000,000 Fee.

The price paid was in proportion. Mr. Dill got $1,000,000, conceded to be the highest fee paid to a lawyer in the history of American jurisprudence.

The nearest approach is said to have been the $800,000, which went to William D. Guthrie for breaking the will of Henry B. Plant.

But the two cases handled by Dill and Guthrie were complicated, and called for long and careful work. If the amount of labor put upon them be compared with what Elihu Root did in the settlement of the legal questions following the death of Russell Sage, it will probably be found that for the amount of services rendered Mr. Root was far better paid than either of his brother counsellers.

Naturally the settlement of an estate as big as that of Mr. Sage wanted to do justice to all who had claims, but she was equally anxious to avoid long delays and vexations.

Therefore she summoned her adviser, and ordered him to retain Mr. Root.

The noted New Yorker was at that time secretary of war. He explained to Mrs. Sage's adviser that he was too much engrossed in the duties of state to have time for private practice, and that he would have to decline the case. But the advisor was persistent, and told that he had orders to get Mr. Root. In the expectation that by charging what he thought an exorbitant fee he would get rid of the case, Mr. Root set $250,000 as the only possible price at which he could take the case. To his astonishment, Mrs. Sage accepted by wire next day.

Root Gets $250,000 for Two Days.

The secretary then went into the case. It took him just forty-eight hours to do the business, he was required to hire no additional aid, and he never had to go into court at all. But he cleaned up the whole matter, swiftly and satisfactorily. The money was paid, and there was an end of the whole matter.

Working at the rate of $125,000 per day certainly gives Mr. Root a claim on all the championships for big fees. It is known that William Nelson Cromwell got at least $200,000 for selling the Panama canal to the United States, and it is said by some persons that his reward was four or five times that amount, but there is no way to prove it. Cromwell took his life in his hands to earn this sum, for he was taken ill while the negotiations were on, and in a most critical period was confined with a temperature of 103.

Learning that the deal might fall through unless he got on the job, Mr. Cromwell rose, went to the office of Secretary Hay, stayed with him an hour, completed the business, and went home, barely suceeding in winning out a six weeks' battle with typhoid.

But for $200,000, let alone how much more it may have been, most persons will be inclined to think that the risk was worth while.

But this wasn't the only big fee to the credit of Mr. Cromwell. For reorganizing the firm of Decker, Howell & Co. Cromwell was paid $260,000.

The attorneys who forced the government after a lon gdispute to pay the long deferred claims of the Cherokee Indians, fifteen milions in all, were allowed 15 per cent of the total, nearly $750,000. It is said that the greater part of this went to one firm.

Piles Earns $450,000 in One Case.

A court decision recently granted at Seattle, Wash., opened the way for another huge fee. Senator S. H. Piles, by winning for his clients the famous John Sullivan will case, gained a fee of $450,000, for in advance the heirs gave him deeds of conveyance for one half of the total, provided they should win.

It has never been contradicted that for his share in the Thaw case, Michael Delphine Delmas received $100,000, which seems fairly expensive when it was decided to omit him altogether from the second case, on the score that more could be accomplished without him.

The fees in one will case in Wisconsin were of a kind to make old Midas get jealous. It was the Schandein will case only lately brought to a finish. In that Frisbee and Redfield, attorneys for Mrs. S Heyl, got $107,000. Quarles, Spencer and Quarles valued their services in behalf of the proponents at $150,000, and in addition to these there were several other bills ranging downwards from $50,000 to a modest little fee of $5,000.

When Joseph H. Choate, afterwards to be United States ambassador to Great Britain, delivered his argument before the supreme court of the United States against the constitutionality of the income tax, he dealt with a subject which he knew well, and which being purely one of interpretation of the Constitution required no great amount of preparation. But this one piece of work netted him the sum of $200,000, and from the standpoint of his clients was money well spent since it resulted in the declaring of the law unconstitutional.

Johnson Is an Exception.

John G. Johnson of Philadelphia, conceded to be one of the country's greatest corporation lawyers, is an exception in the matter of fees. He will never accept more than a case is worth, and though he has several times been paid $10,000 and $100,000 for his work, he has also in one instance at least been known to return a $25,000 check for a piece of work done for a railroad, with the statement that $5,000 was ample payment.

It is not alone the law that offers opportunities for making tremendous sums quickly. Medicine is a profession quite as rich in possibilities. A Philadelphia physician, the late Dr. William Pepper, it is understood, charged Robert Simpson $1,500 for an examination lasting about a minute, and Dr. S. Wier Mitchell is said to have been given a fee of $15,000 by one patient.

When America learned that Dr. Adolph Lorenz of Vienna received $30,000 for setting the hip of little Lolita Armour of Chicago and later pay for further attention swelling his total fees to $78,000, there was amazement, and yet this would not create surprise in Europe, especially in court circles.

When the present King Edward of England, then prince of Wales, was seriously ill years ago, Dr. William Jenner pulled him through, and for his four weeks' attention was paid $50,000. The physician who attended the father of Emperor William of Germany in his last illness—Dr. S. Morrell Mackenzie—presented a bill for $100,000, which was paid without a murmur.

Doctors Pull Down Big Ones.

Prof. Zacherine of Moscow got $75,000 for two days' attendance on the father of the present czar.

Dr. Thomas Dimsdale for vaccinating the Empress Catherine I. at St. Petersburg got $50,000, and a pension of $2,500 for life.

A bill for $190,000 was sent by Dr. Walter C. Browning of Philadelphia to the estate of Senator C. L. Magee at Pittsburg. It was brought out in evidence that Senator Magee had once declared his intention of giving Dr. Browning a fee of $1,000,000, and had added: "I intend to beat Peter Widener's record. Widener, you know, paid his doctor $800,000."

A review of high voluntary fees seems to show that a father whose child has been saved by a physician is especially liberal. Gratitude of the Chicago father to the Vienna "bloodless" surgeon was eclipsed by that of Mr. Flagler of New York, who gave Dr. Shelton securities worth $87,000 for curing his daughter. The late shah of Persia paid Dr. Galezowski of Paris $25,000 for curing his son of an affliction of the eye.

After the death of Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, his physician, Dr. Frank Billings, filed in the probate court a claim for $25,000, a bill for seven days 'service.

For 100 days 'attendance upon the late William L. Rainey, a millionaire cork manufacturer in Philadelphia, Dr. Samuel T. Barnes made out a bill amounting to $33,000. This charge of $330 a day cannot be noted as among the modest claims of practitioners.

That payment of large fees may be exacted even when cures are not affected was shown by the recent decision of a French court in the case of George Crocker of California against Dr. Doyen. Mr. Crocker sought to recover a $20,000 fee which he paid in 1904 for having his wife treated for cancer—treatment which he asserted was unsuccessful. The court held that the Paris physician had done his best to fulfill the contract, and that he was entitled to the $20,000 fee.

Missouri Bee Bluff.

Bee Bluff, on Sugar creek, in the Ozark mountains, two miles from Powell, Mo., has almost as good a name as it deserves. This sheer wall of porous limestone, more than 100 feet in height, was until a few years ago the home of many swarms of wild bees.

When the country near the creek became somewhat settled up and some of the newcomers began to experiment with bee culture the wild bees from the bluff so disturbed the peace of the tame hives that they ruined the business. So the settlers revenged themselves by making a raid on the cliff dwellers' homes. With "Indian ladders"—tree trunks with cross pieces nailed on them for steps—they climbed to the rocky citadels of the wild bees and smoked the inhabitants out with sulphur fumes.

King Edward's Walking Sticks.

The king had made a hobby of collecting walking sticks, and now has more than two thousand. He prizes most the stick always used by Queen Victoria, made from a branch of the Boscobel oak, amid the greenery of which King Charles II. after the battle of Worcester hid himself while escaping from the Cromwellian soldiers.

Queen Victoria had the Stuart knob removed from the stick and a little idol, looted from Seringapatam, put in its place. Besides walking sticks the king collects model ships, match boxes and caricatures. Of Sir Frank Lockwood's caricatures his majesty has quite a good collection hung up in his den at Sandringham.

THE LURE OF TROUSERS EVER POTENT TO ACTRESS

Playing Male Roles the Ambition of Nearly Every Queen of the Dramatic Art.

To the actress the lure of the trousers is ever patent. Hardly has the stage any leading actress, but who has either played or aspires to play masculine roles.

The number constntly increases. In the old days women after succeeding in delineating roles of their own sex attempted the classical parts usually assigned to men.

Thus there are records of many successful "Hamlets" and "Iagos' 'to the credit of women. But in such performances the essential skill to read the sublime lines of the greatest of poets would have gained toleration, even if the spark of dramatic genius burned very low.

But to play the male roles in modern dramas seems in some respects a still more remarkable ambition, for the modern public, grown indifferent to the serious aims of dramatic art, insists on being entertained, and it takes a pretty clever woman to shift from her own natural garb to that of the other sex and still make good.

The greatest of all actresses, the mighty Bernhardt, has often crossed the line, and as in the case of everything she does, has been eminently successful.

Not less than half a dozen male roles have gone to the credit of the French genius. She was seen in this country in three, being a superb "Hamlet," a pathetic "Duke de Reichstadt" and a clever hero in "Le Passant."

Bernhardt Goes Into Training.

It is related of Bernhardt that when she was training for her appearance in Rostand's "L'Aiglon" that she wore nothing but men's clothes for many months so as to get herself thoroughly habituated to them, and those who saw the graceful ease with which she wore the coat, trousers and boots of the unfortunate son of the great Napoleon can readily believe the story.

In Paris Bernhardt has enacted the title role in de Masset's "Lorenzaccio." But this by no means exhausts her ambition. She is anxious to play the role of "Romeo" just as soon as a great actress can be obtained to play "Juliet" in French.

For a long time Bernhardt has been anxious to try her talents in the role of "Mephistopheles," and only the difficulty of getting the kind of arrangement of the play she wanted has deferred this curious experiment.

A whole row of "Rosalinds" and "Violas" may explain how, to some extent, women get the ambition to wear the masculine clothing.

These roles were naturally in the repertoire of every serious actress of a generation ago, and they survive today among the favorites of actresses who still retain a preference for the classics.

They are not strictly speaking masculine roles, for the principal figure is a woman masquerading as a man, and the audience knows at all times that it is not out of the secret of the real sex of the performer.

But an experience in these parts nearly always has the effect of inspiring the brilliant and intellectual actress to further efforts in the same line.

Julia MarloweGets Craze.

It was so with Julia Marlowe. She succeeded as "Viola" and "Rosalind," and immediately began directing her energies to finding a suitable role in which she could play a man's part all through.

Just about this time came "L'Aiglon." Marlowe was wildly enthusiastic to play the part. But Mr. Charles Frohman gave it to Maude Adams, with the result that he and Miss Marlowe parted company.

Adams made a great success in the part. It started her on the way to success in parts calling for other than skirts. Her "Peter Pan" was not only a great success, but it was probably the crowning artistic achievement of a most sweet and talented little woman. After this she played the role of "The Jester."

But Marlowe demonstrated that she also had the talent that leads to sex in masculine roles, for she gave a most artistic performance of the little play "Chatterton."

Annie Russell, an actress somewhat on the same lines as Maude Adams, tried her talent as "Puck" in a "Midsummer Night's Dream," and was very successful. So, too, Ethel Barrymore, another actress given to the delineation of the sugary type of girl, of presenting the opposite sex in tried what she could do in the way "Carrots," and the public greatly liked the novelty.

A host of comic operas with women playing male roles might be mentioned, except that in this line of work there never has been an interruption to the feminine fondness for male attire. But in comic opera the answer is easy.

There tights are far more potent than skirts, and the best way to permit the doffing of the long skirt and get into public view that such is calculated to draw the crowd is to have the leading lady play the part of a man, preferably the part of some dashing swashbuckler with brilliant uniform.

Looked Part Ideally.

Of well remembered portrayals of men's roles on the operatic stage, nothing much finer can be recalled than that Jessie Bartlett Davis used to do as "Alan Dale" in "Robin Hood." Not only did she look the part ideally, and sing it flawlessly, but she was so finished in her bearing and she maintained the illuhion perfectly.

The same tendency is to be found on the grand opera stage. Women there are also anxious to bid brief adieux to their skirts. Mary Garden thus appeared in the role of "Jean" in the famous Massenet opera "The Juggler of Notre Dame," and is credited with winning success for a work that was only very mildly considered when the leading role was intrusted to man.

Old records of the stage show many women playing "Hamlet." It is now not far short of a century ago that both Mrs. Bartley and Mrs. Campbell made successful appearances in this part. Charlotte Barnes, Mrs. Shaw, Fanny Wallack, Mrs. Brougham, Mrs. Denin, Mrs. F. B. Conway, Julia Seaman and Adele Belgrade used to make regular appearances in the role of the hapless Prince of Denmark, and reviews from current publications show that they not only were treated with great respect, but actually seemed able to give genuine pleasure to their audiences.

Belgrade played the role here not more than a score of years ago. Mrs. Daniel Bandham was another "Hamlet" of some repute, and that most excellent actress, Mrs. Emma Waller, who had the gift of doing almost anything, played the role of "Iago" to the "Othello" of her husband, and contributed her share to a thrilling performance.

Two Great Rivals.

The two great rivals of a score of years ago, Januschek and Modjeska, both appeared on numerous occasions in masculine roles, the great voice and ponderous personality of the former especially suiting her to this line of work.

Marie Prescott was perhaps the last of the feminine Iagos that have been seen in this country. Excepting Bernhardt, no one has attempted "Hamlet" lately, though Helen Mora, the once popular contralto, noted for the depth of her voice, once gave an act of "Hamlet" as a feature of her vaudeville performance, and was well received.

Only lately Marie Brema, well remembered as one of the best dramatic singers heard in this country in recent years, figured in a revival of the famous old-time opera by Gluck, "Orpheus," which was put on to indulge her desire to sing the masculine role of the noted poet of the classics.

Vaudeville has a host of performers like Vesta Tilley, Elsie Janis and Ethel Levy who can don the masculine attire without showing any awkwardness.

There is something very appealing to the average theater-goer in the effort of women to play male roles. Particularly are women interested in the experiment. Deep down in every woman's heart is the conviction that when the universe was planned man got a little the better of things. To have a chance to wear for a time the habiliments of this superior creature is something that never fails to attract the actress herself and the feminine part of her audiences.

Virginia Military Institute Has a Briliant Record

"In all the professions and vocations of life," says a writer in the National Magazine, "the men trained at the Virginia military institute have won for themselves honorable distinction. The record of services rendered by her sons in the Civil, Spanish and Philippine wars has established the reputation of the Virginia military institute upon an enduring foundation.

"In the regular army her graduates are found in numbers second only to those of West Point. The marine corps and the navy also claim a large number of these finely educated and disciplined young men. The institute has been officially recognized by the imperial government of China, a number of student cadets from the Flowery Kingdom having been sent to the institute.

"At the commencement exercises in June, 1908, the guest of honor, Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the United States army, addressing the cadets, referred to the school as an institution which of its kind is second to none other in the world.'

"On the anniversary of the conflict now known as Newmarket day at the institute the names of the cadets who fell in battle at that time are inserted in the company rolls, and as they are called by the sergeant a cadet of the first class steps to the front, salutes and reports: 'Died on the field of honor, sir.' Their names will ever live in the memory of the institute and of the commonwealth of Virginia.

"Five of the killed are buried in the cadet cemetery on the institute grounds, and on Newmarket day the battalion marches to this beautiful and secluded spot and there fires three volleys over the graves of the young heroes.

"One cannot leave this little cemetery without feelings of deepest emotion as he contemplates the sacrifices so gallantly made years ago by the youthful soldiers of Viginia. A more beautiful spot for a last resting place was never seen than this—in the quiet and peaceful valley of the Shenandoah."

Odd Recovery of a Tape Measure.

The explorers were sitting, one on each side of the president, when Dr. Stein produced from his waistcoat pocket a small spring tape measure in a tiny aluminum drum. "It is a very curious thing," said Dr. Stein, "but in 1906 when I was in eastern Tibet I picked up this measure at the foot of an old ruin. I have carried it ever since and use it constantly." Dr. Sven Hedin took the measure in his hand. "This is mine," he said at once. "I lost it in Tibet in 1901," and he named the spot where he believed he had dropped it, with the number of miles it was distant from a certain great lake. This proved to be the spot where it was found.

Girl of Many Colors.

Mrs. Bleakem—George, this is the most interesting novel I ever read. Just listen, dear: In the tenth chapter the heroine sees the hero approaching and she turns pink. He kisses her and she turns red. A footstep is heard and she turns white. Five minutes later the villain arrives and she turns purple with rage. Now wouldn't you call such a girl as that a heroine, George?

Mr. Bleakem (absently)—H'm! I think I should call her a chemeleon.

In Defense of Old Maids.

The average old maid is, as a rule, infinitely more amusing, kind and tolerant than the average married woman, who is so entirely preoccupied with her own family and their interests that she has no time to spare for other people.

By Elimination.

"All the latest popular novels!" sang out the train boy. Then, holding out a copy of "The Guest of Quesnay" to a prosperous looking passenger, he urged: "Buy Booth Tarkington's latest work, sir?"

The man looked annoyed.

"No! I am Booth Tarkington himself."

"Then buy a copy of 'Three Weeks,'" persisted the boy. "You ain't Elinor Glyn, too, are you?"

Jerseyites and Israelites.

At a university dinner President Butler of Columbia and President Wilson of Princeton were present. Dr. Butler took particular delight in scoring Princeton. He said the town, the student body, the faculty and the president were a sleepy lot.

Dr. Wilson replied:

"I admit the truth of Dr. Butler's charge, but I congratulate [illegible] very wide awake, in fact. As it is written in the Bible, He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.'"

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. Emma Imse, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

WOMAN'S INTERESTS

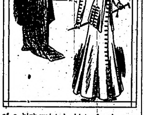
SMART AND MODISH

THE LATEST IN VISITING AND WALKING COSTUMES.

Sleeveless Coat Adds Much to the Appearance of the First Model—Use of Buttons as Trimmings Shown.

Visiting Costume.—Here, we illustrate one of the very smart sleeveless coats, that are being much worn at present; it is in heavy black satin, handsomely braided in the corners, and on the collar with black and gold braid mixed; the sides are connected by braid, which is formed into little ornaments and then taken across and joined to another ornament on the other side of opening; the same arrangement forms the fastening.

The dress worn beneath it consists of a high-waisted skirt of pale gray cashmere, with a net blouse to match.



Hat of gray straw, trimmed with a wreath of flowers and a feather mount.

Materials required: Two and one-half yards satin 42 inches wide, four yards cloth 48 inches wide, two yards net.

Walking Costume.—The fashion of using buttons as a trimming is clearly evidenced in this costume, which is one that may be carried out in almost any costume cloth, serge or tweed.

Our model is in oak-apple brown fine venetian cloth. The two-piece skirt is lined throughout with sateen and is trimmed with small buttons covered with black silk, and silk cord to simulate buttonholes up center front, where the right side wraps over to the left.

The smart little coat is open nearly to waist at the sides, and back seams, the openings being trimmed with buttons.

The collar is faced with black silk; the sleeves are trimmed the entire length with buttons and cord loops.

Materials used: Seven yards 46 inches wide, about seven dozen buttons, three-eighths-yard black silk, 4½ yards silk for lining jacket, 4½ yards sateen for lining skirt.

CUFFS FOR ELBOW SLEEVES.

Accessory That Promises to Make for Comfort During the Hot Days of Summer.

The dressmakers continue to insist on the long close-fitting sleeve and the woman who dotes on comfort is in despair. Anything more unpleasant than the process of peeling off a long tight sleeve, inch by inch, when one comes home on a hot day can scarcely be imagined. A glimmer of light, however, appears on the sleeve horizon in the form of cool little transparent cuffs set into the lower end of the sleeve. Sometimes these cuffs are of Irish lace, sometimes of very sheer batiste, tucked or prettily embroidered by hand. They are simply basted into the sleeve and may be removed when laundered. The sleeve itself is, of course, cut off several inches above the wrist, and as the little cuff opens up its outer edge with buttons and loops, there is enough roominess obtainable to push the sleeve upward on very warm days.

Tonic for the Hair.

An excellent and cheap hair tonic may be made from one part paraffin and three parts eau-de-cologne. If used after washing the hair it will make it beautifully glossy-looking, besides strengthening and nourishing it considerably.

Apply with a soft brush, and afterward give the hair an even, vigorous brushing with a slightly harder brush.

TO KEEP THE SCALP CLEAN.

Method One Girl Finds Good May Possibly Be of Value to Our Readers.

A girl who had to travel much on dusty street cars found she need have her head shampooed less frequently and keep her scalp much cleaner by wiping it each night with a clean, soft towel.

The hair is parted from the temples to the back of the neck and the scalp rubbed thoroughly with the towel; then a new parting is made and the process repeated until the entire head has been gone over.

After the scalp treatment is finished the hair is brushed with a moderately stiff brush, which is kept scrupulously clean.

Another way to keep the scalp clean is to anoint it with a little sweet oil about an hour or more before the shampoo. The oil loosens the dandruff, cleanses the scalp and greatly adds to the results of the shampoo.

Lavender Pads.

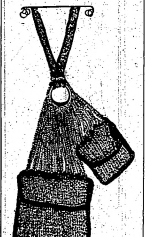
A dainty gift for a housekeeper, one which is particularly suitable also as an engagement present, where something simple and inexpensive is desired, is a set of lavender pads for the linen closet. These were of generous size and flat, so that they might be slipped into the folds of the linen. A set might consist of from three to six. Make them of lavender Japanese crepe, painted with wistaria or other graceful vine. The inside is made of white cotton wadding, between the layers of which dried lavender flowers are plentifully scattered. The pad is finished with tufts or bows of lavender ribbon. It is so simple a gift that anyone can make it at home, but one which every dainty woman must appreciate. We all love beds vaguely fragrant with lavender, but it is one of the little things that busy housekeepers do not find time to attend to. If they were provided with the pads, and in so dainty a form, they could not fail to be pleased.

Never bend down to the book or work; rather, hold these up to the eyes.

DESIGNED FOR THE TRAVELER

Small Double Purse Keeps the Gold and Other Coins from Mingling and Tarnishing Former.

This small double purse is intended for the traveler in foreign lands, where gold and silver coins must be carefully guarded and kept apart, lest the tarnished gold be given for copper, as is only too often the case. The purse is a development of an old Norwegian pattern of knitting and works out charmingly in any of the pure knitting silks that are used for knitting ties. The purses are made in one color, edged with another. Mole gray and green make a good combination, or any color may be chosen to suit the dress with which the purse is to be worn.



When Skin Food Is Needed.

If powder will not stick to the face it is because the skin is too dry and a good skin food should be rubbed in each night.

SAVER OF TIME AND TROUBLE

Woman's Testimony to the Value of the Button Bag—Would Not Be Without It.

"I wouldn't be without it!" said a woman as she lifted a gay cretonne bag from a hook by her bureau, opened it out on the bed, and without fishing among countless buttons, easily found the special button needed for her husband's coat.

"This bag was given to me years ago and has been the greatest convenience. You see the way the cord is put in allows me to open it flat enough to get at the buttons readily yet without spilling.

"Tell you the dimensions? Certainly. Cut a circle of cretonne—or whatever material you like—14 inches in diameter and line it with a plain colored silk or cotton goods. If you wish, a layer of cotton batting can be slipped between, but this not necessary if the materials are firm.

"Sew around the inner edge of the circle small brass rings, about an inch and a half apart. Through these rings run heavy covered cord the same color as the lining. This can be bought, but if the right shade cannot be found, it can easily be made by sewing bias strips of the lining turning it and stuffing with a thick white cord.

"The cord is cut in two pieces, 11½ inches long, run in in opposite directions. This draws easily and when open make a circle 11 or 12 inches in diameter, thus giving the bag a broad opening but preventing the sides from falling so flat that the contents drop out.

"I made that small flat pincushion and sewed it to the bottom. You see I keep it stuck full of needles threaded in different colored silks and cottons to be ready for use at a minute's notice."

Luxuries Forbidden.

A young woman whose skin gave her much trouble from unsightly eruptions was ordered, by a complexion specialist, to give up sundaes and ice-cream soda, which she indulged in daily. The ice-cream alone or plain soda were not forbidden.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

The senior class play, "Merchant of Venice Up-to-Date," given by the class of '09 of the Red Lake Falls high school, last Friday evening, was a "loud and noisy" and histrionic success. The Red Lake Falls concert orchestra furnished the music.

One of the delightful affairs in honor of Miss Lillian Buse, a bride of the week, was a spoon shower at the home of Miss Josephine Kaus last Thursday evening. The guests were the members of the F. and F. B. Several guessing contests provided entertainment for the evening. In a word (matrimonial) contest Mrs. Thos. Germo won the head prize. In a spoon contest each guest was required to guess a message written upon a spoon attached to her back, a clue to the message being provided by the conversation of the other guests. Each guest was required to write a telegram, each word in the message to begin with one of the letters in the name H-e-a-l-y, and some very tender messages were written. To complete the charm of the evening's pastime, there was some spoony music. Miss Kaus played the wedding march, Mrs. Marshall sang "Springtime" and Mrs. Hennings sang "It's Delightful to be Married." As the guests were about to partake of a dainty luncheon, Miss Buse was reduesteq to pull a ribbon and that set in motion an caused the jingling of silver spoons suspended from a bell above the table. The spoons were gifts to Miss Buse. Pretty souvenirs of the happy occasion were hand painted conundrums decorated with cupids. Each guest received a photo of the principals in the nuptial event which was the occasion of the happy gathering.

The annual commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls high school were held Monday evening. The Metropolitan opera house, filled with friends of the members of the class of '09 until there was "standing room only," was decorated with flowers and the class colors, lavender and white. Seated on the stage were the thirteen members of the graduating class, the high school faculty, members of the board of education, Rev. Fr. Fayolle and the speaker of the evening, Lieutenant Governor Eberhart.

After a selection by the orchestra and the invocation offered by Rev. Fr. Fayolle, Superintendent L. V. Koos introduced Mr. Eberhart. Though not a fluent speaker, Mr. Eberhart is possessed of a pleasing personalty and a clear head. He expressed many lofty sentiments that no doubt the young people in whose honor he had come here will profit by.

Mr. Eberhart is a probable candidate for governor and if he is really courting the goddess of political fate, perhaps his visit to Red Lake Falls was opportune. Governor Johnson's Fourth of July speech here a few weeks before his first nomination is often referred to as the start of the wave of sentiment in his favor.

Dr. N. M. Watson, president of the board of education, with appropriate remarks, presented the diplomas to the graduates. Mrs. Geo. F. Hennings sang a pretty song and the exercises closed with a selection by the orchestra. The juniors gave the seniors a hearty send off to cheer them on their entrance into life's school. They gave a hearty class yell and showered the upper classmen with lilacs, the class flower.

MR. TANDBERG DEAD

An Esteemed Citizen, A Strong Clean Man, A Conscientious Capable Official.

County Treasurer O. T. Tandberg died at Minneapolis, where he had been receiving medical treatment, at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, June 3. Just a week previous to his death Mr. Tandberg had submitted to an operation for appendicitis following which his condition had been critical. Though that may be stated as the immediate cause of death, yet he had gone to Minneapolis for treatment because of weakness resulting from a stroke of paralysis and at that time it was not known that he was suffering with appendicitis.

O. T. Tandberg was fifty-three years old. He was born in Norway and came to this country when fourteen years old, locating at Spring Grove, Houston county, Minnesota. He later moved to Olmsted county. He had a liberal education. He attended the common schools, a business college at Rochester and took a three year course at St. Olof's college, Northfield. He may be said to have been one of the pioneers of this county having located in Sanders township, of what was then Polk county, now Red Lake county, twenty-six years ago. He was a teacher of many years standing, having taught both in the common schools and the Norwegian parochial schools in Olmsted county and this county. Always trusted by the people, he occupied various township offices prior to his election as county treasurer of this county. He always regarded public office as a public trust and the people had unlimited confidence in this man. He was five times elected to this responsible office and at the time of his death was serving his ninth year as treasurer, incorruptible, as honest as the day is long, accommodating, giving to the discharge of his public duties that same effort and care that would a prudent business man to his personal affairs. If as has been said an honest man is the noblest work of God, then here was a perfect type of the noblest work of God. He was more than that, He was a good citizen, good neighbor, a kind and devoted husband and father and one who in very walk of life measured up to the full stature of man.

Deceased is survived by his widow and eight children, The children are: Ida, Emma, Esther, Agnes, Theodore, George, Elmer and Alvin.

The remains were bought to Red Lake Falls Friday morning. Brief services were held at the homeMonday morning, Rev. S. T. Palm officiating. The remains were then taken to Thief River Falls and services were held at The Norwegian Synod church, Rev. Aastad conducting the services. Interment was at Greenwood cemetery at Thief River Falls. The county officials were pall bearers.

SHAW HAS RESIGNED

County Commissioner from the Fourth District Quits Public Office.

Daniel Shaw, county commissioner from the fourth district, of which the city of Thief River Falls is a part, tendered his resignation as a member of the board at the meeting held Tuesday requesting that immediate action be taken and the resignation was accepted by the board. Mr. Shaw gave as his reason for resigning that he could nnot spare the time to properly represent his district and deemed it for the interest of the district and the county that he resign. Mr. Shaw is too modest by far. The people of the Fourth district will experience difficulty finding a man to so capably represent them, even though the new man have unlimited time to devote to the performance of the duties of the office.

The Fourth district is made up of the towns of Norden, North, Sanders, Silverton, Clover Leaf, Goodridge and Reiner and the city of Thief River Falls. The chairmen of the boards of supervisors of the towns and the mayor Thief River Falls will choose Mr. Shaw's successor.

SOME GOSSIP FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

Our New Special Correspondent Notes the Development of St. Paul.

Interesting Political and Personal Views Around the Marble Palace.

St. Paul June 9.

The development of St. Paul has always been in a sense sectional. There was a time twenty-five or more years ago when Third Street monopolized business. About Sibley Street were the principal hotels and restaurants and the retail stores; below, the wholesale district and the railroad offices. Wabasha Street next got the retail overflow. Afterwards began the development of Seventh Street which for many years made it, what it still is to a great extent, the shoppers' parade. With the building of the Ryan hotel, Robert Street began to assume an importance, to which the construction of the German American bank and later the Pioneer Press, the Endicott and the Manhatten buildings added The removal of the Mannheimers who have always had the cream of the St. Paul retail trade, to their present location on the corner of Robert and Seventh streets, with an ample frontage on both was the initial step in giving to Sixth Street the importance it has since attained, which the construction of the New York Life building, the Metropolitan Opera House and other modern edifices has pushed along. In the meantime lower Third Street no longer accomodated the growing demands of the jobbing trade. It crowded back to Fourth, to Fifth and finally to Sixth Street, occupying in all a large territory.

The Building of St. Paul.

Just now that section of the city beginning at St. Peter Street and extending along Fifth and Sixth to Summit Avenue appears to have attracted the special attention of the city as builders. Within the past year or two there have been erected there the great auditorium on which St. Paul justly prides itself, the Orpheum, the home of the vaudeville, and the granite pile where the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance company has its offices, not to speak of the St. Paul post office which dates much further back, upon which they are now erecting the massive Norman tower which sentinels its front. That, however, was only the beginning. At the corner of Fifth and St. Peter the steel skeleton of the great new hotel stretches its arm skyward. From there to where at the crown of Summit hill the massive foundations of the new Cathedral are laid steelworkers, stonemasons, bricklayers and carpenters are everywhere active. On Sixth is the stately Masonic Temple built of brick and faced with gray sandstone; on Third and Fifth the handsome Flatiron build-

Great Western Manure Spreaders

In Carload Lots

We have already placed a carload of Great Western manure spreaders this season. That's going some, but that not all. We received another carload this week, and

There's a Reason

The manure spreader has come to be one of the most practical machines on the farm and a big time saver and a money maker. There is not only a great saving of time and expense, but the work is done better with the machine than in the old way. If you want to fertilize lightly it can't be done successfully in the old way, but with a machine you can spread the fertilizer thin and even over the ground and it is possible to keep the land up with the least amount of expense and labor. And

There are Reasons

Why the Great Western is more satisfactory than other machines. These are some of them:

It has Oak Sills, not pine, elm or maple; Oak Tongue, not pine; Hickory Double-trees and Single-trees, not elm or maple: Mammoth Double Oak Bolster, not a frail, single bolster; Big, heavy 16-inch Malleable Fifth Wheel, not small, light cast iron; Big, Heavy Front Axle, set well back under the load, not a light skeleton axle, set away out ahead of the machine; Big Heavy Rear Axle; Heaviest and Strongest Wheels found on any spreader; Wind Shield and Rake that make the work of the Great Western away in the land. Endless apron that is always ready to load. No complicated device needed to put it out of gear at the right moment to prevent serious breakage.

The Farmers' Institute will be held in Red Lake Falls next Wednesday and we invite our farmer friends to see the machines

COLVILL STATUE UNVEILED.

Great Crowd Attends Ceremonies at Cannon Falls.

The unveiling of the statue of Col. William Colvill, whose body rests in the Cannon Falls cemetery, brought great numbers of people to that city. The whole city was in festal garb in honor of the occasion, all the houses being decorated with American flags.

The day was crowded with events. At 10 o'clock in the morning a parade was formed on Fourth street, and the column, which included the Grand Army post, proceeded to the cemetery for the Memorial day exercises.

At 10:30 o'clock a business meeting of the First Minnesota regiment was held in the main auditorium of the Barnes Memorial church, and at 11:45 the members of the regiment were entertained by the citizens in the dining room of the church.

The principal parade of the day formed on Fourth street at 1:30 p. m. It was headed by the state reform school band, and included the Red Cross society, Relief corps, First regiment Minnesota volunteers and the pupils of the public schools. Those of the old veterans who were not strong enough to march were taken in carriages.

Arriving at the cemetery, the unveiling exercises were begun with prayer by Rev. J. A. Edlund. After music by the band, the presentation address was delivered by J. F. Searles of Stillwater. The speech of acceptance was delivered by Gov. Johnson. Following music by a male quartet, an address by Maj. W. D. Hale of Minneapolis, who was unable to be present, was read by Maj. Martin McGinnis.

The oration was then delivered by F. M. Wilson of Red Wing, who eloquently dwelt upon Col. Colvill's life as a soldier and patriot. The statue was then unveiled by Miss Elma Williamson. The singing of "America" by the assemblage, accompanied by the band, closed the exercises.

President William May of the First Minnesota Regiment association accepted for the First Minnesota the invitation of Secretary C. N. Cosgrove of the Minnesota state fair to attend the fair Monday evening, Sept. 6 to witness the first production of "Minnesota at Gettysburg," which is to be the big evening spectacle at the fair this year.

PEDDLERS' LAW INVALID.

Judge Snow of Winona Declares Act of Legislature Imposing Licenses Unconstitutional.

Judge Snow of Winona, in the test case brought before him to define the constitutionality of the peddlers' license law passed by the last legislature today filed an opinion adverse to the act.

This is the law demanded by the several merchants' associations in the state, and particularly the country merchants. Two years ago Gov. Johnson vetoed a similar bill, but it was again resurrected and passed by the last legislature. The only change made was to eliminate cities of 50,000 and over from its provisions.

The test case was brought by a Winona patent medicine concern which has a large number of agents peddling its wares over the state.

CAN STATE RUN INDIAN SCHOOL?

Attorney General Decides That No One Has the Necessary Authority.

The attorney general's office has give na nopinion in reply to the query from Gov. Johnson, as to the disposition of the Morris Indian school, in which it is held there is no way any one can manage the school except by usurpation of authority.

The congressional act turns the school over to the state this summer and an act of the legislature accepts the school but does not specify who is to manage it. The appropriation made for the maintenance of the school does not become available under August, 1910, and for the coming school year there will be no one to run the school nor anything to run it with.

But County Treasurer Can't Accept Trophies Sent by Dakotan.

County Treasurer Henry C. Hanke of Hennepin county received through the mails thirty-three gopher tails in payment for taxes on property owned by John Erickson, now living at Minot, N. D.

Mr. Erickson was laboring under the impression that Hennepin county pays a 2 cent bounty on all gopher tails turned into the treasurer's office, just as is done in North Dakota. As the first half of his tax amounts to 66 cents, he thought to trade off his bounty for a tax receipt.

The tails were sent back.

DEAF OF STATE MEET.

It is expected that 500 persons will attend the annual convention of the Minnesota State Association of the Deaf in Minneapolis July 1 to 5. Minneapolis is the home of half that number. The question of securing suitable work for deaf mutes will be considered at the gathering.

Rev. George F. Flick, Chicago, will be one of the principal speakers. All addresses will be given in sign language.

MINNESOTA CAN BE NAVIGATED.

Steamer Captain Will Lend Efforts to Secure a Government Survey.

Navigation of the Minnesota river is not only possible, but entirely practicable, according to Capt. Charles DeMers of the steamer Lorene of Dubuque, which has been making regular trips between St. Peter and Mankato for three weeks.

At a comparatively small cost, says Capt. DeMers, the stream could be opened to the largest boats now plying the upper waters of the Mississippi, and he believes that the volume of freight and passenger business would warrant the establishment of a regular schedule between St. Paul and up river points.

Must Secure More Data.

Capt. DeMers, who has followed the Mississippi for forty years, expressed himself on the subject of Minnesota river improvement when shown a dispatch from Washington which stated that the general board had rejected the recommendation of government engineers calling for a preliminary survey of the stream. Its members have announced that, while the matter will be kept open for a short time to permit of the filing of additional data, they were far from convinced that the survey would be ordered.

Officers of the Minnesota River Improvement league have set themselves the task of obtaining data, and they will have a valuable ally in Capt. DeMers.

MUST DISPLAY TWO TAGS.

Inconsistency in New Automobile Law Explained by Secretary of State.

Though the state automobile law provides for two license tags for each machine, and yet only calls for the display of one, and that on the rear of the machine, Secretary of State Schmahl has given notice that he interests the law to read that both tags must be displayed. This is the intent, he says, and those who framed the law agree wit hhim.

The law as originally drafted called for the purchase and display of two tags, one on the front and the other on the rear of the machine. In this shape it passed the house, but when the senate was reached the committee in charge made it one license tag only. In the committee of the whole, however, the two-tag feature was returned, but by a mistake only one of the sections relating to the license plate was changed.

Because of this fact some machine owners are only displaying one plate.

Recover Old Flags.

The eight survivors of Company G, Sixth Minnesota infantry, held their annual reunion Memorial day at the old capitol in St. Paul. The feature of the gathering was the finding of the company flag, which had been mislaid for nearly twenty years.

During all that time it had been in the vaults of the state historical society, unmarked and unknown, and it might have been there yet had not the removal of a lot of relics to the new capitol brought it to light. There was great rejoicing when the bit of blue silk was unwrapped and shown to the veterans.

The flag was presented to the company by the women of St. Paul Oct. 23, 1862, and had been carried in all the engagements participated in by the company. It has been placed in one of the flag cases in the rotunda of the new capitol.

Assistant Postmasters Meet.

A meeting of the assistant postmasters of Minnesota will be held at the postoffice, Minneapolis, June 8, and it is expected that there will be a full attendance of members of the state association, because of the important matters that are to come up.

The postal authorities have roused themselves to the idea that the public must be thoroughly educated in postal matters, and to that end much discussion will be indulged in at the meeting. The general delivery is also a matter for considerable worry, and this will be taken up and discussed, as will also what is termed the transparent envelope nuisance. The first session will be held Tuesday morning.

Springs to Be Exploited.

Jordan's sulphur mud and sulphur water baths are being exploited by two companies, the Rosendahl Sulphur Springs company and the North Baden Sulphur Baths company. The Rosendahl people are making extensive additions, as their capacity is crowded to the limit all the time. It is their intention to begin work on the erection of large hospitals in the fall. The North Baden Sulphur Baths company has property on which are located several fine springs, and this company will soon begin work on a sanatorium and other buildings, John Wunder of Minneapolis having the contract.

PAYS REBATE FINE.

St. Paul, June 3. — The Wisconsin Central railway yesterday paid its fine for rebating, amounting to $20,000. The road had been indicted, along with the Great Northern and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Oamaha. The other roads paid their fines, but the Wisconsin line appealed to the United States supreme court. A mandate handed down May 19 by that body affirmed the decision of the federal district court.

PRIZES FOR ESSAYS.

State Fair Board Offers School Children Cash Prizes and Tickets.

Owing to the widespread interest taken in the forthcoming spectacle, "Minnesota at Gettysburg," which is to be the big feature of the night entertainments at the Minnesota state fair, Sept. 6 to 11, the board of managers of the fair has decided to conduct a prize essay contest, open to all pupils of the public schools of the state.

The essays submitted in this contest are to be under the title "Minnesota at Gettysburg," must not be over 1,000 words in length and must be signed by the name, the school and personal address of the contestant, and must be mailed to Secretary C. N. Cosgrove, Minnesota State Fair, Hamline, Minn., not later than July. These essays will be submitted to a competent committee of three prominent Twin City educators, who are to pass on their merits both from a historical and a literary standpoint, and the writers of the three assays from high school pupils pronounced the best by this committee will receive prizes as follows:

First prize, $25 in cash and a season ticket for the state fair, good for main gate and grandstand.

Second prize, $15 in cash and a season ticket for the state fair, good for main gate and grandstand.

Third prize, $10 and a season ticket to the state fair, good at main gate and grandstand.

The committee will also be authorized to name six other high school contestants, whose essays are of superior merit, and each of these contestants will be given a season ticket for the coming state fair.

The same set of prizes will be given to contestants from the graded schools of this state.

The first prize essay will be printed in full in the official program of the coming state fair, together with the picture of the winner, and will be used as a basis for a scenario of the productoin.

As many hundreds of these essays will be submitted on the coming contest, it is advisable that all pupils prepare their essays and get them into the mail as early as possible.

SMALLPOX CUT ONE-TENTH.

State Board Shows Good Results From New Method.

A decrease in the number of smallpox cases reported to the state board of health to nearly a tenth of what they were a year ago is taken by officials of the board to be proof that their new method of dealing with smallpox is working well and that it has justified their sticking to the method in spite of the criticism that was hurled at them from all parts of the state.

During the latter part of 1907 and early in 1908 there was an epidemic of smallpox. Up to that time all cases had been ordered quarantined. The board then adopted a new rule, ordering vaccination of all persons around the premises when a case of smallpox is discovered and permitting them to go about their business as usual, leaving only a partial quarantine.

TROUBLES IN BELTRAMI.

State Officers on Ground Checking Up Reckless County Board.

The financial affairs of Beltrami county are again demanding the attention of state officials. Attorney General George T. Simpson has been at Bemidji investigating acts of the county commissioners, which will be laid before the grand jury there Tuesday. M. F. Kain, deputy public examiner, has been working on the county's books and has found evidence of the illegal use of county funds.

A similar state of affairs was discovered once before, and after investigation Gov. Johnson removed part of the county board from office, but they were re-elected.

TO OPEN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

Summer Session at the Agricultural School Starts June 21.

To meet the needs of school superintendents, principals and teachers interested in industrial education, the second industrial school of the department of agriculture, University of Minnesota, will open on June 21 at the university farm, St. Anthony Park. It will continue until July 10.

The interest awakened in industrial education everywhere makes it imperative that teachers prepare themselves in agriculture, home economics and kindred subjects, according to Dean J. W. Olsen of the department. Information regarding the course may be had of Dean Olsen or Registrar J. H. Drew.

DENMARK.

All Danish-Americans will be interested in a dispatch from Aarhus, which says that the Danish-American association has made arrangements for a festival of a novel character to take place here July 4, in connection with a national exposition now in progress. It is the first time that an attempt has been made to have a Fourth of July celebration in a foreign country arranged by naturalized American citizens descended from that country.

The object is to afford Scandinavians an occasion to learn the truth about the country which many of their nationality have made their home and learned to love as their own country, where they have availed themselves of the opportunities offered them and with which they are thoroughly familiar.

The crown prince of Denmark and both the American ambassador to Denmark and the Danish ambassador to the United States, as well as George Brandes and other well known Danes, will participate in the exercises. At least 1,000 persons from the United States will be present in Aarhus on the Fourth of July. An attendance of 50,000 is expected by the exposition authorities.

The program arranged by the Danish-American association follows:

First Part, 10 A. M.

Address by the representative of the Danish government.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee," by audience, accompanied by orchestra.

The orchestra under direction of Carl Busch.

In the evening grand concert, Soloist Peter Cornelius (the famous Danish tenor, who intends visiting the United States in 1910); Helge Nissen, Mrs. Ulrich and Miss Krarup Hansen, all of the Danish Royal opera, Copenhagen. After the concert a banquet tendered the Americans by the city of Aarhus.

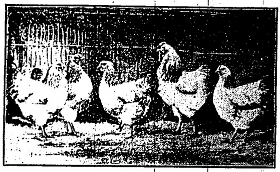
THE SELECTION OF STOCK FOR BREEDING POULTRY

Immature Males Should Not Be Used in the Breeding Pen; Importance of Selecting Hen—By C. E. Petersen.



A Flock of Prize Winners.

In the selection of breeding stock the individuals that have developed most strongly the primary characters of their sex should always be given the preference, but as this matter of strong sex individuality is not always taken into consideration by the average breeder he, in many cases, works against his own success because success in full measure can never be attained except this matter is fully understood and bred for, as well as any other characteristics of the breed.

There are effeminate males and masculine females—those in which the characters of the opposite sex are unusually developed and it is needless to say that such do not make the best parents from which to breed.

In the selection of the male bird, none but a fully mature bird should be used to perpetuate his kind, and by a fully mature bird we are to understand a bird which has developed all his secondary sexual characters as near to full perfection as it is possible.

Nature has some laws that cannot lightly be trifled with and this is one of them; for though it is true that an immature bird may be bred from, yet this same bird under more natural conditions would never find enough mates to do much damage to the type of the breed.

The older bird is better furnished with means of defense and the younger is routed from the breeding preserves, and until by the means of successful battle he can maintain his position as sire of the flock in the natural state, his chances are very slender for propagation.

In fact this state of things can be observed in almost any farm yard where poultry is left to themselves, for here it is invariably the male bird with the most vigor and the most fully matured sexual characters that becomes what is customarily called "the cock of the walk."

Single Comb White Leghorn.

Where birds are bred for certain desirable characters as to plumage and other standard requirements, things take on an entirely different aspect for natural selection and the survival of the fittest are set aside, supplanted by artificial selection which may, as we all know, work an entire change in species for better or worse, as the requirements of the fancy may dictate, which is really the guiding and in many instances the ruling principle of the poultry world today, and making breeders do what their better judgment pronounces the final undoing of the breed.

Now, a male bird may be strong and active and in good physical health, and yet be a poor breeder. He is, rather an eater; he puts on flesh, is a glutton, a hanger-on, that first and foremost attends to his own needs in preference to those of his consorts with which he is mated. He would in case of encroachment of another male not show fight more than a minute, run, hide his head in a corner and utter sounds very much like a hen in distress, wings hanging, tail dragging—a coward and effeminate all through, that never for a moment could sustain his sireship of the pen if it had to be fought for.

On the other hand, a male may be in poor health and yet be a strong breeder. He knows, or nature knows, that his time is limited and so he gives up reluctantly to the encroachment of other males on his premises and it is only for sheer lack of strength that he is vanquished, but never for lack of courage.

Now, either one of these males should be avoided, it should be the purpose of the breeder to encourage every atom of the sexual instinct in his sires and make it a strong point in his matings never to use, if it can possibly be avoided—and it must be avoided—any male of the above description.

I have seen males at noted shows, fine in feather, much lauded by their owners, but the birds that would never fertilize another egg—passe in every sense of the word, and I have also seen birds of the other description that were too weak to keep on their feet, birds that it would take considerable nursing to keep through the winter and that only the summer season would make of use, but only to perpetuate a very undesirable line of breeding.

Now, a good breeding male should be a full matured male, a male that is well spurred, that spoils for a fight, that will fight to a finish and if defeated crow his spite against his antagonist, dying.

Such stuff as this makes the right kind of a breeder. He is ever on the alert, watching, guarding, calling the females, and would starve first before he would satisfy his own hunger as long as he could get one of the females to eat the last morsel.

A strong crower, which means good, strong lungs, which in turn means less liable to disease, last on the roost at night and first off it in the morning, comb blood-red and eyes bright, full of the spirit of animal life, clapping his wings incessantly, dancing before the females, spreading his wing and displaying his beauty to the ladies of his harem. This is the strong, physical breeding characteristics of a male fit to perpetuate a race of hardy, healthy stock.

The hackles should be long and flowing and an abundance of them; the saddle feathers and furnishing abundant, and nothing so detracts from the appearance of a male as a scanty tail furnishing. Let the tail be well furnished, sicles long and flowing, and with the spread of legs that looks so well and bespeaks the confidence of his own powers to maintain the supremacy over his flock.

Scanty furnishing, knock-kneed and awkward, ungainly looking males should be avoided. There is a natural grace in a male that should in every way be encouraged.

Scanty tail furnishings is the cause of many a high-tailed bird. He only got a few feathers and they stand up straight; not enough of them to maintain them at the proper angle.

The breeding from immature males is largely to blame for the lack of proper furnishings, as it is still true "that like begets like," and when immature males are used generation after generation no better result can be expected.

The furnishings of a male is his badge of maturity; they show him to be fitted to breed from and no male bird is as handsome and as fit to breed from as in his second year, and it is about the same with all the different species of the gallinaceous birds.

The females should be selected with the same care regarding their secondary sexual characters, as it is just as bad to use a "cocky" hen in the breeding yard as it is to use a "henny" cock; both of them will be of little use in the perpetuation of their species.

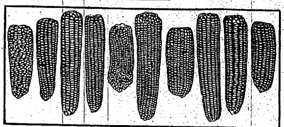
There are many females that show a pronounced tendency in this direction, and as the bird grows older this perverted sexual character grows stronger, until in some rare cases she will change her plumage into that of the male bird, which has been observed by ourselves as well as by others.

Exterminating the Prairie Dog.—The prairie dog has become such a pest in the national forests of Arizona and New Mexico, that the United States forest service has decided to carry out an active campaign for its extermination, says Scientific American. Poisons are used, such as strychnine, cyanide of potassium, anise oil, and molasses, the poison being smeared over wheat. The riders carry the wheat in a tin pail supported by a gunny sack slung across the shoulder. One hand is free for the reins. With the other the rider uses a teaspoon to measure out the poison.

Tree Planting in Dry Localities.—In planting fruit trees or shade trees in semi-arid regions, it will be found wise to plant them 20 feet apart and apple trees 25 feet apart, then, by giving suitable culture, the moisture of the entire acreage is divided among a lessened number of trees.

THE SELECTION AND TESTING OF SEED CORN

Method of Going Into the Field before Harvest Time and Selecting the Choice Ears—By Logan Owen.

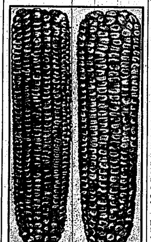


Prize Winning Ears.

In obtaining seed corn from places at a distance it is always best to secure it in the ear, because in this form it can be picked over, judged and all ears that are not suited for planting may be thrown aside, while if it is shelled no such selection can be made.

The selection of seed corn by the farmer from his own crop is generally accomplished in one of three ways: First, by picking out the seed after the corn has been cribbed; second, by selecting the best ears while gathering, and third, by going into the field before harvesting time and selecting the most desirable ears. Of these three ways my experience has shown the last to be the best, because a better selection can be made when that is the only aim in view and when the entire plant, and not simply the ear, can be considered. Whatever the method, more seed than is really needed should be selected, in order that a second "weeding out" of the poorest ears just before planting may still leave enough good seed.

On our farm we have tried still another method for obtaining the best seed corn—namely, to grow it in a special plot of ground. We used the following method: Take any number of selected ears—say 50, for example—and plant them in 50 separate parallel rows, one ear to the row. This makes it necessary for the plot of ground to be at least 50 corn rows wide, and it should be long enough for the planting of about two-thirds of an ear in each row. If possible, this ground should be as far removed from other fields of corn as can be to prevent outside pollination. To further protect from foreign pollen we have found it a good plan to take the remaining one-third of the selected corn and use it to plant a border around the breeding plot. Before the pollen matures every alternate row is detasseled, to prevent self or close pollination; also any stalks in the rest of the rows that are imperfect to a marked degree in any way should be detasseled.



Two Best Ears.

All the seemingly good ears from good stalks, in good position on the stalk, should be gathered from the detasseled rows. Out of all these ears first pick out the best ones for next year's breeding plot. From that remaining the best ears can be selected for next season's seed corn for the main crop.

In regard to the type of ear to select for seed the following points are essential: The main object in view is the production of as large a quantity of grain to the ear as possible; the ear should be cylindrical in shape, about ten inches in length and 7½ inches in circumference. Both ends should be well filled out with large kernels. The rows of kernels, as well as the kernels themselves, should be closely pressed together, in order that the ear will be compact and solid. Each ear can be readily tested for weight by weighing the entire ear first and then the shelled corn obtained from it. The grain should constitute from 85 to 90 per cent. of the whole ear. The kernels should be as nearly uniform in size as possible, to insure a good, even stand; they should be wedged shaped.

The vitality of the corn should always ways be tested. Improper drying and storing away of seed corn very often lowers the vitality of the seed, but if it is thoroughly cured and kept dry no injury is likely to take place. We have found it a very satisfactory method to string the corn and tie it up in the barn, provided it is well covered. In the spring, before planting time, every ear should be tested, especially when there is any doubt as to its vitality. We have a box fixed for this purpose; it is four feet long by three feet wide by six inches deep. We have bored holes through the sides two inches from the bottom and 2½ inches apart; through these holes we have stretched fine wire, both lengthways and crossways, thus dividing the box into 2½-inch squares. At one end these rows of squares are numbered; along one side the squares in each row are numbered. When ready to test the corn, we get enough moist, rich dirt to fill the box up even with the wire; next we number the ears to be tested. For example, the first ear is marked ear one, row one; the next, ear two, row one. When we have enough for the first row, the first ear in the second row is marked ear one, row two, and so on. When the ears are all numbered, take four or five grains from different parts of each ear and plant them in the square with the corresponding number. In this box we can test about 275 ears at one time. Of course, the box can be larger or smaller, as the case may demand.

MAKING MONEY RAISING SKUNKS

How the Animals Are Bred and Why their Breeding Profitable.

Skunk farming is becoming an important industry in some parts of the United States, and yet the man who suggested it was regarded as mentally unsound. To-day there are hundreds of such farms on a paying basis.

The average skunk produces a quart of oil and the fur or skin always brings a good price, fashion regulating the value. At the present time the skins which are the most valuable are the darker ones. A pure black skin is worth from $1.25 to $2.50, according to the quality and size; a striped skunk skin brings in the market about 50 or 60 cents, while those with a part stripe are worth in the neighborhood of a dollar.

It has been figured out that a man who understands skunk farming can begin on 20 skunks, 15 females and five males, and in a few years he can have a healthy bank account. It is not difficult to calculate how rapidly these 20 skunks will increase in number. Say you begin work early in the fall and that in December they breed. At once you have an increase of 120 skunks, putting the average of each litter at eight. In June they breed again, and if the same ratio of increase be kept up, at the expiration of a year and a half you will have 7,495 skunks.

Put the pelts at one dollar each, the pelts of 200 male skunks would bring $200; the oil at 50 cents an ounce would be worth $800. Then figuring as was done on the increase in skunks, at the expiration of a year and a half you could kill 3,700 male skunks, the pelts of which would be worth that many dollars.

The amount of oil gathered from this number would be 29,600 ounces, worth just $14,800. At the expiration of four years you would have killed 1,890,000 males, the pelts of which would be worth $1,890,000, and the oil, 15,120,000 ounces, worth $7,560,000. And you would still have 3,700,000 skunks left!

It is not surprising that skunk farming is being taken up throughout the country, and if it was possible to deodorize the skunk the industry would be even more popular.

Dry Potatoes for Food.—According to the Magdeburgische Zeitung, Consul Frank S. Hannah says that the recent experiments in the drying of potatoes under the auspices of the imperial interior department has had such good results that a new and important field of activity may be offered for the German farmers.

The potatoes are reduced by this process to about one-quarter of their original weight and can be kept in good condition in this compressed form for an indefinite length of time. The military authorities have made thorough experiments with this product and have become convinced that its nutritious value is fully equal to that of corn, and that the dried potatoes can take the place of one-third of the former ration of oats.

Farmers' Families.—It is estimated that there are about 7,000,000 farmers' families in the United States to-day, taking the word farmer in its broadest sense, and including all families living in the open country.

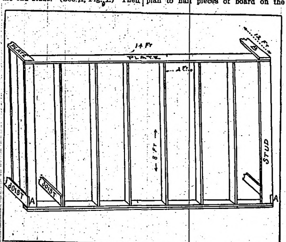
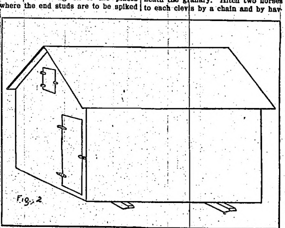
PORTABLE GRANARY IS HANDY ON ANY FARM

Detailed Plans for the Construction of Building to Hold Thousand Bushels of Grain that Can Be Moved.



Side Frame of Granary.



Frame of Granary.

To contain a thousand bushels a granary should be 12x14 feet with 8-foot studs. The frame should be made of planks 2x6 inches fastened by 4-inch spikes. To form the side frame take three pieces 2x6 inches 14 feet long and eight pieces 8 feet long, the former for plate and sills, the latter for studs. On two of the 14-foot pieces mark off 2-foot spaces and at these places mark across with a try square the places where the studs are to be nailed to the plate and upper layer of the sill, but notice that the studs at the ends of the side frames are put flat instead of across; also that these and all the end studs have a piece cut out to allow the joists at the ends of the building to be let into the end studs. (See A, Fig. 1.) Then when the flooring is nailed to these joists it holds the end wall firm against the pressure of the wheat. After spiking down through the plate into the studs and up through one plank of the sill into the other end of the studs, the lower plank of the sill may be spiked to the upper plank of the sill. (See Fig. 1.) Make the other side frame in the same way, then raise them up and fasten the bottoms together with the two end joists and brace with slant braces in such a position that the side frames are just at right angles to the joists. The tops may then be fastened together by spiking the end plates on top of the side plates (See B, Fig. 1), but first marking on it the places where the end studs are to be spiked two feet apart as before. These end studs are cut similar to the corner ones, except that they must be made two inches (or the thickness of the plank) longer than the corner ones, so as to reach the higher plate and fit on the inside of the end joist as before. The other joists may now be laid across and spiked at each end to the side studs, also spiked to the sills.

The gables are formed by putting up a pair of rafters at each end and spiking to these, upright pieces of 2x4-inch scantling resting on the end plate and spiked to it. Two of these should be placed in such a position at each end that a small door wide enough for a man to get through can be cut between them. The elevator spout of the threshing machine can be put into whichever of these doors is more convenient to allow the machine to be set with the wind. The other rafters may now be raised and braced in position.

Now cut out six feet of one of the end studs to form a door four feet wide, and nail a piece of plank across the top of this space, to form the top of the door frame, and support the short piece of stud left above. This width of door will allow a fanning mill to be taken in to clean up seed grain, etc.

When laying the floor it is a good plan to nail pieces of board on the under side as you go, to cover any knot holes; also nail small pieces of board on the two sides of the studs (three sides in the end studs) even with the top edge of the joist for the double purpose of supporting the floor and preventing wheat from sifting through the cracks, if you do not make a perfect fit of the flooring round the studs.

To move these granaries make two skids from timber 4x6 inches, 14 feet long with a block spiked on the back end. Round up the other end like a sleigh runner and bore a hole, into which a large clevis may be fastened. Pry up one end of granary at a time and put the skids in position underneath the granary. Hitch two horses to each clevis by a chain and by having two careful drivers or by tying their heads together as a four-horse team for one driver the granary can be hauled where you wish. Pry up again and remove the skids. It is a good plan to have two planks fastened together just like the sills to lay under the middle of the joists as a support.

The best material for covering sides and floor is six-inch flooring, but many people use narrow shiplap. It is also economy to paint as soon as finished. The siding needs to be well nailed with three-inch wire nails.

LOOK NOW TO DRY FARMING

Method of Cultivating Lands Hitherto Considered Arid.

"Dry farming, quickly defined, is the art of raising grain, fruit and vegetables on lands hitherto considered arid, and of no value except for sheep grazing," announces John F. Burns, secretary treasurer of the Dry Farming congress. "Not only the United States, but a large portion of the whole world is interested in dry farming, and at our convention at Cheyenne a few weeks ago, representatives from Canada, Mexico, Siberia, Australia and the Transvaal were interested participants. The growing population of the world demands that these hitherto neglected areas be made to produce and the area of arid lands devoted to farming will grow rapidly from year to year.

"In dry farming, a region in which less than eight inches of moisture falls is of little use, but where the rainfall or snowfall amounts to more than eight inches good crops of grain and fruit are being successfully grown at this time.

"For wheat, I would recommend plowing in the fall to a depth of at least 12 inches; then following up with the harrow in the same direction as the plow. In a few weeks another harrowing would be in order, and through the year I would harrow frequently, in order to have the soil retain all the moisture in the atmosphere that could be obtained. In the following fall I would plant red winter wheat, and when this was up a few inches I would run a harrow over it to tear out a certain proportion of the plants. Later on I would repeat the harrowing process. I have known 60 bushels of wheat to be raised in arid regions by such a process, which, of course, allows of only one crop every two years."

Pictorial Ancestry.

An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket, and, pointing to the head engraved on it, said: "My great-great-grandfather was made a lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."

"What a coincidence!" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."

All Want to Bow to Royalty.

The Lord Chamberlain's post bag on Friday and Saturday next will attain mammoth proportions, between three and four thousand letters being received on each day from people either desirous of being summoned themselves to attend a court, or of presenting a daughter or daughter-in-law. Most of the applicants state whether they wish to attend the earlier or the later courts, and, as far as possible, their wishes in this respect are complied with.

THE WITCHES' TREE.

Curious Superstitions Regarding the Influenne of the Elder.

Country people speak of the elder tree as "The Witches' Tree," and plant it near farm buildings and dairies to keep off witches. They also say that the roots should never come near a well, still less grow into it, or the water will be spoilt. Evelyn's opinion was also unfavorable. He says: "I do by no means commend the scent of it which is very noxious to the air.

"We learn from Blesius that a certain house in Spain, seated among many elder trees, diseased and killed nealy all its inhabitants, which, when at last they were grubbed up, became a very healthy and wholesome place."

Cattle scarcely touch the elder, and the mole is driven away by the scent. Carters often place branches on their horses' heads to keep off flies. Nothing will grow well in the company of the elder, and when it has been removed and all its roots carefully grubbed up it is some few years before the ground becomes perfectly sweet and good for anything.

The berries, besides feeding the birds, make excellent country wine, delicious with soda water in summer or taken hot in winter; the wood is particularly good for skewers and the curious jews' red fungus grows on elder stumps. A species of elder in the Tyrol is covered with beautiful scarlet berries.

OVER THE FENCE
Neighbor Says Something.

The front yard fence is a famous council place on pleasant days. Maybe to chat with some one along the street, or for friendly gossip with next door neighbor. Sometimes it is only small talk but other times neighbor has something really good to offer.

An old resident of Baird, Texas, got some mighty good advice this way once.

He says:

"Drinking coffee left me nearly dead with dyspepsia, kidney disease and bowel trouble, with constant pains in my stomach, back and side, and so weak I could scarcely walk.

"One day I was chatting with one of my neighbors about my trouble and told her I believed coffee hurt me. Neighbor said she knew lots of people to whom coffee was poison and she pleaded with me to quit it and give Postum a trial. I did not take her advice right away but tried a change of climate, which did not do me any good. Then I dropped coffee and took up Postum.

"My improvement began immediately and I got better every day I used Postum.

"My bowels became regular in two weeks, all my pains were gone. Now I am well and strong and can eat anything I want to without distress. All of this is due to my having quit coffee, and to the use of Postum regularly.

"My son who was troubled with indigestion thought that if Postum helped me so, it might help him. It did, too, and he is now well and strong again.

"We like Postum as well as we ever liked the coffee and use it altogether in my family in place of coffee and all keep well." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

John B. Garlanaeult, an Aitkin banker is mentioned as the probable bank superintndent. Mr. Garlaneault is one of the prominent men of northern Minnesota and peculiarly fitted for the duties of the position.

The Winona Independent shows up the inconsistency of Boss Aldrich by remaking: "Senator Aldrich favors high tariff schedules on the plea that the government needs the money, although he opposes an income tax because the government has all the revenue it needs."

The Minneapolis Tribune has entered A. D. Stephens in the race for United States senator. The Tribune's list now includes T. B. Walker, Tom Shevlin, Frank Kellogg and Moses E. Clapp, besides Senator Stephens. It is apparent that Senator Clapp will have the fight of his life to retain the toga.

According to Lippincott's Magazine stealing is an old-fashioned method of getting what belongs to another. Society visits its severest penalties on those who are old-fashioned. Accordingly stealing is not only punishable (lots of things are punishable), but it is also punished by summary fine and imprisonment. Don't steal. There are better ways. See a lawyer.

There was a quick exchange of wit one day between Congressman Sharp of Ohio and Congressman James of Kentucky. Mr. Sharp was defining his political creed. He said: "I want protection for every industry until it is able to stand on its own feet." Like a flash his colleague retorted: "I'll go that far; I'll favor protecting industries until they can stand on their own feet, but I don't feel like continuing that protection until they stand upon everybody else's feet."

There will be no expenditures for roads and bridges from the "pork barrel" until the courts decide whether the law is constitutional. The worst feature about the bill is the fact that in many instances the money is spent under direction of members of the legislature, and this provides a fine opportunity to pave the way for re-election. In Red Lake county Senator Hanson and Representative Opsahl are to be the disbursing agents. Residents of the county would know better how to spend the money.

The position of a few republican newspapers, which are fighting Dean Olson of the agricultural school, appears ridiculous in the face of the fact that four years previous to Governor Johnson's election he was considered good enough and wise enough to serve as state superintendent, says the Fairmont Sentinel. He was retained in the same position by Gov. Johnson for four more years and then promoted to the agricultural school. The foolishly partisan editors act as though Mr. Olson lost all right and capacity to hold office as soon as Van Sant's administration ended and Johnson's commenced.

Governor John A. Johnson in about a month will start on a lecturing tour which will take him to the east, south and southwest, from Pennsylvania to Oklahoma. The tour includes about forty engagements in the principal cities in the sections mentioned for which the governor receives $200 a lecture. He has cancelled a long series of lecture engagements which he had on the Pacific coast. The governor would have cancelled all of his engagements had it not been for the fact that in many of the places where he was billed before his last election the managment of the lecture courses claimed they would be discredited if the engagements were not kept. The tour has a tendecy to bring the goverenor prominently before that section of the country in which he is now the least-known.

THE COURAGE OF HOPE.

When hope departs from man he is no longer a factor in the world's development, for all his faculties relax and he soon becomes a nonentity in the world's progress.

The man who sees nothing of cheer before him has lost the incentive to go forward, and to stand still is the first step in a backward movement.

What is true of an individual is true of a community of individuals and so we find cities rise and fall according to the spirit of the citizens.

It is the nature of optimism to hope, and for this reason the development of the optimistic spirit in a commmunity is to be greatly encouraged.

Hope is active, and the brighter it glows in a community the greater will be its development and the man or woman who helps shed its rays is a blessing to the community.

Radium Trust Busted.

Adrian Democrat: "I am glad to inform the readers of the Democrat that the price of radium has been reduced from $16,000,000 to $500,000 a pound. A Philadelphia chemist has just discovered a process by which this new and mysterious element can be produced at comparatively small cost. This has knocked the tentacles from the greedy, grasping radium octopus and brought the price down until we can have radium 3 times a day. As soon as this new boon to mankind was discovered the radium trust gobbled it all up and arbitrarily fixed the price at $16,000,000 a pound at a time. The children might pine and die for the lack of nutritious radium, but the octopus was obdurate. Not a pound of it could be obtained for less than $16,000,000 cash in hand! The trust was deaf to the plaintive pleadings of the puny babe and the fervent distressed and destitute mother. Thanks to the Philadelphia chemist the back of this marauding, ravenous buccaneer, this avaricious, implacable, rapacious monster, has been broken, and now the radium-hungry children of men are free from the exactions of this soulless, inhuman and predatory combine, and radium is worth only $500,000 a pound! This is why I play on the timbrel and harp and rejoice at the sound of the organ. This is why I sing with psaltery and an instrument with ten strings. Let us exult with the sound of the trumpet, with the psaltery and harp, with the timbrel and dance, with stringed instruments and high sounding cymbals! Please pass the jug of radium.

North Branch Review: The Aldrich clique in the senate claim that the tariff must be revised upward in order to produce sufficient revenue. Reduce the tariff and pass the income tax and there will still be revenue enough, and the best part of it is, the money will come from the people who are able to pay it.

Meanwhile the pee-wee chirp of the Democrats in the district may be heard claiming that they have found a Moses.

Stillwater Gazette: Probably the northern part of Minnesota has been getting the short end of the deal, but it hardly appears necessary for a special session of the legislature to be called in order to reapportion the state. There is no telling what might happen if the boys assembled in St. Paul another time this year. Let us play safe and not do anything reckless.

War on Bugs.

The State Entomologist has just issued Circular No. 17, showing how the house fly carries germs of typhoid, tuberculosis and other diseases, and what a menace it is in a dwelling house, both to the children and adults. The circular is well illustrated, and tells how to eliminate the fly, or reduce its dangers to the minimum. The same circular advises house-keepers how to keep their woolen and furs during the summer months away from the clothes moth, and other insects which attack these fabrics.

This circular will be mailed free of charge to citizens of Minnesota who request it. Requests should be addressed to the Entomological Division of the Experiment Station, St. Anthony Park, Minnesota.

Circulars on other household pests such as fleas, ants, bedbugs and cockroaches, will be issued later.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

The Man Who Sulks.

The world has little pity and few favors to be spent
For the man who is disgruntled and sits sulking in his tent;
If your ventures have not prospered do not idly curse your luck,
But get out and make the people wonder at your manly pluck.
Men will never come to coax you, if you hang back in despair,
To have courage and keep trying to put off the frown you wear;
They will not arrange new chances to replace the ones you lose
While you haunt a gloomy corner clinging to a case of blues.
They are foolishly self-chested who keep harping on their woes
After they have been defeated, thinking all men are their foes,
And the praise the world is willing to bestow is never meant
For the man who is disgruntled and sits sulking in his tent.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The noblest thing about a mother is that she isn't a father.

Most of a man's education is acquired by unteaching himself what he learned at school.

A man gets so nervous waiting to learn whether it's a boy or a girl that he can't be much worse if it turns out to be twins.

If there's no other way to have one a woman could pour kerosene oil over the doghouse, so as to be able to speak of it as the garage.

The thing that makes a woman proudest of her husband is for somebody to get him mixed up with another man of the same name who is famous.

ing which faces Selby Avenue tunnel; a structure of somewhat similar design corners on Fifth and Seventh Streets, and elsewhere there are a score or more of lesser buildings in various stages of erection.

Y. M. C. A. Building.

The building, however, which I really started to write about, and to which just now more than all the others public attention is being directed, is as yet only in contemplation. The site for it, now occupied by a modest dwelling, is opposite the Auditorium and next the Fire and Marine building. It has been offered to the women of St. Paul by that eminent septuagenarian D. S. B. Johnson, (whose admiration for the sex is attested by the recent announcemet of his engagement to one of their number,) on condition that they raise $300,000 for a Young Women's Christian Association building. They have taken him at his word, have organized, and are pushing a vigorous campaign for funds which will without question prove successful.

A Home for Homeless Girls.

I have not been informed what their ultimate designs are, but I anticipate that a large part of the building will be used for the accomodation of young ladies who came to the city to engage in some one or other of its many activities and who have no homes here. To provide them with a home where they will have congenial environment, can enjoy health-giving exercises and recreation, have access to reading rooms and may safely form congenial acquaintances, where they will be mothered when they are well and nursed when they are sick; where they will be subject to elevating influences and protected from the temptations incident to metropolitan life, and where for a moderate price they can secure rooms and have breakfast and dinner served, is not only beneficent but almost a necessary work. It will be a great thing for girls coming as strangers to the city to know that there is one place to go where they will not be treated as strangers; where they will be helped to secure employment and where they will find a home.

Something has already been done in St. Paul along this line but not in an adequate manner. The Salvation Army, while doing a beneficent work, does not profess to care for girls who are self-supporting or engaged in the more remunerative occupations; indeed is not suited to their needs; and the friendly homes are not well enough furnished to provide the accomodations which young ladies require. It will be different at the Young women's Christian association, hansomely housed and equipped for the larger work.

What the Labor Department Does for Girls.

Not that we should minimize the usefulness of these other agencies. Indeed the recent action of the Minnesota legislature in making provision for a woman's department in the labor bureau and the vigor and energy with which the department has begun to carry out the legislative design puts this state in the van of those who have sought to throw the shield of protection around working girls and is attracting widespread attention. "The other day," says Francis E. Staddish McCall, who conducts the woman department in the Twentieth Century Farmer, published at Omaha, "a man who, in the office of the deputy labor commissioner of one of the middle western states, knows a great deal about the girls who come to the city to work, called my attention to the provision made by the State of Minnesota for women and girls who work in the factories and the stores and other places in the state." She then goes on to describe what that provision is and the steps taken by the labor department to make it effectve, and urges the framers' wives of Nebraska to use their influence to make that state's labor department conform to Minnesota in respect to the protection it throws around working girls.

Reform in Administration.

The reforms brought about in this and other departments of the government of the state under the a Democratic administration have no doubt had much to do with the readiness with which the people have reconciled themselves to the continuation of the Johnson administration which, taking it by and large, apart altogether from the governor's personality, is unquestionably the most successful the state ever had. People are beginning to realize that the party Shibbaleth is no mystery worker and that the principal use to which it has been put in the past is to shield incompetency and cover up corruption. What they really want is a business administration, capable, economical and responsive to their needs, and a suspicion is creeping into the minds even of those who are most loyal that it is vain to look for this from those who now both in state and national affairs direct the activities of the Republican party. The action of Republican leaders in Congress has done much to cause this feeling of dissatisfaction and unrest which may later develop into open revolt.

The Influences at Work.

In this state the Republican party has had an inner history. While its representatives in Congress and its organs in political campaign have always, when the test came, aligned themselves with the machine, there have been among them those who, when they forgot party discipline, have been the advance guard of reform. Take the tariff for instance. Republican leaders of influence from the earliest times have urged the cause of the plain people. Gordon E. Cole began thirty years ago the protest against Chinese wall protection. Knute Nelson, although under the stress of party discipline, he gave the McKinley dogma his support, voted before that for the Mills bill and argued for revision downward. Wheelock of the Pioneer Press, except in the heat of a campaign, consistently conducted a course of instruction in tariff reform. The Minneapolis Journal under McLean helped to educate the people of the state that infant industries, instead of being the wards of the nation, were becoming its masters. Scarcely a Republican paper in the state but has inveighed against the iniquity of the lumber tariff, responsibility for which in the last campaign came so near to being Tawney's undoing. What wonder then that the people should at last awaken to the fact that in Congress their leaders no longer represent them? What wonder if the party ties by long srtaining should threaten to break and those accustomed to observe the course of political events should conclude that they have warrant for believing that the party is ripe for revolt and when the revolt comes it may sweep from power those who hold office merely on the strength of party nominations. When the day comes that party ties no longer bind and it may not be far away, and men are elected on their merits, we are liable to see the retirement of some who now wobble around in bigger men's shoes.

The Leaders of the People.

I wonder if it has occurred to my readers who the men are who today inspire public confidence, and are looked upon as representing the movement for a more representative government. Does any man in this respect compare in leadership, in political sagacity, in disinterested public service, in every element that goes to inspire public confidences to Governor Johnson? What of John Lind, the greatest of Minnesotans? Then there is Lawler who has demonstarted even to the Cardinal that no man can fit a collar to his neck; the O'Briens eminent at the bar, loyal to the people and efficient as administrators; the Kanes, the Donnellys, Hammond who for two successive terms has been chosen to represent the people of the second district; Sageng of Ottertail, Moonan of Waseca, Cashman of Steele and others scarcely less eminent. I might name. Is it strange if, while the Republican party is rent by faction and torn by dissension, the people would show a inclination to turn from leaders either seeking personal aggrandisement or under suspicion of corporate control to independent men like these when officials who have attained full stature are wanted to serve them honestly and disinterestedly? Is it strange that when Congress is demonstrating that the people's interests are not considered, that the advisability of a new deal all around be considered?

The Republican Puzzle.

However, these considerations do not prevent the Republicans from laying their plans, and just now a good deal of subterranean activity and some which no care is taken to cover up, is noted. This is on the assumption that Governor Johnson will not be a candidate in 1910 which is quite assured. I am violating no confidence when I say that next year his position will be so made plain that no Democratic convention would think of nominating him. Whether it will be Dunn, whom the bee has badly stung, or Young, or Heatwole, or Eberhart, or Schmahl, or another, who knows? Each loses no proper opportunity to keep himself before the people. Eberhart with perhaps up to the present time the greater success, as being from several points of view the logical candidate of the Republican party, certainly epitomizing in himself such claims as the last Republican legislature [illegible]

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else. It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had. For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. S.S.S. FOR BAD BLOOD

The most important part of the human system is the blood. Every muscle, nerve, tissue, bone and sinew is dependent on this vital fluid for nourishment and strength necessary to maintain them in health and enable each to perform the different duties nature requires. Even the heart, the very "engine" of life, receives its vigor and motive power from the blood. Since so much is dependent on this vital fluid it can very readily be seen how necessary it is to have it pure and uncontaminated if we would enjoy the blessing of good health. Bad blood is responsible for most of the ailments of mankind; when from any cause it becomes infected with impurities, humors or poisons disease in some form is sure to follow. Muddy, sallow complexions, eruptions, pimples, etc., show that the blood is infected with unhealthy humors which have changed it from a pure, fresh stream to a sour, acid fluid, which forces out its impurities through the pores and glands of the skin. A very common evidence of bad blood is sores or ulcers, from a very insignificant bruise or even scratch or abrasion. If the blood was pure and healthy the place would heal at once, but being loaded with impurities, which are discharged into the wound, irritation and inflammation are set up and the sore continues. Bad blood is also responsible for Anaemia, Boils, Malaria, etc.; the weak, polluted circulation cannot furnish the nourishment and strength required to sustain the body, and a general run-down condition of health results. S. S. S. is nature's blood purifier and tonic, made entirely of healing, cleansing roots and herbs. It goes down into the circulation and removes every particle of impurity, humor or poison that may be there, restores lost vitality, and steadily tones up the entire system. It adds to the blood the healthful properties it is in need of, and in every way assists in the cure of disease. S. S. S. neutralizes any excess of acid in the blood, making it fresh and pure, and permanently cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, and all other skin diseases and eruptions. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Malaria, and all other diseases or disorders arising from bad blood. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired free to all who write.

Your S. S. S., in my opinion, is as good a medicine as can be had; it simply cannot be improved upon as a remedy to purify and enrich the blood and to invigorate and tone up the system. This spring my blood was bad and I was run down in health, and having seen your medicine highly advertised I commenced its use. To-day my blood is in fine condition and my general health is of the best. Am filling position as fireman for a large concern here, and if I was not in good physical condition it would be impossible for me to fill the place. Your S.S.S. has been of great service to me and I do not hesitate to give it the credit it deserves.

It is silver plated, very pretty and positively prevents all dripping of tea or coffee. The doctor sends it with his new free book on "Health Coffee" simply to introduce this clever substitute for real coffee. Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee is gaining its great popularity because of, first, its exquisite taste and flavor; second, its absolute healthfulness; third, its economy—1½ pound 25c; fourth, its convenience. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says Dr. Shoop. Try it at your grocer's, for a pleasant surprise. Sold by all grocers.

If sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a stomach nerve, or it may have strength and support to the heart or kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the heart or kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see. Sold by all dealers.

Increased Train Service

Effective May 28, 1909, the Northern Pacific Railway augmented its passenger train service by the establishment of new trains not alone between eastern and western terminals, but locally on main lines and branches in the several states which it serves.

It has thus placed in closer touch than ever the different sections, the various cities and towns, the thriving communities, which for twenty-six years the Northern Pacific has aided and fostered in growth and progress.

This increased efficiency of service means much to the territory tributary to the Northern Pacific Railway.

Additional lines projected or actually under construction will still further increase the scope of Northern Pacific co-operation in the development of the Northwest in the course of the next year or two.

The present through service comprises

Four Daily Electric-lighted Transcontinental Trains

SHOW AT GRAND FORKS

Barnum and Bailey to Exhibit There on Monday, June 28.

The Barnum & Bailey greatest show on earth is to visit Grand Forks on Monday, June 6. Never since the beginning of time has an musement enterprise so tremendous in size been organizeed as this one. Its magnitude is almost beyond belief. All America, together with every foreign country, has been scoured from end to end by agents of this big show in search of novelties and the result is a performance brim full of sensational acts new to the circus world. In the big Barnum & Bailey show are nearly 400 arenic stars, most of whom are seen now for the first time. A new sensation will be seen at every performance in "JUPITER, the baloon horse." This remarkable animal with its fearless rider ascends to the dome of the circus tent in a baloon and descends to the ground in a shower of fire works. Nearly 1000 animal wonders are to be found in the big 108 cage menagerie. 8 herds of elephants including one herd that acturally play musical instruments in time and tune A group of giant giraffes, monster trained hippopotamus only living bihorned rhinoceros and hundreds of other strange beasts. Barnum & Bailey's big, new, free street parade is the most gorgeous processional display ever attempted in the history of circus business. Its tremendous size and wonderful length can only be believed in the actual seeing. It is natural to expect this big circus to lead all others in quality and quantity of its street spectacle as well as in other departments of the big show., yet never in its splendid history of nearly half a century has it displayed such extravagance as is shown this year.

DAN PATCH WILL GO

Will Try to Lower World's Record at North Dakota Fair.

Every person who has never had the opportunity to see Dan Patch, the world's most famous harness horse, in one of his exhibitions against time, will be pleased to hear that Dan Patch is to be seen at Grand Forks. Furthermore, this famous horse will not come alone, but will be accompanied by Minor Heir, 1:59½, who is easily the second horse of importance in the country today, and both will be seen and matched in exhibitions at the North Dakota state fair, to be held at Grand Forks July 20-24 inclusive. The appearance at Grand Forks will be the first appearance of these two horses togther, and will be the only exhibition they will make in the norhwest this year, except at the Minnesota state fair.

Mr. Savage, of Minneapolis, owner of these two horses, is very much intersted in their coming appearance in Garnd Forks during the state fair, and assures interesting exhibitions. Wherever these horsees have been shown all over the United States, they have attracted record-breaking crowds, and ineach and every instance eveybody has been more than pleased with their individual exhibition.

Dan Patch is an old campaigner, and in the last five years has gradually worked his time down a few seconds every year until he now stands king of world's harness horses, with a record of 1:55.

Minnor Heir has enjoyed a short but spectacular career. He entered the game as a green horse last year, and before the season had closed the wonderful little pacer had acquired a mark of 1:59½. Mr. Savage, who has owned Dan Patch for several years, then bought Minor Heir, and the two will show in the future.

The accident was particularly unfortunate for Mr. Jackson as he was just starting here in the barber business. He has secured the services of Ducan Macalester of Badger, who will run the barber shop. Arthur Hall went up to Greenbush on Monday and made arrangements for Mrs. Jackson, who is an invalid, and the children to move here, and they arrived Thursday and are now located in the room in the rear the barber shop.—Spectator.

ATLANTIC CITY PUTS BAN ON CAMERA FIEND

No More Snapshots at Fair Beauties of the Beach—Law Rushes to Their Aid.

Atlantic City has passed a law to stop exposures on the beach. Not exposures of those feminine charms that constitute such a lure of the famous watering resort—oh, dear no!—but exposure of the sensitive plates of cameras aimed with photographic purpose.

In the future the provision of this law will make it possible for the fair mermaid to stroll the beach in comfort and happiness, sereno in the thought that the man who strives to take a picture of her without permission is likely to be arrested, fined a couple of hundred dollars, and default in payment of it be sent to jail for three months, there in the dark room of bondage vile to repent his temerity.

Councilman Bolte is the hero who has thus drawn the veil over the charms of the fair bather, and photographs like those which accompany this article will soon become rarer than the extinct great auk.

Councils did not pass the law without some conflict.

Atlantic City is ever in the throes of a division. The moralists always find a certain opposition from those practical men of business who believe that the greatest charm of the City-by-the-Sea is the good natured freedom that has ever been permitted, and which it must be admitted has rarely developed into license.

In the boardwalk galleries Mi Lady can be photographed to her heart's content.

A beautiful camera fiend tempter.

Crusade Is a Novelty.

One councilman in fact even went so far as to say that he did not believe that there ever was one well authenticated case of a woman objecting to having her picture taken.

He was quickly contradicted by the gallant author of the bill, and there were others who declined to take sides, but urged that the question was a purely ethical one far beyond the powers of mere man to deal with.

Councilman Bolte had ample and efficient support in his crusade against the active and pestiferous beach protographers. In fact, he carried with him a collection of letters written to him by women and girls, who resented being made the mark for the cameras of men whom they did not know.

It was something of a novelty this crusade, for in years past these hunters of feminine beauty had been granted unlimited sway on the beach, and none thought to interfere with their work in stalking the stately blondes and handsome brunettes who appear on the beach to see and be seen, to do everything but bathe in fact at the fashionable bathing hour.

Most of these suits in which the superb Venuses have been pictured never had been wet, or at least not wet above the slender ankles of their owners, and even to the man who never clicked the shutter of a camera it is not to be denied that in the harvest of beauty there was a whole lot worthy of photographing.

Question of Bathing Suits.

The whole controversy seems to hinge on the permanence of a woman's pride in her appearance in a bathing suit.

Most women think they look well in this open work style of garb. If she is thin she pities those who carry a surplus of averdupois, and thinks with contentment of how much more thin she looks. If nature has been generous in the matter of weight then she pities the "skinny" girl, who is all bones and presents never the hint of a curve.

But though a woman may be for the time proud of how she looks in a bathing suit, it does not follow that she wants sent down to posterity a permanent record of how she appeared. There are styles in bathing suits as well as in every other kind of garb, and the effect that may be very chic one year is hopelessly out of fashion the next. If the photograph is her own, or is in the possession of some friend it can be destroyed. But if it is in the hands of a stranger it remains a permanent libel on her good looks.

Moreover when a picture is taken without permission, the subject does not get the proper chance to "look her prettiest."

There is even the chance that she may be the rare exception who goes bathing to actually get into the water, and that the waves may have taken the curl out of her hair and deranged her toilette generally, just at the moment that the camera does its worst.

These are all matters of grave moment in the summer life of the most popular of American seacoast resorts, and Councilman Bolte framed his bill with the idea of taking even a shadow of care from the fair visitor who is herself the greatest drawing card that Atlantic City could possibly have.

Must Ask Permission.

Therefore, according to his new bill, the man who would take a picture of one of the bathing queens must first go to her, and make known his desire. He must get an unmistakable permission. Then he can go ahead and do his worst. But let him fire without asking, and she has only to call to her aid one of the numerous beach policeman, and it is a quick trip to the jug for the offender.

This will undoubtedly make a difference in the number of photographs that will come out of Atlantic City during the season just beginning. It is known that there were not many places where pictures of celebrities could beso readily obtained. Noted society leaders who, at Newport, for instance, would be absolutely unapproachable, yielded to the popular tone of Atlantic City, and were less careful about chasing the photographer who camped in their trail.

On the business street of the town a whole line-up of photographic supply houses and dark rooms told how constantly the snapshooter was on the job, and a number of New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Washington newspapers kept staff photographers constantly on the scene to land the right kind of summer beauty pictures for their pages.

A camera fiend going into water to get them.

Bolte Law Steps In.

This activity is rudely interrupted by the Bolte law, which takes no account of newspapers, gives no special privileges, makes no distinctions between the photographer who is working for a living and the amateur who has only in mind the artistic delight of getting a photograph of a woman he particularly admires.

Many of these amateurs have noted collections.

In one of the letters which Councilman Bolte received from women protesting against the practice was one which told of a young man who had the walls of his room completely covered with photographs of beauties he had snapped on the beach in the course of three seasons of industrious effort, and that at the cost of considerable trouble he had identified them all, and labeled each with the name of the fair original. The girl who protested was one of those on the wall, and she somewhat plaintively wrote that she had no desire to be one of the ornaments for the room of this man, or any other.

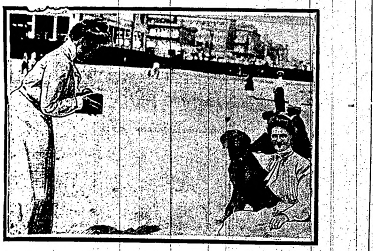
It is said that the photographic craze resulted in many other kinds of annoyances for the fair bathers. For instance, it often showed them with people in a manner that led to embarrassments. What husband, for example, who was toiling in the city, while his wife spent the summer at the shore, was pleased to see her picture in the picture in his home newspaper, and find by her side as escort, some old admirer of the days before they were married.

Husbands Caught in Net.

It has even happened that husbands have been caught in the net of a snapshooter. While in pursuit of some especially attractive specimen of feminine beauty, when he is forced to work quickly and often surreptitiously, the newspaper photographer could not be particular about who else might get in the picture, and therefore many a fond wife at home, who thought her husband in Chicago or New York on a business trip, has been astounded to find him dancing attendance on some handsome queen of the beach.

Maybe a fellow feeling for the misfortunes of a man so placed helped to bring about the big majority by which the bill passed Atlantic City's councils, for it must be more than an accident that every married man voted for the bill.

No longer will the camera man make his way boldly up and down the beach in search of whom he may take a shot at. A camera is now contraband of war, and its operator an object of suspicion. In the future the enthusiast in search of pictures of feminine beauty unadorned can make his trip to the South Sea islands where there are no society papers, and authorities are not so strict.



A seemingly innocent pleasure but a dangerous pastime now at Atlantic.

DANGERS OF ALPINE TUNNEL CONSTRUCTION

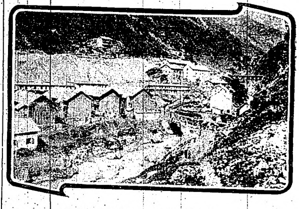
Avalanches, Explosions, Rivers Falling Through Roof and Engulfing Workmen, Among the Difficulties.

Those engineering difficulties whose conquering seemed such a marvelous feature of the boring of the Simplon tunnel are made to look insignificant by the obstacles that are being encountered in running from the Simplon a spur that will connect with Berne and open a convenient means of entering Switzerland.

The toll of life in boring this spur, which takes the road through the rocky Lotschberg, has been appalling. Avalanches have arisen to bury workmen in their ruins, rivers have opened holes and fallen into the tunnel, drowning those at work there. Minor accidents have daily added to the number of the killed and wounded, and at the present time nothing more than the resolve of those in charge of the operation is keeping them to their gigantic task.

The perforation of the Lotschberg was an afterthought of the great Simplon operation. After the tunnel was opened it was seen that if it could be put in touch with Berne, a great help would have been afforded to the region of that town.

At first sight the project did not seem to be one of staggering difficulties, especially with the success of the Simplon tunnel in mind. The Simplon tunnel is twelve and a half miles long. St. Gothard is nine and three-quarter miles, Mount Denis seven and a half miles. The latter is about the length required for the spur from the Simplon to Berne.



Workmen's Village at Mouth of Tunnel.

Avalanche Is First Blow.

It was decided to make use of the line that detaches itself from the Berne-Interlaken line at the station of Spiez, on the Thun-lake and continue it to Frutigen. From there the new line passes on the right of the Engstilegmbach, crossing in a diagonal direction the Kundergrund Valley, and continuing down to Bunderbach.

Further it goes through the gallery of Mittholz, and comes out on the high plain of Kraudersteg.

The part that presented the trouble was when the engineers sought to tunnel through the Lotschberg the seven mile piercement.

Compressed Air Engines Used in the Tunnel.

The expectation of those in charge of the work had been to see it completed by 1911, thereby making between Berne and the Simplon tunnel the ideal entrace to Switzerland.

The inauguration of the work justified their optimism. From the first day, October 15, 1906, until May, 1908, not a single serious interruption was encountered, everything going along in most perfect shape.

The first blow to the prospects came in the form of an avalanche in the closing days of May.

There was no warning of its arrival. The mysterious forces of nature that convulsed to bring death to thirty workmen gave no advance indication, but suddenly near Groppenstein there came a crash and uproar, and when rescue parties began their investigations they found not only dead and maimed bodies on all sdes, but they found the works almost completely ruined, and a fresh start was necessary.

Explosion Comes Next.

Only two months later, July 23, 1908, came the next visitation. The boring had gone to the distance of more than two miles when an explosion occurred.

One of its terrible results was that a great hole was torn in the roof of the operation, a gaping aperture seventy yards square through which fell the waters of the river, completely engulfing the whole operation and drowning sixty workmen.

So terrible was the damage wrought that it was decided to be absolutely out of question to go further at this point, and the scene of the operation had to be moved over from the north mouth to the south mouth, near Goppenstein. Not less than one year's time was lost by this crash, and now the workmen have been intimidated to a point where they will only go ahead slowly for fear of encountering similar experiences at other points.

It is this fear of the unexpected that makes an operation of this kind so difficult. It is never possible to tell what malign force of nature may next be encountered.

All such work has to be done by hydraulic pressure, this alone meaning the introduction of a large volume of water. In addition there is often a natural infiltration of 750 gallons a minute, and over and above this streams are likely to be encountered whih will make the total of water from two to three thousand gallons of water per minute.

In building tunnels in this Swiss section it has been the experience often to encounter hot springs, and these are a source of great concern to the engineers, for they often mean to encounter some six hundred gallons of water per minute, which is throwing off a heat of anywhere from 104 to 117 degrees Fahrenheit.

Man to Fit Every Crisis.

At any instance, at the most unexpected time, there are likely to burst into the cuttings springs of such enormous power and of such heat that the entire mountain seems to be a heated liquid mass. It is nearly impossible for the workmen to go ahead with their work. But to abandon it is to lose all that the incorporators have put in, and in the crisis there is nearly always some adroit engineer to rise to the occasion with some suggestion to save a proposition that has become well nigh helpless.

The tunnel which is being taken through the Lotschberg under conditions of such extreme peril follows in general outline the Simplon. Like the greater structure it is egg-shaped about six yards high and four and one-half broad.

There is a great deal of sentiment about the determination to put through the Berne spur at any cost, for Switzerland deserves well of those who have been installing the great system of tunnels that is expected to do so much for the commerce of France.

It must be remembered that at the inception of the Simplon itunne French enthusiasm was only moderate. The misfortunes that attended the unfortunate effort of Ferdinand de Lesseps to duplicate on Panama his successful canal at Suez cost French investors untold sums of money, and it was generally thought that the Simplon tunnel going under the pass which Napoleon carried over the Alps and which made him famous would prove chimerical, and never go to completion.

But the making of the St. Gothard piercement forced a change in the French attitude.

Diverted Immense Traffic.

That route, it is figured, diverted eight million dollars worth of traffic every year from the St. Cenis route. Some of this the new tunnel, the Simplon, is undoubtedly restoring.

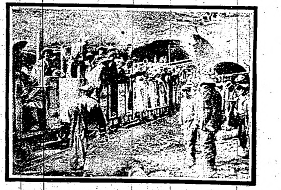
But when France at the beginning of the project hesitated, Switzerland showed every confidence and every eagerness to help, and it must not be forgotten that among those who took a leading part in the work were many Swiss engineers and hundreds of workmen.

When the two parts of the tunnel were finally brought together, and the plans of the engineers were vindicated in the fact that they fitted almost to a hair breadth it was workmen who had started from Switzerland on the one hand and Italy on the other who greeted each other, and cheered at the triumphal completion of their work.

In respect to Swiss imports Genoa, Marseilles and Switzerland will still further benefit when the Berne spur is at last completed.

The Berne spur will make the fifth Alpine tunnel, and in its construction all that has been learned of the art of tunnel building by the previous experiments being utilized. In fact without the knowledge that has been gained it would not have been possible to go ahead in the face of all the obstacles that have been encountered.

Not until 1912 or 1913 will the work be completed, but the great home of Republicanism in Europe will be a permanent gainer by one of the most noted of engineering triumphs.



Train of Workman in the Tunnel.

In the Puppy Class.

"And now," asked the teacher at the end of the church history lesson, "what is a dogma?". Up shot little Willie's hand. He was right at the bottom of the class, as usual, but nobody could say he was not a trier at all the time. "Yes. Our spaniel."

BATTLE WITH WILD SWAN

Great Fowl Struck Ship's Cabin and Gave Two Sailors Hard Fight.

While coming up the bay to Baltimore Friday night the steamer Avalon ran into a flock of wild swans off Thomas Point and a swan was captured by the lookout, W. T. Whitely, who was on the forward deck, after a thrilling experience.

The steamer was running at a lively clip when Whitely heard a fluttering and a few minutes later saw a flock of swans directly in front of the boat. They circled aronud a few times, then lit in the water on the port side. He notified First Officer Corkran, who turned on the searchlight. That seemed to frighten them and they all arose from the water. There appeared to be about a hundred of them, and all flew over the pilothouse except one which struck the port side of the steamer with a crash. A passenger in stateroom 45, which was damaged, thought there had been a collision and got out of bed.

"When I saw the swan strike the boat I rushed up to it, expecting to pick it up with ease," said Whiteley, speaking of his experience. "To my surprise the thing turned on me and gave me several blows with its wings which nearly knocked me down. Then I grabbed at it again, only to be pecked with its big bill, making my hands bleed.

"At first I did not know what kind of bird it was, but I was determined to capture it. The wings beat me back, but I kept up the battle until Mr. Corkran arrived, and we tied the bird. Even after pinioning its wings it was hard to hold it, as its strength was great. We finally got a piece of rope and tied its legs together. Later a coop was made and we placed the bird in it."

Shortly after the steamer docked at Light street the swan was sent to the office of Assistant General Manager A. H. Seth of the company. The office force was attracted by the big bird, and when it was measured it was found to be eighty-nine inches from tip to tip of its wings, and it stood fifty-five inches high. Mr. Seth presented the bird to the zoo at Druid Hill Park.

A Family Affair.

"Cordelia," ordered the teacher, "throw that gum in the waste basket!"

The pupil's face grew scarlet, but she did not stir.

"If you do not put that gum in the waste basket immediately I will send you out of the room," said the teacher, gravely.

The girl walked reluctantly to the desk. "I can't, teacher," she confessed; "it's ma's gum an 'she'll lick me if I come home without it."

Rescued a Shipwrecked Cat.

The salvage steamer Enterprise, which put into Dover yesterday from the wrecked liner Mahratta on the Goodwins, had on board a black cat which was rescued eleven days after the liner was abandoned.

It was in a terribly emaciated condition when discovered by the salvage men, having had nothing to eat or drink during that period, and it was very wild ventually Diver G. Fabian succeeded in capturing it, and it is being made a pet of on the Enterprise.

Impending Strife.

"I want to buy a larinet," said the man with a steely look in his eye.

"Ah," said the dealer in musical wares, "here is a perfect instrument, absolutely true in tone."

"I don't want it. I want one that'll produce nothing but blue notes. There's a man next door who is studying the trombone. I'm going to play the clarinet in self-defense."

When money talks is it the coign of vantage?

Cure for Toothache.

A London physician at a meeting of a medical society stated that extraction of teeth was unnecessary. He was enabled to cure the most desperate case of toothache, he said, unless the case was connected with rheumatism, by the application of the following remedy to the diseased tooth: Alum, reduced to an impalpable powder, two drachms; nitrous spirits of ether, seven drachms; mix and apply to tooth.

On Unknown Territory.

"Say, whose feet 'er you steppin' on?" growled the man in the crowded car.

"Really, I don't know," replied the person addressed, "but I am willing to oblige even a stranger."

Thereupon he stepped off.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from a female weakness and disease, and I could not stand more than a minute at a time. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. One day I was reading how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it. Before I had taken one bottle I was better, and now I am completely cured."—LENA V. HENRY, Route No. 3, Adrian, Ga.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

CHURCH IN A WINDMILL.

Cleared of Rats, It Does Very Well at a Rent of 25 Cents a Year.

Twelve years ago, when the villagers living off the borders of Reigate Heath, Surrey, England, had no place of worship nearer than the parish church, a service was held in a school room close by and was so well attended that the authorities looked around for a suitable permanent building.

The erection of a church was out of the question, but there stood on the heath the remains of an old mill, a picturesque feature in a beautiful bit of landscape. Inspection showed that once the rats were got rid of a comparatively small outlay would furnish and render the mill fit for public worship, and soon it was opened as the Chapel of the Holy Cross.

The interior of the chapel arouses interest, says the Wide World Magazine. Four buttresses, four feet thick by six feet in height, serve as rests for two massive beams which cross each other in the center and support an upright shaft cracked with age and strongly bound with iron bands. The buttresses make four natural alcoves. The entrance door stands in one, and immediately opposite is the altar; the harmonium is placed in a third, and the bell ringer sits close beside it and rings his bell; the fourth is occupied by the congregation. The rent of this novel church is only 25 cents a year.

Unconscious Innocence.

"My ancestors came over in the Mayflower," said the haughty lady.

"Oh, yes," rejoined Mrs. Cumrox, with interest. "Mine didn't. None of my family cared for those big excursions."

WESTON, Ocean-to-Ocean Walker, Said recently: "When you feel down and out, feel there is no use living, just take your bad thoughts with you and walk them off. Before you have walked a mile things will look rosier. Just try it." Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston has said, "It has real merit." It cures tired, aching feet while you walk. 30,000 testimonials. Order a 25c package to-day of any Druggist and be ready to forget you have feet. A trial package of ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE sent FREE. TORE HIS SKIN OFF

In Shreds—Itching Was Intense—Sleep Was Often Impossible.

Cured by Cuticura in Three Weeks.

"At first an eruption of small pustules commenced on my hands. These spread later to other parts of my body, and the itching at times was intense, so much so that I literally tore the skin off in shreds in seeking relief. The awful itching interfered with my work considerably, and also kept me awake nights. I tried several doctors and used a number of different ointments and lotions but received practically no benefit. Finally I settled down to the use of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, with the result that in a few days all itching had ceased and in about three weeks' time all traces of my eruption had disappeared. I have had no trouble of this kind since. H. A. Krutskoff, 5714 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., November 18 and 28, 1907."

NOISY AFRICAN NATIVES.

Laughter Seldom Heard in the Uproar—Sounds of Tomtoms and Big Shells.

Among the African natives there can be nothing done without noise, according to William B. Clarke of Pittsburg, Pa., who has traveled extensively in Africa.

"It is simply appalling, the rush, the roar, the chatter and the bustle, like Bedlam let loose," Mr. Clark said. "The principal object of conversation is said to be money, and the hubbub, bawling and uproar in all sorts of tones from shrill and screaming to gruff and growling, accompanied by all sorts of gesticulations with tongue, head and feet, are beyond description.

"It is rather odd, but laughter is almost never heard in this uproar; and, as for whistling, it is a lost art. If there are any quarrels they are not to be heard in public, although when a company of natives get to carry on an animated conversation it appears to the observer as if the next act would be a melee.

"In addition to these natural sounds there are others of an artificial character that are equally familiar to the traveler. Such is the noise of the drums called tomtoms, which are beaten on every occasion, and a kind of pipe about eighteen inches long, with holes like those of a flute, and breathed through in a way that produces a variety of notes of a wild, discordant character. A frightful noise is made by the kaffa men blowing on a big shell."

WOMAN'S REALM

MAKING IDEAL HOME

MAIN THING TO AVOID IS OVER-FURNISHING.

Simple and Appropriate Furniture, Decorations and Bric-a-Brac Better Than Costly Litter So Many Think Necessary.

Aim at elegant simplicity. Do not make the mistake of thinking simplicity means cheapness; it is usually a costly luxury, but one that pays.

Avoid litter, gimcracks and overcrowding. Learn to appreciate space as a part of the furnishing. Many women only regard it as something to be filled, no matter with what.

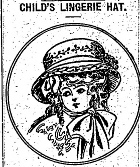
To hide the carpet with furniture, the walls with pictures, sofas and chairs with pillows and mantels and tables with ornaments, regardless of taste or suitability, is not furnishing a home; it is stocking a junk heap.

Apart from the inartisticness of the overloaded house, the discomforts of keeping it clean makes it anything but liveable. Why should a woman wish to pass her days dusting useless ornaments that detract rather than add to the beauty and wholesomeness of your home?

Certain houses are furnished with a simplicity that is studied almost to the point of ostentatiousness and artificiality; but better that than vulgar crowding.

What the average householder needs to learn is that a beautiful home consists of not how much you can put into a house, nor yet in how little, but in having an eye for proportion, unerring taste as to what is in keeping and the nerve to throw away your most precious possession if it disturbs the harmony of your house beautiful.

CHILD'S LINGERIE HAT.

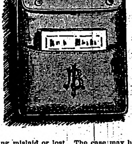


A most bewitchingly pretty lingerie hat for a small tot is made of a fine quality of embroidered linen. The crown is of fashionable size, large and of an even roundness, and the brim droops prettily over the hair and face. The finishing touch is given by the large, soft ties of sheerest lawn, which are tied in a loose bow under the chin a little to the left.

MEANS COMFORT ON THE CAR.

Convenience Especially Designed for Traveler on Journey of Some Length.

The case for a cushion, of which we give a sketch, is designed for the traveler. On each side a roomy pocket is arranged in which newspapers and other little things, essential at the time of taking a railway journey, may be carried, and be ready to hand when required, without the fear of their being mislaid or lost.



The case may be made in art linen or, perhaps, dark green art serge and lined with soft silk. Firmly stitched on to the top of the flap is a small handle made of the same material that has been used for the case, and stiffened with a thin piece of cardboard, by which the carrier can be held.

Should it be intended to carry anything valuable in the pocket, such as a purse or notes for instance, then it is a good plan, and very easily done, to fit flaps above each pocket, that can be buttoned on to the lower part and so secure the contents from the possibility of falling out.

CROSS-BAR MUSLIN POPULAR

Many Good Reasons Why Material Is Preferred Above Others for the Lingerie.

There is a late fad for cross-bar muslin—and not for kitchen curtains, sewing aprons or plain shirtwaists, either, but for the corset cover-pantaloon combination garment. It is exceedingly fine in quality, though not a dimity; called "muslin," it is really a plaid nainsook. It is an English custom to use it for men's underwear, and it is but a recent entry into the field of woman's wear—probably wedged in there for its durability. Sheer material with a heavy thread in the weave wears twice as long—why shouldn't it? And there are makers of lingerie who sing its praises on the score of its obligingly trimming itself. Certain it is that any figured or flowercrede material will pass muster with less embroidery on it than plain muslin, yet the design of embroidery wandering over the plaid is a very Frenchy touch, and not to be talked down.

Needle and Thread Always Ready.

There is no truer saying than "a stitch in time saves nine," and the woman who appreciates this knows that a rip in a glove, a tear in a waist, or any little bit of mending that will only take a minute or two to do if it is done when the need first appears, will probably take half an hour or more if it is left for a day or two.

Every woman would do well to run a piece of baby ribbon through a spool of white and a spool of black thread and then tie the ends of the ribbon together and hang the spools up somewhere near her dresser. A needle should be threaded on the end of each color of thread and then stuck in the ribbon. There will always be a threaded needle ready for instant use. The needle should be threaded after using it each time.

The Toilet Table

A little good toilet water or cologne poured into a bath is delightful in its effects.

If your heart is weak do not indulge in showers, and be careful to temper the water, no matter how strong the heart.

An excellent household remedy for burns is pure vaseline or olive oil. The great thing is to exclude the air and dirt from the burned surface, and this the oil will do.

To take disagreeable medicine eat one or two cloves or hold ice in the mouth until the tongue is chilled, and the medicine will be less disagreeable. Medicines that discolor the teeth may be taken through soda straws.

Drinking with meals greatly dilutes the saliva, making mastication all the more difficult; besides, in this way, the contents are easily softened and washed down before being properly chewed. The painfully distended stomach, that feeling of being bloated and uncomfortably "full" arises in most cases from drinking with meals and is again caused by gas.

Wherever there is an inconvenient hollow a gentle massage with cocoa butter will soon fill it up, and it is the purest and best of skin food.

Cut Flowers with Knife.

It is an excellent plan to cut the stems of flowers with a sharp knife rather than with the scissors. Scissors compress the stems and so close some of the tiny pores to the life-giving water.

Beautiful Rose.

Joyeuse is the name given to one of the most beautiful of the rose pinks seen this spring.

QUEER TASTE IN ORNAMENTS.

Bracelets and Necklaces Are Now Designed to Represent Snakes and Spiders.

It seems as if the women were overcoming some of their little cherished fears and superstitions, or, perhaps, they are only being martyrs to fashion and assuming their brave appearance, for we shall see them wearing, with most perfect nonchalance, bracelets of round gold woven wire in exact imitation of a snake that coils about the arm most fearfully; and some even wear them about the neck!

Then there are necklaces of the most delicate wire representing spider webs, with a great ugly black silver spider with glittering eyes and a thousand legs; and all sorts of creepy bugs caught in his web. Beetles crawl at random, or at least, they seem to, as bracelets, brooches, hat pins and rings, and a darning needle perches airily on the collar, threatening at any minute to sew one's mouth up. [illegible] snakes, with scaly, spangled bodies and uplifted heads, terrifying in their realness, twine about the crowns of hats. In calm indifference to all one's ever heard about ill luck following peacock feathers, are not they flaunted from the most fashionable chapeaux, and used in embroidery on the loveliest of chiffon gowns, and the colors of the peacock lead the grand march of style.

It will only take some ingenuous manufacturer to make a gunmetal mouse for a necklace pendant to break the spell and call forth the natural and truly feminine scream that will be such a relief to the pent-up feelings.

Selecting Needles.

An embroiderer whose work is in great demand says the reason why the work of many careful needlewomen is unsatisfactory is the lack of care in the selection of a needle. For fine work a No. 10 or 12 needle should be used. Otherwise the stitches can not be placed sufficiently close together to give the smooth finish so much sought.

FROM BRITISH OAK

WAS MADE THE FURNITURE IN NEW JERSEY ROOM.

Feature of Memorial Continental Hall That Delights the Patriotic Visitor—Wood Formerly Part of Royal Frigate Augusta.

There is one feature of Memorial Continental hall which delights the visitors and brings to mind one of those far-away victories which the American patriots scored against King George and his men. The feature is "the New Jersey room," furnished by the New Jersey chapters of the D. A. R., and the wood from which the chairs, wainscoating, beams and other gifts have been carved is taken from the British frigate Augusta, which ran aground October 23, 1777, while fighting a swarm of American galleys and floating batteries on the Delaware. Since then the frigate has rested ignobly upon New Jersey sand, a mecca for tourists and a mine for the memento seeker.

The Augusta was of 1,450 tons burden, carried 64 guns and was no second-rate ship. In fact, she was rated as one of England's best when she set sail to take part in what the British admiralty thought would be the complete subjection of the bothersome Yankees. Yet for 130 years the white oak hull lay half under water, after having vainly tried to stem the tide of battle by broadsides of 1,200 pounds each. The white oak became as hard as marble in that long period, and much more difficult to carve, and the New Jersey society had great difficulty in finding wood workers and sawmills which would undertake to fashion the great beams of the decks and hull into chairs, tables and other furniture.

The idea of taking enough wood from the Augusta to furnish a New Jersey room originated with Miss Ellen Matlock of the Ann Whitall chapter of New Jersey. She and Miss Ellen Mecum, for four years state regent of New Jersey, worked hard to make the New Jersey room a success. She found that to get the wood from the ship could cost $400, and immediately set about to get it. Not only did the New Jersey Daughters raise the $400, but they raised $1,320 more and spent every cent of it on their room.

The style adopted for the furniture of the room was of the Jacobian period, as at that time oak was used almost exclusively in England. The chairs have been made some with cane backs and some with backs carved into wooden chains and called "chain backs." One of the chairs is a replica of a chair dated 1869 and exhibited at the treasurer's house at York, England. That replica was one of the first pieces of carving to be done for the room, and was somewhat in the nature of an experiment. However, those earlier pieces have received great praise and commendation from visitors to the room.

Later on the New Jersey Daughters had a deep wainscoating made for the room, paneled and carved, and on one side they had carved the arms of their state. There is a settle and an armchair, a graceful bench, a desk, a massive table, a lectern and an illuminated parchment under glass showing what each gift is and what chapter gave it. The parchment gives a brief history of the wood in addition. The oak bears only the polish of the tools and has a most unusual and dignified appearance.

Paying the President.

The report that President Taft has received his first full month's salary recalls the treasurer of the United States who, in a past administration, attempted to make the monthly payment of the president an occasion of considerable formality, thereby adding to the numberless and needless interruptions to which the chief executive is subjected. This treasurer sought an advance appointment at the White House, which was granted; then took his 11-year-old boy out of school for the solemn occasion, and together they waited in great formality on the president to present to him with an appropriate address his monthly stipend. Pains were taken in the next few weeks to let the treasurer know that the president had entire confidence in the mail service and would be willing thereafter to entrust his draft on the treasury to its custody. The incident is illustrative of the way the pushers and climbers seize every opportunity to get to see the president, and it requires no little skill to sift from the appeals made to him those which are manufactured for purposes of self-exploitation.—Boston Transcript.

Secretary Meyer Likes Form.

Secretary Meyer, who has lived aboard a good deal as a diplomat, belives in a certain amount of form and ceremony in the transaction of governmental business. He has issued a general order to the naval service directing that whenever letters are to be sent to the war department the form "The Honorable" shall be employed in addressing the secretary of war. Thus a communication addressed to that official would read: The Honorable, the Secretary of War. This is taken by the navy people generally as a hint to address communications to the secretary of the navy in the same formal and respectful style.

Gold Hoarded in India.

It was estimated by the London Statist in November, 1892, that in the 33 years ending with March of that year, the amount of gold which had gone to India and been retained, or in other words, hoarded, was no less than £356, 324,000. This was at the rate of £10,750,000 per annum. A 50-year period is now completed and there is no reason to suppose that the Indian hoarding has become less. There are, in fact, some reasons which may be adduced for supposing that the amount of gold secreted has tended to increase.—Wall Street Journal.
